Hollywood

By ED SULLIVAN

Hollywood, Aug. 9.

Glamour

In "Lady of the Tropics," Hedy Lamarr proves beyond any possible doubt that she is the most startling beauty ever to reach the screen. . . . Perhaps there have been women to match the compelling loveliness of Hedy, but you mark me down as one of the doubters. . . . Certainly, there is no girl in Hollywood who can top or even tie The Lamarr.

They tell me, the historians, that Helen of Troy was quite a girl. . . . Others aver that Cleopatra was some shucks as a looker. . . . Mona Lisa's inscrutability has been accepted by many as mysterious beauty. . . . Venus de Milo, with or without arms, had a chassis that beggared comparison. . . . You can have them all, my little chickadees, and I'll give you twelve points and take Hedy.

In my time, I have seen some lookers. . . . Marlene Dietrich ain't hay. . . . Lili Damita had a quality of attractiveness that made you sit up and take notice when she breezed into a room. . . . Dolores Del Rio has a polished sleekness and coloring that arrest attention. . . . The late Marilyn Miller was gorgeous. . . . Garbo, Madeleine Carroll, Merle Oberon and Patricia Morrison have caused disturbances. . . . In the old days, Barbara La Marr made eyes pop. . . . Lillian Lorraine, Evelyn Nesbit and Dolores, of the "Follies," were stunners. . . . They tell me that Lillian Russell had a perfection of face and feature that stopped hansom cab traffic. . . . Take 'em all, brother. . . . I'll take Hedy.

Loretta Young, Anita Louise, Imogene Wilson, Vilma Banky, Carmel Myers and Nita Naldi just about represented the alpha and omega of feminine appeal. . . . Mary Kirk Brown, the youngster who has just hit Page 1 headlines, when she first arrived on Broadway did not have to take a back seat for any of them. . . . Billie Dove was a knockout. . . . Corinne Griffith, Gladys Glad, Jean Harlow, Agnes Ayres, Gwili Andre, Rene de Marco, Yolanda, Janice Jarrett, Betty Lomax, Ethelyn Holt, Mae Murray, the late Olive Thomas, Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart and June Lang would have supporters in any beauty sweepstakes. . . . Aviatrix Ruth Elder was unusually pretty. . . . There are professional models who can match Ann Sheridan oomph for oomph. . . . But Hedy Lamarr would be the winner in any foto finish.

"Lady of the Tropics," coming on top of "Algiers," proves positively that cameras never have been trained on any one so photogenic as Hedy. . . . In one scene, she puts on a hat frontwards, backwards and sideways, while posing in front of a mirror. . . . She looked gorgeous each time. . . . Girls in the audience moaned when she accomplished it, a low moan of anguish. . . . "After I see her on the screen," confided one famous screen beauty, "I leave the theatre without even stopping to look in my mirror. What's the use?"

Director Jack Conway, Writer Ben Hecht and Cameraman George Folsey can take a low bow on "Lady of the Tropics." . . . In every way, this picture was the most unwelcome assignment in Hollywood. . . . You will remember that after she completed "Algiers," Miss Lamarr went into "I Take This Woman," which was shelved after an expenditure of three-quarters of a million dollars. . . . After that happened, every director in town shuddered at the thought of getting the next assignment. . . . Conway got it and did a grand job. . . . Folsey, who had been Joan Crawford's cameraman, did a magnificent job of fotography. . . . Hecht's script, limited to certain definite lines, was just what the studio wanted.

Miss Lamarr, after "Algiers," was condemned with faint praise. . . . Nobody disputed that she was gorgeous, but it was believed that her lack of technique as an actress would wash up her career aborning. . . . The hecklers won Round 2 when "I Take This Woman" was shelved. . . . In this third picture, Hedy wins the last laugh, because she handles her lines and scenes with the assurance of a trouper. . . . Her acting has improved tremendously. . . . I doubt if she'll ever win an Academy Award from Bette Davis, but when you look like that, you don't have to.

The subject of beauty always has been first-rate news. . . . The history of the world has been tied to it. . . . It has spurred men to build skyscrapers, launch boats, write poems. . . . It has turned cravens into heroes. . . . It has inspired great literature, great painting, great music. . . . So Hedy Lamarr, on beauty alone, is an important personage.

In the old days, the minstrels would have gone about the countryside singing about this dark-haired knockout drop. . . . The knights of the Round Table would have engaged in tourneys to win her hand. . . . Sir Walter Scott would have used her as a plaster model for his heroines. . . . Tennyson would have abjured the babbling brook. . . . Marc Antony would have given Cleopatra the go-by. . . . Helen of Troy would have been supplanted as a launcher of ships. . . . Shakespeare would have had a new Juliet for his balcony scene. . . . But this is 1939. . . . Hedy gets only the distinction of a syndicate column, filed from Sunset and Vine.

THIS M-G-M SUMMER!
Isn't it thrilling! One hit after another! The new one is terrific!

Vol. 136, No. 8 — August 19, 1939

THE CHECKER BOARD

FROM the inside looking out the motion picture business would seem to be, and to have been for a spell, in quite a kettle of fish—government anti-trust suits against "the majors", against circuits, federal legislation on trade practices, state legislation concerning "major-controlled" theatres and circuits, federal attack on Hollywood's talent pool, and an assortment of projected new taxations, including municipal revenue notions. On top of that are labour complications of varying degrees of significance and malodorousness—always the way from the interior issues in the American Federation of Labor on jurisdiction to the broader issue of A. F. of L. vs. C.I.O., and on down to the matter of "payoffs" and "fixes." Then, in a manner much more industrious than expedite, there has been a striving at an internal trade practice program, sometimes called a "Code," aimed perhaps both at improving trade relations and at something intended to placate the forces of government policy made articulate in the anti-trust suit against the majors.

All of this adds up to a dither of concern about who gets and does what to whom, when and how.

For a long time now this has been the special occupation and preoccupation of the picture business, all detracting devastatingly from attention to making pictures and arranging to get the customers to come to the box office and buy them.

THE Congress has quit and gone home, to stay until January unless a war crisis arises to require a special session. The Neely bill has thus again gone into hibernation on the shelf after passing the Senate.

The status of the basic anti-trust suit is full of motions, addressed at delays, until when?

Possibly the tactics of delay might postpone action past a national election which might bring in with it a change of administration and attitude in Washington.

Possibly, too, delay might enable various rearrangements in trade practices and interior relations calculated to achieve consideration as moves of what might be called "appeasement".

What is to be done about it all is quite as uncertain as in the whole national business and industrial scene, with for the motion picture some special complications of its very own. At least it can be observed that the motion picture has grown up to the point where it can have as many problems as any of them.

To some observers it seems that an early appeasement of the government's attitude of belligerency concerning picture affairs is rendered the more improbable on an assumption that because the motion picture is such good publicity material it is to be made, is being made, an example and demonstration of the general administration policy.

CERTAIN it is that anti-trust suits have for weeks, months, been arriving with the regularity of the bombardments of "old One-O'clock von Kluck" on the western front. It is not to be assumed that the timing is accidental.

It might seem, too, that there has been a definite timing of the arrival in Hollywood this week of Mr. Charles H. Carr, special assistant attorney general, bearing letters from Mr. Frank Murphy, United States attorney general, giving blanket authority to inquire into allegations of labour racketeering and questioned transactions pertaining to income taxes.

If it is consent decrees that Washington wants, the moves in progress might be considered in the nature of persuasion.

The method is not new. Long, long ago in the days of Woodrow Wilson it was being done. "I remember," remarked Mr. Colvin Brown, the other day, "when the famous Elgin Butter Board, charged with price fixing, almost immediately took a consent decree when the subject of indictments came into the conference." Mr. Brown was there at the time, secretary of the board.

THE general situation also acquired some interesting colour with the arrival of the August 12th issue of the Saturday Evening Post with its leading article devoted to "Trust Buster—The Folklore of Thurman Arnold", a piece done by Mr. Joseph Alsop and Mr. Robert Kintner, a Washington writing team.

The Alsop-Kintner essay was something between a New Yorker profile personal analysis and a political disquisition on the person and policies of Mr. Arnold, who is presented as more than mildly picturesque of manner and thought. The title, of course, derives from Mr. Arnold's own opus, entitled "The Folklore of Capitalism".

Between what Mr. Arnold has said in his book, his publicity statements, and what is said of, and maybe for, him by Alsop and Kintner, it is to be judged that it is his viewpoint that the law is something that merely denotes a trend of development rather than a code of procedure.

Just now it seems to be the Arnold notion that he will experiment in some extensive application of the long-existing statutes pertaining to monopoly. It is pointed out that in the days of Theodore I, when the anti-trust law was new, it was administered by about five lawyers, while most recently Mr. Arnold has contrived to get the staff, grown to eighteen, increased to an army of three hundred.

One would gather from the reports that no one can expect to do much about Mr. Arnold—Elk, eccentric, iconoclast, ex-mayor of Laramie (Wyoming), lecturer, law professor, and primarily a rough-hewn reformer—just as indignant as Westbrook Pegler but not so sore about it.

Mr. Arnold, one will remember, has had a fling at the cost of fertilizers, the price of Chicago milk, and besides the motion picture industry has the rest of American business on his mind, including most urgently the building trades.

THE Saturday Evening Post article caused some twittering in Washington and reporters went to see Mr. Murphy about it, apparently expecting maybe he'd spank. They got "no comment", the current stereotype. Meanwhile, what Mr. Murphy does seems to have a certain relation to what Mr. Arnold has set in motion.

Despite the apparent confusion of the picture, it can

Decision

The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor Tuesday night ordered the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees to withdraw the charter granted to the American Federation of Actors, recognized the jurisdiction of Associated Actors and Artistes of America over actors and the legal right of the AAAA to revoke the charter of the AFA. The decision was sharply critical of the organizational structure of the Associated Actors and the expulsion of the AFA and called upon the Associated Actors to revoke the charter granted to the American Guild of Variety Artists. It also called upon the Associated Actors to reinstate Sophie Tucker, president, and Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary, and other officers of the AFA. In addition the council suggested that a board of 10, chosen from both sides, govern the AFA for 90 days, after which time an election should be held. Both sides professed satisfaction with the decision.

Stage and Screen

The long heralded plan by which Hollywood backing would be returned to Broadway stage productions, from which it has been absent since 1936, is again being made the subject of meetings held by representatives of motion picture interests and the Dramatists' Guild.

With a plan drawn up and ready to be put into work, details such as the initial payment to be made to the playwright by the film company backer are currently under discussion by J. Robert Rubin, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vice-president; Jake Wilk, Warner Brothers' story editor; Sidney Fleisher, Guild attorney, and Luise Sillcox, executive secretary of the Guild.

THE CHECKER BOARD

be perceived that there is a basic situation, the issues between policies of American industry, including pictures, and the concept of economy held by the New Deal. The labor issues, C.I.O. vs. A. F. of L., may parallel, but they are incidental rather than integral.

Charges about labour rackets and inquiries about income taxes are not so much causes as instruments of causes.

All or nothing of all this has anything much to do with what the customers are interested in—entertainment. The customers—theatres and public—want pictures.

More Suits

This week's crop of anti-trust suits attacking the majors and various circuits were leveled against Crescent Amusement Company and the distributors in the south, in one action by the Government and in another by independents, and against Stanley-Warner Circuit and the majors in Pennsylvania.

Elsewhere in the courts, Columbia Pictures, in the New York anti-trust suit of the Government's, entered full denials in two separate defenses, calling the company an "independent," not a major.

From Washington came word that the Administration's Temporary National Economic Committee, investigating "big business" these past several months, will not, as originally expected, touch the motion picture. (See page 18.)

Charles B. Cochran, Oklahoma City attorney for Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, Loew's-MGM, RKO and Warner-Vitagraph, Wednesday filed a 62-page memorandum in U. S. District Court in support of their plea for a more definite statement of charges in the Government anti-trust suit against the Griffith circuit and the majors.

Edgar S. Vaught, district judge, will rule on the matter in late September.

Broadcasters' Counsel

The copyright committee of the National Association of Broadcasters this week appointed Sidney M. Kaye of the law office of Rosenberg, Goldmark and Colin, as special counsel to complete a draft of final plans for the development of new sources of music independent of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Last week Neville Miller, president of the NAB, announced that a general meeting of the entire radio industry will be held in Chicago on September 15th to determine what might be done to develop other and less expensive sources of musical material. Mr. Miller said that $4,000,000 a year, paid by broadcasters, is "too stiff" a price to pay ASCAP for its music rights.

Ballyhoo

The new season, exploitation-wise, is starting with extensive plans.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for its "Wizard of Oz," Universal for "The Under-Pup," Twentieth Century-Fox for "Hollywood Cavalcade," Paramount for "The Star Maker," and Walter Wanger for his "Eternally Yours," all have large plans, ranging from an $11 a seat opening to a hunt for "deserving orphans."

An account of the plans is on page 42.

Federal Investigation

The Federal Government is investigating the payment by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, of $100,000 to William Bioff, international officer of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, during the 1937 studio labor troubles; the personal income taxes of Mr. Schenck; and the merger, also involving income taxes, of Fox Film Corporation and Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation. Charles H. Carr, special assistant attorney general, arrived in Los Angeles Monday with two letters of authorization from Attorney General Frank Murphy. The evidence gathered by Mr. Carr will be presented to a federal grand jury in mid-September.

Mr. Schenck, who is also a vice-president of Twentieth Century-Fox, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association and head of the producers' labor negotiating committee, said in New York last week that his loan to Mr. Bioff, who has resigned from the IATSE office, had been repaid.

Meanwhile, on the coast, the five year pact between the producers and the IATSE, agreed upon last week despite opposition of the CIO's United Studio Technicians Guild, was signed Saturday, after the IATSE had threatened a strike.

France Drops Restriction

The French Government has dropped its limitations on the importation of foreign films dubbed in French, so far as the product of those countries which admit French films without numerical or monetary restriction, such as the U.S., are concerned.

Participating in the International Film Festival to be held at Cannes September 1st will be 12 American films, of which eight have already been chosen.

An account of these events is on page 30.

The New Almanac

The 1939-40 International Motion Picture Almanac, a Quigley Publication, edited by Terry Ramsaye, came off the presses this week. This edition has 1,196 pages and contains the biographical records of more than 11,500 individuals in some 918,000 words.

Disappointed

Now that the British Home Office Advisory Committee has ruled, after a year, that there shall be no change in the situation regarding the socalled "non-flammable" film, that there is no call for special safety regulations and no need for censorship of non-theatrical pictures, exhibitors in England must seek a new method of tackling that perennial problem of competition. Furthermore, the Committee did not even express an opinion whether the 1909 Act applies to "non-flam" film.

"ILLEGAL" SAYS ARNOLD AS HE DENOUNCES CODE

BULLETIN—The trade practise code proposed by the majors and completed after months of laborous negotiation was declared illegal by the Department of Justice with a public statement issued in Washington Thursday morning. The release included a letter from Thurman Arnold, addressed to the code conferees, in which he declared the document based on an unlawful structure and reiterating his insistence on divorcement of production and distribution from exhibition.

The answer to that question, "Code, code, who has the code?" was found this week in the large, dark-furnitured, American flag-bedecked office of Thurman Wesley Arnold, United States assistant attorney general, in the new building housing the Department of Justice at Pennsylvania and Constitution Avenues in Washington. Mr. Arnold was given a peek at the code, but not the trade outside of its formulators.

Mr. Assistant Attorney General—who is prosecuting the many anti-trust suits against the majors—had the code over the weekend. It had been brought to him by lawyers of five of the large companies—Columbia, United Artists and Universal excepted. The drafting committee of sales managers and their counsel had believed—or hoped—that the document, the fifth one to be written—was the final one; they had been working on it for a year and their companies had been thinking about it for several years.

Although not necessarily disclosed to the assistant attorney general, the majors' representatives had decided that Mr. Arnold would have a "reasonable length of time" to voice opinion of the contents and, none received, it then would be presented officially and formally to the industry at large.

Throughout all of their last conversations with exhibitors, the majors had stated with definiteness that they could make no further changes in the trade practices part but that they would alter the arbitration provisions. Identity of the Department of Justice's suggestions, of course, was not divulged by either side.

Faced with somewhat of a dilemma, the majors' code committee walked into the Hotel Astor at 11:00, Wednesday morning, to talk over the new state-of-the-nation codewise, continuing until 3:30 in the afternoon. "No statement today, and none is likely tomorrow" was the report.

Release of the code had been expected—again—Wednesday afternoon. The new situation precluded that release, and there were some who speculated what final effect the Department's suggestions might have on delay of actual enactment, the speculators weighing whether the majors would accede to the Government's changes.

One executive pointed up pessimistically to the continuous "Federal harassment of the industry" which the code formulators have been facing, the refusal of the Government to "lend an ear" in the formulation, rejection of the code in its entirety by Allied States and growing lack of enthusiasm for the code in other exhibitor quarters, including those embracing large circuit operators.

With it all, the majors still have to work out the how and when and where the code will be administered and its arbitration system effected.

A code acceptable to the U. S., which could be incorporated into a consent decree, would "clean the slate", said Allied States this week. See page 25.

Milton C. Moore on Wednesday led exhibitors of four southern states in a plea to distributors for relief from trade practices through the code, reporting that exhibitors in the south are questioning the good faith of the distributors. See page 24.

Washing the Union Issue At Atlantic City Session

THE mermaids were wondering what the land lubbers were saying last weekend in the battle of the union alphabet that spilled out from the deliberations of the executive council of William Green's American Federation of Labor in the Ritz Carlton hotel, across the boardwalk and over the beach.

It was all a jurisdictional tussle within the AFL, following the extension of activity of the IATSE projectionists and stagehands union into other Green pastures by taking over the American Federation of Actors, fulfilling a pronouncement of policy made a year ago by George E. Browne, president of the IATSE.

In from Hollywood rode a delegation demanding that the Labor Federation uphold the 11-unioned Associated Artists and Artistes of America, which it did by ordering the IATSE to withdraw the charter it had granted the AFA, the while calling upon the Four A's to reinstate the AFA (story on page 14).

AFL HALTS INVASION OF ACTORS' FIELD BY GEORGE BROWNE'S IATSE

AFL Council Orders Alliance to Withdraw Charter Given AFA; Both 4-A's and AFA Call Decision "Victory"

BULLETIN

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, told the "Four A's" actors' union late Wednesday that all of the AFL decisions and recommendations in the fight with the IATSE over jurisdiction of actors must be accepted in full or not at all.

The "Four A's" replied that the decisions or recommendations could not be accepted in full, and returned a committee to Atlantic City Thursday to confer with the AFL mediation committee in a last-minute effort to prevent a strike by the actors.

Among the rejected recommendations are: Reinstatement of Ralph Whitehead as executive secretary of the AFA; reinstatement of the AFA charter; cancellation of the charter of the American Guild of Variety Artists.

Mr. Whitehead said his union "must take all or nothing."

George E. Browne's intention of unionizing all crafts and professions in the motion picture business under his International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators, has received a jolting setback, at least in so far as actors are concerned, at the hands of the American Federation of Labor.

Investigation at Coast

Even as the special committee of the American Federation of Labor was meeting over the weekend at Atlantic City to determine whether the IATSE should or could have jurisdiction over actors, which jurisdiction was opposed by the Associated Actors and Artistes of America with Hollywood actor support, the United States Government was moving in on the Hollywood labor situation, sending Charles H. Carr, a special agent of the Department of Justice, to Los Angeles to investigate film labor, principally one William Bioff, former IATSE official, who received $100,000 from Hollywood producers during the 1937 studio labor trouble. (See page 16.)

George Browne, in his fight with the "Four A's" over jurisdiction over actors, publicly at least was not a militant, bowing to the decision of the AFL committee. No one was more conscious than Mr. Browne of the publicity-getting capacity of Hollywood stars, which was demonstrated last week by their mass flight to Atlantic City to protest against the IATSE's "invasion" of their field.

On Tuesday night, in Atlantic City, the executive council of the Labor Federation announced a "compromise decision," which was, in effect, favorable to the Four A's, for it instructed the IATSE to withdraw the omnivorous charter it had granted to the American Federation of Actors, which formerly belonged to the Four A's.

The granting of this charter by Mr. Browne to the AFA had precipitated the fight from the AAAA, which had protested to the executive council. The council mulled it over, then appointed a three-man mediating committee, which met with both sides, and on Monday submitted recommendations. The council considered these on Tuesday, and that evening decided.

'FRONT OFFICE' UNION TO VOTE ON IATSE TIEUP

Members of the Theatrical Managers, Agents, and Treasurers Union will receive ballots by mail, to indicate thereupon whether they desire to affiliate with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, it was decided after a closed meeting of several of the members and the officers in New York over the weekend.

The IATSE is represented to be wishing to issue the unaffiliated union a charter. The IATSE lacks a strong "front office" employees' unit. The film employees' division of the TMAT favors the IATSE charter. However, they have been opposed by some of the TMAT legitimate theatre employees, and by most of the "press agent" members.

Harry Brandt's independent theatre owners' association of New York was declared "unfair" by the TMAT.

Followed Plan Last Year

Mr. Browne's grant of a charter to the AFA was in line with his plans, announced in June of last year, to have every worker in the entertainment industry an IATSE worker. The charter not only granted the AFA jurisdiction over vaudeville and night club performers, but over performers everywhere. It was immediately regarded as an invasion of the domain of the various unions which comprise the AAAA.

Aside from its broadness, the charter was resented because it was given to a union expelled from the Four A's for mismanagement of its actor members. Ralph Whitehead, AFA executive secretary, Sophie Tucker, its president, and other officers, were given a brief AAAA trial; and the charter revocation followed, immediately succeeded by the chartering of Guild of Variety Artists.

The AFL council decision was regarded favorable to the Four A's because it granted most of their demands: that the Four A's sole jurisdiction among performers be recognized; that the IATSE withdraw its charter to the AFA; that the council recognize the right of the Four A's to expel the AFA.

The decision also called upon the Four A's to reinstate the AFA, and all of its officers; to withdraw the charter granted to the AGVA; suggested that the AFA be governed by a representative 10-man board; asked the AFA to withdraw from the IATSE and to discontinue litigation; and asked that all parties be conciliatory.

The leaders of the AAAA on Wednesday professed satisfaction, but said their final decision awaited a meeting that day of the AAAA international board. Inclusion of Ralph Whitehead in the last of officers to be reinstated was openly resented.

It was also said that the AAAA charter to its variety artists guild would not be withdrawn.

"Delighted"

AFA officers, Mr. Whitehead and Miss Tucker, said that they were "delighted with the settlement arranged by the committee. It is as fair as could be worked out under the pressure of circumstances. We are going back to the job with redoubled energy to win the election. We feel that Whitehead and the AFA have been cleared of all charges by the decision."

The executive council ruling suggested that the 10-man board to govern the AFA for 90 days preceding election of new officers should be composed of two members of the federation, three to be designated by the A. F. of L., and one each from Actors' Equity, Chorus Equity, American Federation of Radio Artists, Screen Actors' Guild, and the Four A board.

The council ruling, besides handing down "suggestions" and "instructions" to the warring factions, did term the expulsion of the AFA by the Four A's "too severe."

The council observed that the structure of the AAAA apparently influenced the type of action it took towards the AFA. Said the council decision:

"A more moderate form (of settlement) was impossible because of the character and relations of the organizations making up the Four-A, which, in our judgment, is more in the nature of a federation of international unions rather than an organic structure of local unions."

Additionally, the council asked for reconsideration of plans to avoid dual, triple, and quadruple dues payments often obtaining in the Four A's. The policy of separate organizations, it remarked, "does not tend towards unity in organization nor security for the individual actor."

Report Delayed

The AFL subcommittee, composed of Matthew Woll, John Coefield and Thomas A. Rickert, delivered a report on Monday afternoon.

It was reported, however, that the Woll committee had completed its recommendations on that day and that the delay in disclosing the recommendations was a maneuver designed to show the Four A's that the council did not like the show of publicity on the arrival of figures of the Screen Actors' Guild at the hotel last Thursday.

One council member is reported to have said that the delay in disclosing what the subcommittee had recommended was to "show these actors that they can't put a gun up to the executive council, and tell us what to do, and when to do it."

On Monday, spokesmen for the Four A's reiterated their demands, and declared that any settlement falling short of fulfillment of these would be rejected.

Browne at Council Meetings

George E. Browne, president of the IATSE, was at the meetings of the council, as a council member.

William Green, asked if "personalities" were involved in the fight, did not deny it. He was reported to have been asked, at a press conference, whether he did not think it improper to be sitting in judgment, at the council head, in view of his reported friendship for Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the AFA, and Sophie Tucker, its president. Mr. Green denied that he thought his position improper.

FOLLOWS PROTRACTED WRANGLING

On Monday and Tuesday, the Four A's committee conferring with the AFL council subcommittee was composed of Edward Arnold, actor; Frank Gillmore, president of the Four A's; Paul Turner and Henry Jaffe, Four A's attorneys. The numerous stage and screen stars who had accompanied the Four's delegation from Hollywood and New York last Thursday had departed.

While terms of a settlement which would involve surrender by the IATSE of its newly acquired AFA union, were being rumored, the chief point of argument was said to concern the position of Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the AFA.

Mr. Whitehead's stand was still supported by Miss Tucker and Harry Richman of the council of the Actors' Federation. Said Mr. Richman:

"We're not going to let Whitehead be made to walk the plank. If we did, it would be like pleading guilty ourselves."

Also on Monday Miss Tucker issued a statement denying that Mr. Whitehead would resign. She said stories to that effect "apparently were started by the Four A's."

Miss Tucker has been suspended by three Four A's unions, the American Federation of Radio Artists, the Actors Equity, and the Screen Actors Guild.

Referendum Proposed

Suggested as a solution Monday was a referendum of AFA members in good standing as of February, 1939, when the Four A's began investigating it. The IATSE was reported back of such a vote. The vote would be on choice of affiliation. The Four A's was reported against a referendum because it would be an admission that it did not have sole jurisdiction over all performers.

IATSE Locals Meet

Representatives of fifty-five local branches in New York State of the IATSE met on Monday in New York City's Hotel Commodore, and unanimously approved George Browne's issuance of a charter from the IATSE to the Actors' Federation.

Richard Walsh, fourth vice-president of the IATSE, drew laughter from the delegates when he told of the insistence by the Four A's that the AFL council give a decision within 24 hours. He recalled that the IATSE was still awaiting a decision from a committee of the AFL appointed 40 years ago. The members are now dead.

Brennan Criticizes Thomson

James Brennan, sixth vice-president of the IATSE, who presided, attacked Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors Guild and a vice-president of the Four A's, for opposition to a closed IATSE shop on the coast, and charged that the opposition to the IATSE on the coast, from the CIO's United Studio Technicians Guild, was financed by Harry Bridges, suspected of Communism, and Robert Montgomery, a former president of, and still active in, the Guild. He also declared that Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the AFA, had been found guilty by the Four A's on "trumped up" charges, and that he had been told he was marked for extinction as an actors' representative.

The AFA membership has been reported divided on the affiliation with the IATSE. Its insurgents, known as "The Ferrets," leaders of whom provided evidence to the Four A's at the time of the investigation into the Whitehead regime, were reported last week to be attempting to round up opposition to the charter from the IATSE.

IATSE ORGANIZING SUMMER THEATRES

The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees will immediately attempt to organize all summer stock houses, James J. Brennan, vice-president of the organization, told the annual convention of 55 New York State locals at the Hotel Commodore, in New York City, on Monday. Producers of such stock shows who defy the union, will be compelled to hire three extra stagehands, at $100 weekly, when and if their shows open in New York City, Mr. Brennan said.

Schenck Laughs at Strike Talk

In New York last week, just before returning to the coast for conferences on the coast union situation, Joseph M. Schenck illuminated the talk of a strike by the Guild on the coast, in support of the Four A's against the IATSE—by saying that it was impossible. He called the strike talk "bunk," because the ten-year contracts with the Guild, not expiring until 1947, outlaw strikes, and because, since the Guild is a corporation, not a "union," the producers could sue for breach of contract.

The Guild replied that it was organized as a non-profit organization, making its members, under California law, not liable to such suits.

On Saturday Eddie Cantor, a former AFA president, had wired Mr. Green from Hollywood to "hurry" his decision, and added that Mr. Whitehead was "hiding behind the skirts of Sophie Tucker."

The meeting had begun on Thursday afternoon, on the third floor of the Ritz Carleton, in Atlantic City.

On Wednesday night, the Hollywood delegation of Guild stars and leaders arrived in New York for conferences at the Hotel Roosevelt with New York Four A's leaders. On Thursday they planed to Atlantic City, and stopped at the Traymore hotel. In the delegation were Fredric March, Peggy Wood, Jean Muir, Tallulah Bankhead, Jascha Heifetz, Kenneth Thomson, Ralph Morgan, Edward Arnold, Paul Turner, Leo Fischer, Miriam Hopkins, Frank Gillmore, Henry Jaffe, Justic Sheffield, Larry Steers, Wayne Morris, and others.

Sessions Bring No Decisions

Afternoon and night sessions of the council brought no decision and the committee was named. The press was not allowed in the council room.

Mr. Gillmore, president of the AAAA, repeated his earlier public arguments, that the IATSE issuance of a charter to the Actors' Federation was a "barefaced raid" on the Four A's jurisdiction.

Mr. Thomson traced the history of the Four A's charter, and declared that the jurisdiction it granted was unquestionable.

Mr. Tibbett, president of the AGMA, declared that the IATSE action was a "threat to democracy" in labor, and would damage the AFL prestige.

Mr. Morgan asked for answers to two questions: Whether the council believed the Four A's was right in revoking the AFA charter, and whether they believed that Mr. Browne had no right to issue a new charter to the AFA.

The arguments of these were met by those of Miss Tucker, Mr. Richman, Mr. Whitehead. and the IATSE vice-presidents, Harland Holmden, J. J. Brennan, and W. P. Raoul.

In Hollywood this week, it was wondered what the attitude of the actors would be towards a possible strike call issued by the IATSE and AFL unions of Los Angeles, in a not entirely separated matter: the battle between the IATSE and the Technicians Guild of the CIO.

J. W. Buzzell, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, was in Atlantic City conferring with Mr. Browne on a possible calling out of studio workers to protest the CIO "invasion."

The Four A's last week issued an open letter to all its members, attacking the IATSE leadership and especially William Bioff, chief figure in the payment of $100,000 by Joseph M. Schenck to him in 1937, and appealing to the IATSE membership that separate identities of the two organizations be preserved.

National Decency Legion Classifies 20 Pictures

Of 20 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the past two weeks 10 were approved for general patronage, eight were listed as unobjectionable for adults and two were cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Beau Geste," "Blondie Takes a Vacation," "Colorado Sunset," "Desperate Trails," "The Man from Sundown," "Night Work," "Our Leading Citizen," "Should Husbands Work?" "Stanley and Livingstone," "Wizard of Oz." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Behind Prison Bars," "Hidden Power," "Hotel for Women," "Jamaica Inn," "Lady of the Tropics," "Miracles for Sale," "The Old Maid," "Parents on Trial." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "In Name Only," "Just Like a Woman."

No Change in "Citizen"

Paramount will make no changes in scenes of "Our Leading Citizen" in response to demands by Edward Kern of "Film Audiences for Democracy," who charges certain sequences are "anti-labor."

Paramount officials, while not officially recognizing Kern's charges to the extent of issuing a formal reply, disclosed privately that they have received indorsements and high praise of the film from several ranking labor officials and from a committee of the North Dakota State Federation of Labor, which has requested Paramount to screen the picture for its state convention in Fargo, September 3rd.

U. S. PROBE FURTHER INVOLVES THE LABOR SITUATION IN HOLLYWOOD

Special Assistant Attorney Begins Investigation in Los Angeles; Payment to Bioff Is a Subject of Study

The motion picture labor situation in Hollywood this week became even more complex. The eastern labor situation, with the "Four A's" actors' union and the IATSE embroiled in a fight over jurisdiction of actors in unionism, was another matter. (See page 14.)

To the AFL conflict with the CIO in Hollywood over studio craft control, to the myriad signings of pacts and warnings of studio strikes, and petitions of labor to the National Labor Relations Board—to all these things, and many others, there was this week added an investigation by the United States Government into the Hollywood labor situation, including payments to labor leaders. At the same time the probe is to take in a Federal Grand Jury investigation by the Department of Justice into income taxes of production heads and into the formation of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation.

Special U. S. Attorney Active

Charles H. Carr, special United States assistant attorney general, arrived in Los Angeles on Monday, with two letters of authority from his superior, Attorney General Frank Murphy, in Washington. He filed the letters with the clerk of the local federal court.

The first of them reads, in part:

"You are authorized to assist in the investigation and prosecution of alleged violations of Section 145, Revenue Acts of 1932, 1934, and 1936, and Section 37 of the Criminal Conspiracy Code, and such other sections that may have been violated in the cases of Joseph M. Schenck, Joseph H. Moscowitz, William Bioff, Arthur W. Stebbins, William Goetz, Darryl F. Zanuck, William B. Dover, Bertram Nayfack, and Harry Kadis, former Internal Revenue agent, and any and all persons who may have been related in same or related transactions."

The second reads in part:

"The Department (of Justice) is informed that the IATSE and its members, agents, and employees; Local Unit No. 37 of the IATSE, and its members, agents, and employees; George E. Browne, William Bioff, Motion Picture Producers, Inc., Loew's, Inc., Irving Trust Company of New York as trustee in the bankruptcy of RKO, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, United Artists Corporation, the officers, agents, and employees of said mentioned corporations, and other corporations, companies, associations, and persons unknown to the Department have violated in the Southern District of California, and in other judicial districts Sections One and Two of the Sherman Anti-trust Act (Sections One and Two of Title 15, United States Code) and Section Six of the Clayton Act (Section 17 of Title 15, United States Code), by contracting, combining, monopolizing, and conspiring to do so in restraint of trade; have obtained, and attempted to obtain by force, violence, or coercion the payment of moneys or other valuable considerations in violation of the so-called Anti-Racketeering Act of June 18th, 1934 (Section 421-425, inclusive, Title

Schenck Belittles Threat to Strike; Says Bioff $100,000 Was Repaid

Characterizing the threatened strike of the Screen Actors Guild as the result of the jurisdictional battle waged this week between the Associated Actors and Artistes of America and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees as "bunk", Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox and president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, said that the guild and the producers have a 10-year contract which does not terminate until 1947 and which contains a no-strike clause. Mr. Schenck made the assertion at a press conference at the Waldorf Towers in New York.

"The guild is a corporation," Mr. Schenck said, "and can be sued. Likewise, each individual member of the guild can be sued for violation of contract. We can enjoin them from working anywhere." After calling the proposed walkout "bunk", Mr. Schenck termed the actors' situation as "much ado about nothing".

Mr. Schenck said he didn't understand why the IATSE charter was given to the "Tucker outfit" (American Federation of Actors) when a charter previously had been given to the guild.

About the IATSE Mr. Schenck said that the producers and the union had come to a tentative agreement on a five-year pact but that the actual signing had not been accomplished. He said the Alliance wanted a closed shop but "if we gave them a closed shop we couldn't live up to our contract with the Screen Actors Guild". Mr. Schenck said the stagehands union as a collective bargaining group and not a corporation could strike at any time, providing they give 10 days' notice. The new five-year pact, he said, does not include salaries, which will be determined each year.

Questioned concerning the $100,000 reported to have been paid William Bioff, former official of the stagehands union, Mr. Schenck said that the money had been paid but that it had been returned. He said he was completely unaware of a purported police record which is said to have listed Bioff as a public enemy in 1932, but that he "would negotiate with any authorized representative of the union, Bioff included".

"Anything can happen," was Mr. Schenck's answer to a query as to whether he thought the Congress for Industrial Organization would get a foothold in Hollywood in its current attempt to invade the film capital.

Mr. Schenck said he was a man who sought no publicity but couldn't seem to avoid it and in a rather wearied tone said he was charged with doing all the disagreeable work as president of the Producers Association.

He said that he was not familiar with the terms of the proposed trade practice program, that Sidney R. Kent, president, was representing the company in the negotiations. Concerning the government's equity suit, he was of the opinion that if the government would stop suing the picture business the industry would be a lot better off. "There can be no monopoly," he said, "for if a producer has a good picture he will always find an outlet for that picture."

Mr. Schenck said that those in the industry always were willing to adjust grievances in regard to clearance without resort to government but that of late the small exhibitor "feels that by running to the government constantly they can force their terms on the producer".

The Twentieth Century-Fox chairman left New York for Hollywood last Friday. His visit east was for the purpose of reporting to President Roosevelt on the progress of the "March of Dimes" campaign of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, of which he is vice-chairman. On Thursday he lunched with the President at Hyde Park, but, since it was a social meeting, had not discussed business. "I didn't have to," he said. "I previously had told the President what I thought of government interference with business."

Incidentally, he said, Twentieth Century-Fox would spend $25,000,000 this year on production.

WEST COAST LABOR PROBE WIDENS

18, U.S.C.), and having conspired to do so in violation of the conspiracy code."

The Bioff Episode

The investigation into the payment to Mr. Bioff appeared the most important of the federal quests this week. This payment, which aroused much controversy when it became known in 1938, has a history briefly as follows:

In June, of 1937, Mr. Bioff was reported to have accepted the $100,000 as a loan from Joseph Schenck. Mr. Bioff had been placed in charge of the Hollywood IATSE unions, as a personal representative of George Browne, IATSE president.

Mr. Schenck said last week in New York that the loan since had been paid back.

Mr. Bioff resigned from his Hollywood IATSE post on Sept. 10, 1938.

The transaction in recent months has been raked over by critics of the IATSE international leadership, notably by members of the dissident Technicians Union, Local 37, with which the IATSE international officers had a court battle.

The investigation into the Fox merger is said to involve about $4,000,000 to $6,000,00 in income tax liabilities. The merger was effected from 1933 to 1935.

The third investigation pertains to income taxes of Hollywood executives.

The federal grand jury sits about September 13. Whatever evidence Mr. Carr has will be presented then. He is to interview everybody and all companies named in the authorization given him by Mr. Murphy.

Mr. Carr initiated action almost immediately on his arrival Monday. He questioned Herbert Sorrell, business representative of the Motion Picture Painters Local 644, on Alliance activities during 1937. Mr. Sorrell is a chief disputant with the IATSE, in its battle against the CIO—United Studio Technicians.

A Round to CIO Affiliate

By the Federal Government investigation into the IATSE Hollywood leadership during its critical year, 1937, the Guild appears to have won somewhat of a victory, despite its apparent setback last week when the IATSE signed a five year contract with the producers, over the USTG protest that the National Labor Relations Board should hold its elections before the signing of such an agreement, to determine who is the proper bargaining agent for Hollywood crafts workers.

The contract was signed under threat of a strike by the IATSE coast unions. This threat was said to have been made in an effort to forestall the invasion of their membership by the growing Technicians' Guild, and to impress the membership with the bargaining ability of the IATSE leadership.

The pact calls for a closed shop, with wage scales and conditions now being ironed out.

The Technicians have filed an application with the NLRB for certification as bargaining agent for Hollywood studio crafts workers; wired to the attorney general for an investigation into the IATSE, flooded the coast newspapers with publicity; petitioned the producers not to sign a new contract with the IATSE till the NLRB held elections; and even picketed the Fox West Coast theatres.

Labor Council Protests

These tactics caused the unions comprising the Los Angeles Central Labor Council to send its executive secretary, J. W. Buzzell, to Atlantic City with resolutions asking delegates to prepare for a strike call against the Technicians' Guild.

Last week, John Gatelee, international representative of the IATSE, attacked the Labor Board for delaying pact negotiations. He charged that, without interference by the board, the IATSE would have obtained a pact last March, and said that the board had cost the IATSE members about $500,000 since March 15th.

While this was taking place, the fight between the producers and the Screen Writers Guild entered a new phase. The producers answered the complaint of the Labor Board, saying they were willing at any time to bargain with the Guild; and declared the efforts to have the board prosecute them are the result of the Guild's efforts to drive them into a short term agreement, which they do not want.

They moved for dismissal of the complaint, charged that the Guild representatives always had walked out of bargaining conferences, asserted that the board had no jurisdiction because the motion picture industry is not interstate commerce, and because writers were not "employees" in the sense of the Wagner Act.

Ten studio executives had been summoned to attend this Thursday's hearing before the NLB. They are Jack Warner, Darryl Zanuck, Sol Wurtzel, David O. Selznick, Samuel Briskin, Walter McEwen, Bernard Hyman, E. J. Mannix, William Koenig and B. B. Kahane.

The guild voted Tuesday night to retain its stand for an 80 per cent closed shop, ownership of material written during layoffs, and short term contracts.

To be heard in Hollywood superior court on Monday are contempt charges against J. W. Buzzell, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, John Gatelee, and five IATSE officers. The action arises out of charges of violation of a court order restraining the defendants from breaking up Local 37 by revoking its charter and issuing charters to five substitute locals.

Republic on Monday signed a pact with the Screen Directors Guild, the terms of which are essentially same as those prevailing in other studios, where this Guild won its fight last year by threatening a strike.

Nat Saunders, of The Film Alliance of the United States, is on a tour of key cities, arranging distribution contracts.

STATISTICS SHOW HOLLYWOOD WAGES

Remembering, perhaps, that figures never lie, the California State Department of Employment, in a recent statistical report, declared that motion picture employees received more than twice as much pay for their chores as the employees of other industries.

The conclusion is reached as follows: The payroll of the industry at its peak, said the report, totaled $144,663,000, which approximated 7.2 per cent of the state total for all industries. The peak employment figure, 44,275 persons, approximated 3.3 per cent of the total number of persons employed in California industries.

Therefore, concluded the report, since 3.3 per cent is less than half of 7.2 per cent, the average film employee must be getting more than twice as much as the average employee in other industries.

Exhibitor Groups To Meet; Oppose Higher Rentals

The Southeastern Theatre Owners Association, last week, unanimously approved a resolution opposing an increase in film rentals, while news of other exhibitor groups includes a meeting of the West Virginia Independent Theatres Owners and of the West Virginia Managers's Association, set for the end of September and the last of this month, respectively; a meeting of New Jersey Allied at the beginning of September, and tentatively set meetings of Wisconsin and of Oklahoma Allied in September, and of Michigan Allied in October.

The Southeastern Theatre Owners resolution was introduced before the Association's conference of approximately 75 members by Mitchell Wolfson of Miami. In explaining the resolution, Mr. Wolfson said: "We are opposed to the principle of distributors and producers adding 20 per cent to the cost of the film rentals to make up the 20 per cent elimination of pictures."

The resolution also voiced objection to the forced sale of short subjects.

M. C. Moore, president of the Association, protested increased film rentals by citing the Government reports of profits made by producers. See page 24.

The West Virginia Independent Theatre Owners, organized last September, will meet in Clarksburg September 26th, under the leadership of R. J. Hiele, president.

The fifth annual convention of the West Virginia Managers' Association will be held August 30th and 31st at the Greenbriar Hotel, at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia. J. C. Shanklin is chairman of the Association's convention arrangements.

E. Thornton Kelly, executive secretary of New York Allied, who is handling arrangements for the New Jersey Allied convention scheduled for the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Atlantic City September 6th to 8th, expects more than 400 exhibitors and distributor representatives at the meeting.

September 26th and 27th have been set as tentative dates for the Allied Theatre Owners of Oklahoma convention; the place being the Biltmore Hotel in Oklahoma City.

The Independent Theatre Owners Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, affiliated with Allied States Association, will probably hold its convention in Milwaukee in September, although no date has been set as yet.

The directors of the Allied Theatre Owners of Michigan will meet in the near future to select a place and an October date for the annual convention.

THREE MORE TRUST SUITS HIT MAJORS; TNEC PROBE WILL NOT TOUCH FILMS

Federal Action Against Crescent Amusement Company Follows Suit by Independent; Stanley-Warner Also Target

Striking in widely scattered locations over the country in its series of promised trust suits, the United States Government this week "moved in" on Crescent Amusement Company and the majors in anti-trust proceedings in the South, following its attack on the Schine Circuit and the large companies in Gloversville, N. Y., August 7th, the Griffith Circuit and the majors in Oklahoma City, April 28th, and prior actions against the large companies in New York City and against them and Balaban and Katz in Chicago.

Because John C. Knox, federal judge, leaves on a three week vacation, decision cannot be handed down before one month on the application by the Government for a preferred trial date, in its anti-trust suit against the majors in New York.

The judge has been reported trying to advance the court calendar by having several vacancies filled on the district court bench.

Follows Independent's Suit

Filing of the Crescent suit by the Department of Justice, last Thursday, brought out that a few days before, the independent Peerless Amusement Company had attacked the same circuit on anti-trust allegations, in an action filed in Tennessee, because of its reputed inability to obtain product in Harrison, Tenn., due to preferential treatment claimed to have been given Crescent by the distributors.

The week brought a third anti-trust suit, to be added to the 40-odd already pending from coast to coast against the large companies and various circuits. This one attacks Stanley-Warner Theatres, and was brought by George Graves against that circuit and six distributors —all of the "Big Eight" except Columbia and Twentieth Century-Fox. The action was filed in U. S. District Court, Philadelphia, last Friday.

Charges Conspiracy

In the Philadelphia suit, Plaintiff Graves charges a conspiracy to restrain trade as well as monopolize. He charges that his Carman theatre has not been able to get sufficient first-run pictures for its operation. He charges that the Uptown, a Stanley-Warner house, buys approximately 300 pictures a year although it cannot use more than 100 and that the Uptown is able to tie up this product without obligation to pay more than a small percentage. He also charges that the Uptown controls the entire distribution without excessive financial commitment. He claims that as a result, the Carman has suffered substantial losses and that the attending public has been affected by this alleged restriction.

The plaintiff asks that the distributors be enjoined from entering into any contract with respect to the Uptown under which the exhibitor defendants are permitted to buy more feature pictures than can be reasonably used by it, that the defendants be enjoined from conspiring in any way to prevent the plaintiff from enjoying first-run privileges, and the defendants be enjoined from encouraging or carrying out any monopoly practices.

Extending its campaign against alleged monopolies in the motion picture industry, the Department of Justice filed in the Federal District Court for the Middle District of Tennessee for dissolution of the Crescent chain, operating in Tennessee, Kentucky and Alabama and parts of Mississippi and Arkansas.

Named as defendants were Crescent Amusement Company, Cumberland Amusement Company, Lyric Amusement Company, New Strand Company, Strand Enterprise Corporation, Rockwood Amusements, Cherokee Amusement Company, Kentucky Amusements, and Muscle Shoals Theatre, Inc., together with certain of their officers and directors.

Also named in the suit, with a petition that they be enjoined from licensing pictures except on a local competitive basis, were Paramount Pictures, Paramount Film Distributing Corporation, Loew's, RKO, Universal Pictures, Universal Film, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Columbia, Warner Brothers and Vitagraph.

The second U. S. suit to be launched within two weeks and the third in its campaign against the large independent chains, the petition in the Crescent case, as in the Griffith Amusement suit and the Schine proceeding, charged that Crescent, while not operating on a nationwide scale, affected independent exhibitors in its area in substantially the same manner as they are affected by the major producing companies wherever they own houses, and that, by reason of its control of a large number of theatres, it is able to make blanket contracts for all desirable pictures for all of its houses without competing with local independent exhibitors.

To remedy this situation, the U. S. Court was told by the Department of Justice it is essential that the Crescent chain be dissolved and its properties rearranged under several separate independent corporations in such a manner as to create competitive conditions and prevent further violations of the Sherman Act. Also, it is asked that an injunction be issued directing that the practices resulting in the alleged monopoly control and its oppressive exercise be discontinued and that the Crescent chain be enjoined against the acquisition of additional theatres or financial interests therein.

With the filing of the Crescent suit, the Government has covered the Middle East from Canada to Mexico, its three cases being directed at circuits—and the majors—operating in Ohio, Kentucky, Maryland, Delaware, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Illinois and New York.

Columbia Answers in New York Action

Replying to the Government's action against all of the majors in the pending New York antitrust suit, Columbia Pictures, on Friday, in two separate defenses, denied all charges, and in its 105-page document, called itself an "independent," not a "major," as it re-defined the term "major."

The answer, which was filed by Schwartz and Frohlich, counsel, of New York, contends that the Government's definition of a "major" company is in error, and that such a company is one that is engaged in exhibition as well as production and distribution.

The answer sets up two separate defenses, one of which is that Columbia was a party to the suit brought by the Government against Interstate Circuit in Dallas last year and that a decree has been entered by the Federal court in that case.

The answer defends the practice of loaning stars and technicians, asserting that independents share in the benefits of it and, in fact, it permits Columbia and other independent companies "to survive." It also sets forth that independent producers turned out 2,000 pictures more than the "major" companies during the years from 1937 to 1938.

Economic Committee Will Wind Up Exploratory Hearings in December, Says Senator O'Mahoney, Chairman

Announcement by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, chairman, of the final schedule of hearings for the Temporary National Economic Committee indicates that there will be no public investigation of the motion picture industry as part of the Administration's monopoly probe.

Would Report by March

Possibilities that films would be a subject of investigation were raised several months ago when Daniel Bertrand, editor of a history of the industry under the NRA and now on the staff of the TNEC, was observed at the hearings on block booking before the Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee and explained that motion pictures were under study.

It was explained by Senator O'Mahoney that the committee is anxious to make its final report to Congress by next March and to do so plans to wind up its exploratory hearings in December. To accomplish this, he said, it would be impossible to go into many phases of the monopoly situation, but industries and situations not covered at the hearings would be considered by the TNEC on the basis of reports from its staff and from the associated Government agencies.

Conferences Underway

It is expected that a report on the motion picture situation will be prepared by Mr. Bertrand and his associates in cooperation with the Department of Commerce, where Dr. Willard L. Thorp, assistant to Secretary Hopkins; Ernest Tupper, chief statistician, and Nathan D. Golden, chief of the motion picture section, have been conducting a study of the industry through a series of conferences with distributors and exhibitor groups.

Philippines and Mexicans Protest

Complaints against Hollywood productions have been filed by the Philippine and Mexican Governments, the former against Samuel Goldwyn's "The Real Glory" and Mexico against Warner Brothers' "Juarez."

Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine Commonwealth, has dispatched a sharp protest to Samuel Goldwyn and his executive assistant, James Roosevelt, against scenes in "The Real Glory," which he termed "derogatory" to his countrymen. The film, which stars Gary Cooper, is based upon the American occupation of the Philippines and the resulting insurrection.

Warners have won a temporary injunction against the order of the federal prosecutor in Mexico City to the Municipal Government, forbidding the exhibition of "Juarez." The order followed a complaint against the film to the prosecutor.

The injunction assures the exhibition of the film in Mexico City indefinitely. The film currently is establishing a house record at the Cine Orfeon there.

A SPECIFIC

Statement

Concerning the Policy of WARNER BROS. STUDIO

by JACK L. WARNER

In Charge of Production

At this time, the conclusion of the current season, I feel it is an obligation to our exhibitors to put forward a fair and frank statement for the purpose of mutual understanding.

In response to the many letters of praise we have received throughout the year I say—don't thank us, thank you. Thank you for the faith you placed in our plans; thank you for the splendid manner in which you merchandised our product to the public; thank you for your congratulatory expressions which have served continually as an inspiration to us. It is because of the results obtained through you that it was possible to continue to move forward as we have and to build our superlative production organization — acknowledged everywhere as the most successful now operating.

The surest indication of what we can offer the progressive exhibitors of this industry for next season is our record for the season now passing. I am gratified that during a period when the effects of a nation-wide boxoffice slump was generally felt, the product of our studios continuously and regularly offered the major profit — when profit was needed most! For the fair method of distributing these pictures, for defying the usual warm-weather bugaboos and other threadbare distribution practices, credit must go to the foresight of our General Sales Manager, Grad Sears.

The list of our 1938-39 pictures speaks for itself. For their devoted efforts in making them possible I want to publicly acknowledge my gratitude to Hal B. Wallis, Executive Producer of Warner Bros. Studios, and to our associate producers.

FOUR DAUGHTERS • THE SISTERS • VALLEY OF THE GIANTS • BROTHER RAT • ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES • DAWN PATROL • DEVIL'S ISLAND THEY MADE ME A CRIMINAL • WINGS OF THE NAVY • YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER • OKLAHOMA KID • DARK VICTORY • CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY • DODGE CITY • JUAREZ • HELL'S KITCHEN • THE ANGELS WASH THEIR FACES • DAUGHTERS COURAGEOUS • EACH DAWN I DIE

Now that our company has determined for the new season to spend the largest sum of money ever ear-marked for film production it means this to you: It means that the star and the story values of this season's successes will be even greater next season: it means that our steadfast policy, developed after thirty odd years' experience, of giving each picture individual treatment and not "assembly line" delivery assures to you uninterrupted output such as neither we nor any others have previously provided. We have the courage to do this only because we, as proved to everybody's satisfaction through the past seasons, know how to do this!

We can therefore promise the exhibitors who have so staunchly supported this company that they can look forward with confidence to a continued successful relationship with Warner Bros. As an indication of our unprecedented plans I list the following properties—many already completed, the others actually in preparation:

THE OLD MAID
(Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Donald Crisp)

ON YOUR TOES
(Zorina, Eddie Albert, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, James Gleason. From the Rodgers and Hart stage hit)

(Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall, Jeffrey Lynn, George Bancroft)

DUST BE MY DESTINY
(John Garfield, Priscilla Lane, Alan Hale)

THE FIGHTING 69TH
(James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Wayne Morris)

A CHILD IS BORN
(Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George, Gale Page, Spring Byington)

THE CITY OF LOST MEN
(John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, Pat O'Brien, Burgess Meredith)

THE SPIRIT OF KNUTE ROCKNE
(With one of the biggest casts of all time, headed for the outstanding success in the history of Warner Bros.)

THE STORY OF DR. EHRLICH
(Edward G. Robinson)

THE DEAD END KIDS AT MILITARY SCHOOL

AND IT ALL CAME TRUE
(James Stewart, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart)

BROTHER RAT AND A BABY
(By the authors of the sensational stage show. Eddie Albert, and the same great 'Brother Rat' cast.)

DEVOTION
(The lives of the immortal Bronte Sisters Written especially for the screen by James G. (Mr. Chips) Hilton. Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, Geraldine Fitzgerald)

GANTRY THE GREAT
(Starring the famous blind horse. This will be one of the most unique and most gripping dramas of Warner Bros'. entire career.)

THE STORY OF CAPTAIN HORATIO HORNBLOWER
(Based on the great novel!
Starring Errol Flynn and Geraldine Fitzgerald)

TWO SONS
(Starring John Garfield, Jeffrey Lynn, Priscilla Lane)

INVISIBLE STRIPES
(By Warden Lawes. To star George Raft, Humphrey Bogart)

THE PATENT LEATHER KID
(George Raft, Priscilla Lane)

FOUR WIVES
(With "The Four Daughters", Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, May Robson, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh)

NEVADA
(Epic Technicolor follow-up to 'Dodge City. Starring Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland)

DANGEROUS CURVES
(Ann Sheridan will display all the 'oomph' in the world in her first important starring vehicle!)

MARRIED, PRETTY AND POOR
(Ann Sheridan teamed with George Raft!)

BROTHER ORCHID
(From the great Collier's Story.
Starring Edw. G. Robinson, Olivia de Havilland)

UNDERGROUND
(To star John Garfield, George Brent, Geraldine Fitzgerald)

WE ARE NOT ALONE
(Paul Muni, Dolly Haas, Flora Robson.
By the author of 'Goodbye, Mr. Chips,' James Hilton)

In conclusion, I want to express sincere appreciation to all the exhibitors who have given us their suggestions. They are an invaluable guide. You asked for action and we are giving it to you. You promised better playing time for finer product and we are getting it. Together, we of Warner Bros. and you, our customers, can look confidently to a greater mutual prosperity than at any time before. We will do our share, and know you will do yours.

HOLLYWOOD PAY 4 CENTS OVER NEW YORK, SAYS 1939-40 ALMANAC

Radio Is Highest Paying Industry, Writes Terry Ramsaye in 1,196-Page Edition with 11,500 Biographies

Hollywood, the socalled land of milk and honey, especially honey, pays its average employee only four and a third cents a day more than the average male worker in New York State draws. The 282,000 persons in the motion picture business last year took home—or, rather, received from the paymasters—$1,306.98 apiece. In the same period, men at work in New York State drew $1,211 from their employers. For the United States at large the pay voucher read $1,027.

These figures are from "some calculations about the screen and the radio, based on trade reports, publicity figures, as given out, and some intricate tablecloth arithmetic" by Terry Ramsaye, editor, in THE 1939-40 INTERNATIONAL MOTION PICTURE ALMANAC, a Quigley Publication, out next week.

Radio is the highest paying industry, writes Mr. Ramsaye, though it requires only one-fifteenth as many full-time workers as the motion picture. The 18,300 on the weekly radio payroll get on the average $45.20, while the 4,000 part-time workers draw $23.55. General manufacturing, in contrast, pays $22.46.

Comparative Returns

Radio's 350 network affiliated stations, according to the Federal Communications Commission, took in 77 per cent of broadcasting's net for 1938, comparable with the affiliated circuit theatres' share in motion picture revenues. However, with 419 of the 660 stations making a profit, the year's net was $18,854,784, or 17 per cent under the year earlier. Radio's plant investment is placed at $1,068,399,901, or three-fourths of a million less than the estimated motion piction theatre investment and nine times the investment of the motion picture in studios and distribution systems.

With almost eleven million seats in motion picture theatres of the United States and each occupied 7.78 times a week, the average attendance for each theatre figures at 5,230.44 a week. "The decimal fraction no doubt allows for midgets," writes Mr. Ramsaye.

11,500 Biographies

The ALMANAC gives the biographical records of more than 11,500 individuals in some 918,000 words. The evanescence of fame is reflected in the fact that 986 names were removed, while 520 new personalities had won sufficient note in the year to be included for the first time.

The decline of attendance at theatres to an estimated 80 millions or thereabouts was paralleled by the fact that fewer theatres were dark at the end of the year than at the close of 1937, a reflection of the upward swing of patronage in the fall. At the same time it is noted that more than a half billion dollars was expended on theatre construction, including remodeling, in the 10 years ended in June of this year.

The industry spent $150,000,000 to give the customers the product of the past season, says the ALMANAC. Noted as a factor was the increase of $91,000,000 in the annual payroll of Hollywood.

There was an increase of $7,000,000 in distribution's advertising of motion pictures, while the world's bill for publicity was one hundred ten millions.

In addition to the many informational departments which have been made a standardized service of the ALMANAC, such as the bankers' story of the year as they would see it in the financial statements, the listings of the official families of companies, unions and associations in all fields, including the business of equipping studio, office and theatre, the titles of motion pictures and credits, screen personalities of the radio, the status of the socalled advertising film, all arranged for rapid consultation, the 1939-40 edition gives attention to television, its progress, limitations and leaders, in its 1196 pages.

MOORE OF ATLANTA LEADS SOUTHERN OWNERS IN PLEA FOR CODE RELIEF

Exhibitors of Four States Urge Elimination of Practices Which They Say Are Heading Toward Federal Control

Milton C. Moore of Jacksonville, president of the Southeastern Theatre Owners' Association, on Wednesday led exhibitors of Florida, Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee in a formal, written plea to the general sales managers of the majors in New York, and to the distributors' exchange managers in Atlanta which serve them, for relief from unfair and obnoxious trade practices which they claim are being forced upon them even in light of the majors' promises not to pursue those very practices in their code for self-regulating distribution-exhibition.

The petition is unusual in that it is not a heated, vitrolic attack such as the distributors are used to receiving from some complaining exhibitor groups, but, instead, is a cold, plain statement. It has added significance because it comes from a group of owners and their leaders who continually stood for self-regulation as against outside interference.

Favors Code Program

As recently as June, in reporting the organization's full accord on the majors' code, Mr. Moore, one of the South's prominent independent operators, in a communication to MOTION PICTURE HERALD (see June 17th issue), set down his personal and his organization's belief and policy as follows:

The new program was voted by the Southeastern organization as "practical, enforceable and a great step forward to promote harmony and peace in the motion picture industry both as to distribution and exhibition and offers the only solution to the many problems confronting this great industry and without which we are sure to face regulation by the Federal Government, which none of us want,

"I am one of the men who sat with Ed Kuykendall and Sidney Kent and his committee and I personally am firmly convinced that there is a very honest and sincere effort on the part of every distributor who is a part of this agreement to do everything they possibly can to see that it is lived up to by their various companies. Every exhibitor should take the same attitude."

Today, however, exhibitors in Mr. Moore's territory "are beginning to feel that things look very bad."

"We have done everything we could to fight along with the distributors and believed that they were honestly trying to help us out, but it now seems that they aren't, so we are giving them one more chance and if they don't come through honestly, and without any strings, then we will go to bat and see what we can do—and if that leads to Federal regulation, then, so what?"

As instructed by the board of directors of the organization, he sent, Wednesday, a copy of a resolution, passed by a special board-and-membership meeting to the majors in New York and to their branch managers in Atlanta. The resolution follows:

"Whereas, the motion picture industry is currently attempting to formulate a Code of Fair Trade Practices for itself and the general public, and

"Whereas, it has been proposed, among other conditions and practices, that the producers and distributors of motion pictures give the exhibitors of motion pictures the privilege of eliminating a minimum percentage of the feature motion pictures which are sold to the exhibitors so that the exhibitors may have the opportunity of discarding poor and unsuitable motion pictures from its block purchases, and

"Whereas, certain of the said producers and distributors are attempting to enforce a principle of adding an equal or greater percentage to the cost of the new season product (1939-40) to eliminate the benefits of this particular concession, and

"Whereas, contrary to the spirit of the Code certain producers and distributors are forcing the sale of unneeded short subjects to the purchase of their feature pictures; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, that we, the directors of Southeastern Theatre Owners' Association, in meeting assembled this the ninth day of August, 1939, at the Ansley hotel, Atlanta, Georgia, go on record with the industry, the general public and the press as being unanimously opposed to this unfair practice and demand the immediate cessation of—

"A—The forced sale of short subjects.

"B—The unfair principle of appearing to give a twenty per cent (20%) elimination of feature motion pictures which is actually no concession at all because the prices of the actual features used by the exhibitors are being raised to such an extent that it entirely nullifies the proposed elimination and benefits which the exhibitors are supposed to receive."

All Exhibitors Invited

Mr. Moore, pointing out to the majors the significance of the meeting at which the foregoing resolution was enacted, explained that it was a regular board meeting of the STOA, but that all exhibitors in the territory were invited. Some 82 owners responded, he said, among them one of the largest theatre operators in the territory, also the two next largest operators, and several independent circuit operators, which, with the individual owners on hand, represented one-half of the total theatres in the territory.

"I would also like to remind you that this association has also tried to keep the Atlanta territory free of lawsuits and arguments and has always tried to work in complete harmony with the distributors and with each other. We would like to keep up this record if we are allowed to do so."

Urges Something Be Done

Continuing with his formal communication to the distributors, in reporting on the meeting, Mr. Moore declared:

"There was not so much objection to the code itself even in its present form, and it is my personal opinion that the majority of the exhibitors will accept the code and keep its provisions, but there is also a feeling among the exhibitors that the distributors are not acting in good faith and this would only serve to make the code inoperative and tear down the months of work that has been put into it. And if this code is destroyed, there is a grave fear among exhibitor leaders that the rank and file of owners will not do anything to defeat the Neely anti-block selling bill or any other form of Federal regulation that may be proposed.

"All that is holding them in line now is a hope that the code will be their salvation and, unless it is, then we are headed for a lot of trouble in this industry."

'Don't Worry,' Skouras Tells His Circuit

The Neely Bill, Government trust suits, various theatre "divorce" legislation notwithstanding, the public will continue to receive good pictures and the theatre manager will continue to work unhampered, Spyros Skouras, president of National Theatres, told the eighth annual convention of Fox Midwest Amusement Corporation, a subsidiary, in Excelsior Springs, Mo., on Wednesday.

Mr. Skouras' speech and attendance at the convention was part of a series he is making at all of the National Theatres divisional conventions this week. He was to attend the Fox Intermountain division's annual convention in Denver on Thursday; the Evergreen State Amusement Corporation meeting in Seattle on Friday, and the Fox West Coast meeting in Los Angeles on Sunday.

This series of National theatres meetings is paralleled this week by other circuit meetings; the meeting on Tuesday in Philadelphia of executives and managers of the Warner Theatres in that zone; the meeting in Denver this week of the Gibraltar Enterprises, and the ninth annual convention of the Pioneer Theatre Corporation theatre managers at St. Louis Park, Minnesota, on this Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

At the Fox Midwest meeting, Elmer C. Rhoden, president of the subsidiary, said that box-office receipts in the Middle West had increased over last year's. He also predicted, from an examination of producers' announcements, more good pictures for the coming year.

Mr. Rhoden was in charge. Fred Souttar, St. Louis district manager, was presiding chairman.

Speakers other than Mr. Rhoden and Mr. Skouras were Senn Lawler, director of publicity and advertising; Lon Cox, Kansas City district manager and film buyer; H. E. Jameyson, district manager at Wichita; L. E. Pope, purchasing agent; Lou Honig, in charge of real estate.

In Philadelphia on Tuesday, 143 Warner Theatre Philadelphia zone theatre managers and executives heard talks by top Warner figures, including Joseph Bernhard, circuit head, who stressed importance of "service"; Gradwell Sears, Warner Brothers general sales manager, who outlined coming Warner product; Ted Schlanger, Philadelphia chief; Harry Goldberg, director of exploitation for Warner Theatres, and Lester Krieger.

The conventioneers attended a showing of "The Old Maid," with Bette Davis, at the Aldine, Philadelphia.

The Gibraltar circuit held its convention from last Friday through Tuesday of this week at the Cosmopolitan Hotel, in Denver. It controls about 38 theatres in the territory. Its president is Charles Gilmour.

Harold R. Field, president of the Pioneer Theatre Corporation, welcomed the delegates to the ninth annual convention of his circuit this Thursday, Friday and Saturday at St. Louis Park, Minnesota.

CODE ACCEPTABLE TO U. S. WOULD "CLEAN THE SLATE," SAYS ALLIED

Favors Instrument Approved by Justice Department, Written into Consent Decree; Against Block Sales; For 'Divorcement'

Allied States' ambition is to see a trade practice code which would be accepted by the Department of Justice and written into a consent decree; such a code, "thus made permanent and enduring, and meeting the reasonable demands of the Government and the public groups, would clean the slate," and the industry again could concentrate on the motion picture business untroubled by governmental or outside interference. That's where Allied stands today on the matter of a code for regulation of distribution and exhibition.

Allied broke silence this week for the first time since it rejected the majors' trade practice code, on June 14th, to answer critics who have been attacking the organization for that action. Allied now answers, says a statement from national headquarters, "because certain of its directors, who were unnamed, express the fear that failure to do so might be interpreted by persons unfamiliar with industry politics, more especially the public groups supporting the (Allied sponsored) Neely anti-block booking bill in Congress, as a tacit admission that the criticisms are unanswerable."

Charges Reckless Policy

These same critics, charges Allied, have at the same time been "blind to the grimy splotches on the record" of the distributors, whose "reckless policy has brought down upon their heads the four pending Government prosecutions and the prospect of more, countless private suits, and the imminent passage of the Neely bill and possibly other more onerous legislation."

Allied States still stands definitely against the code, as now constituted, charging that despite provisions in the code for the elimination of such practices, it has received reports from various parts of the country indicating that:

"(1) Shorts are still being forced.

"(2) The customary score charge is being added to the film rental (but not as a separate item).

"(3) Distributors are demanding higher prices with a larger number of percentage pictures.

"(4) Distributors are waiving guarantees in order to exact preferred playing time."

Calls Clauses "Tricky"

In these circumstances, it is said, "the average exhibitor after reading the many nullifying and tricky clauses, as enumerated in the (Allied) Negotiating Committee report, may be excused for wondering what possible benefit the code can be to him, and, even assuming that he will reap some moderate privileges, whether he will not have to bear the entire burden of the expense incident thereto."

Claims by Allied's critics that Allied tricked the major sales executives into going to the "open forum" on the code at the June convention in Minneapolis, and that Allied's board of directors voted to reject the code before those executives had been accorded a hearing from the convention floor, are answered now by Allied's statement of the chronological order of business both at the convention proper and at the board of directors meetings before and during the session, and are vigorously denied.

Furthermore, it is said, "final action on the code was purposely postponed until the next day (after a board meeting on the code) for the reason that William F. Rodgers, MGM; Gradwell Sears, Warners, and Abe Montague and other advocates of the code had not yet addressed the convention and it was felt that the board should first hear what they had to say" before voting on the code. And the board did not approve any report on the document "until after advocate of the code had been heard," declares Allied.

"Whatever chance the code had of approval by the convention was killed by proceedings at this session," by the statements made by the majors' representatives, declares Allied's answer, pointing out particularly that Mr. Sears, of Warners, said from the rostrum that because his company was giving increased cancellation in the code, salesmen may ask for rentals higher than last year under lower cancellation concessions. Also, Mr. Rodgers made some "undiplomatic utterances," devoting "a large part of his speech to verbal attacks which clearly were leveled at Allied leaders and to minimizing the need for the moderate reforms which the code could accomplish." The code, as a result, continues Allied's statement, "was murdered not by its enemies but by its advocates."

On Subjects Discussed

Furthermore, the claim that the code covers all subjects discussed, says Allied, would be nearer correct if the distributors, through Mr. Rodgers, had said that the code contained every subject which the distributors were willing to discuss. "It was Mr. Rodgers' familiar and final 'Gentlemen, it can't be done' that precluded discussion of many Allied proposals such as the abolishment of compulsory block booking, identification of pictures, enlarged cancellation privilege for unidentified pictures, the 'right to buy,' and numerous other proposals."

Charges arising over various discussions which Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, had with the distributors' lawyers, likewise are answered in this week's statement from Allied headquarters, also the distributors' claim that Allied's code negotiating committee report was "misleading and inaccurate."

Answered also is the majors' assertion that "it was quite apparent from the very outset that some of the Allied (code) representatives did not want a code in any form."

"The facts are," said Allied, "that when Rodgers early in the negotiations informed the Allied representatives that his committee was not prepared to discuss the abolition of compulsory block booking and blind selling, or the divorcement of theatres, the Allied men told him frankly that they could not abandon their efforts to secure those reforms.

"If Allied leaders were to abandon the Neely Bill and decline to cooperate in the prosecution of the Government suit in consideration of the doubtful provisions of the Rodgers' Code, they would be branded as traitors and repudiated by the independent exhibitors of the country," says Allied.

"As to whether or not a majority of exhibitors favor the Code, or are willing to sign it as individuals in order to participate in its moderate benefits, or can be coerced or cajoled into signing it by branch managers and film salesmen, that remains to be seen.

Action on Allied Report

"Certainly the exhibitors are not anxious for their organizations to tie their hands by approving the Code. The following Allied organizations have formally ratified the Allied Negotiating Committee's report: New England, New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, Western Pennsylvania, Indiana, Allied of the Northwest, and Texas. So far as we are aware, no exhibitor association has formally approved the Code in its entirety.

"Allied has not been opposed to a code which would make presently available to its members some of the benefits which they hoped to reap from the Government suit and the Neely Bill, provided acceptance thereof did not involve or imply that such moderate concessions were all that the exhibitors needed or desired.

What Allied Wants

"Several times during the negotiations Allied stated publicly that it was its ambition to see a code written which would be accepted by the Department of Justice and written into a consent decree. Such a code, thus made permanent and enduring, and meeting the reasonable demands of the Government and the public groups, would clean the slate and the industry could again concentrate on the motion picture business untroubled by governmental or outside interference. This point of view has been repudiated by the distributors. Mr. Rodgers says that Allied's views in regard to the Government's action are 'fanatical prophesies.' Sidney R. Kent, in a strange outburst of truculence, declared that he would rather negotiate with Thurman Arnold than with Abram F. Myers. The latter observation was entirely gratuitous as the distributors could not very well negotiate a consent decree without dealing with Thurman Arnold.

"From the reaction of the distributors to Allied's proposals and the intemperate utterances of Messrs. Rodgers and Kent it is easy to discern the policies and attitudes of the major companies. The pending and prospective proceedings by the United States Government are regarded with contempt. They have fought for delay that would prevent the cases from coming to a head until the time when a change of Administration would be possible. Current feverish efforts to avoid a trial of the New York case this fall apparently were stimulated by rumors that Mr. Arnold might retire after the first of January. In the meantime, the only concern of the distributors appears to be to run the exhibitors into a corner, silence the 'agitators' and proceed in full enjoyment of their monopolistic privileges."

CANADIAN OWNERS TO MEET ON REFORMS

A national convention of independent exhibitors in Canada, to discuss and correct evils designated as prolonged protection and unfair priority was set for September 7th in Toronto at a meeting held last week under the auspices of the Independent Theatres Association of Toronto.

At the meeting, a resolution was adopted supporting the Anti-Protection League of Canada, which is now considered sufficiently strong to carry out a movement for "reforms," with written pledges received from a large number of exhibitors. The League was formed under the sponsorship of the Independent Theatre Association.

HOLLYWOOD PRODUCERS BUY 26 MORE BOOKS AND PLAYS FOR 1940

Twenty-six Purchased in Month; Originals Account for 73 Per Cent of Total; MGM, Universal Have Six Apiece

With only the month of August remaining before the start of the new film year, Hollywood in July acquired 26 literary properties, a great decrease compared with preceding months, but half again as many as the 18 purchased in the corresponding month last year.

The stories and plays were divided among eight producers, with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Universal leading with six properties apiece; the next highest being Columbia with four. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer properties included three originals, a play, a magazine story and a novel. While actually one play from the point of view of purchase and presentation, the property so listed for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was comprised of eight short plays, all written by Noel Coward and presented as a group of units on Broadway under the title "Tonight at 8:30."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer also purchased "Maisie," a film produced by Phil Goldstone five years ago, to avoid the possibility of reissue and conflict with their picture of the same name, it was reported during the month.

Both the Universal and the Columbia purchases were all originals, which accounted for 19 of the total of 26, or 73 per cent.

Titles and Credits

The month's purchases, with all available production credits, follows:

AND SO THEY WERE MARRIED, original by Aleen Wetstein, purchased by Columbia.

BISCUIT EATER, THE, Saturday Evening Post story by James Street, purchased by Paramount.

BLONDIE BRINGS UP BABY, original by Gladys Lehman, purchased by Columbia for Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake and Larry Simms.

CALL ON THE PRESIDENT, A, Saturday Evening Post story by Damon Runyon, and published short story, purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

CAROLINA MOON, original by Harry Fraser, purchased by Republic for Gene Autry.

CAUSE FOR ALARM, novel by Eric Ambler, purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

DOUBLE IN DIAMONDS, original by Dalton Trumbo, purchased by Columbia.

FATHER DUFFY'S STORY, autobiography by Father Francis P. Duffy, purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox.

FREEDOM, original by Harold Shumate, purchased by Columbia.

Stanley in England

HENRY M. STANLEY IN ENGLAND, biography by Georges Drumcurt, purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox. It will be filmed as a sequel to "Stanley and Livingston."

LA CONGA, original by Lew Lipton, purchased by Universal.

LEGION OF LOST FLYERS, original by Ben Pivar, purchased by Universal.

MAN ON AMERICA'S CONSCIENCE, THE, original by Alvin Myers and Lowell Brodaux, purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Radio Commission Is Now Hit By U.S. Appeals Court

The Federal Communications Commission, already under fire from attacks by Congress and radio broadcasters for some of its policies and procedure on radio and television, was rebuked Monday by the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia for advocating "uncontrolled competition in radio broadcasting." Like motion pictures, radio has been hit of late for alleged monopoly by the big interests.

The criticism this week was made in a decision dismissing an appeal brought by the Yankee Network, Inc., operators of eight broadcasting stations in and nearby Boston, from an FCC ruling granting increased power to a competing station WMEX operated by the Northern Corporation. The FCC had challenged the right of the court to hear an appeal from its ruling brought by an existing licensee claiming to be economically affected.

"One of the chief concerns of Congress," the FCC argued, "was to guard against monopolies and to preserve competition."

"It is difficult to understand," Justice Justin Miller wrote in the opinion, "how this result could be achieved by deliberately or carelessly licensing so many new competing stations as to destroy already existing ones and possibly the newly created ones as well.

"The method of uncontrolled competition argued for by the FCC in the present case, is in fact, one way of creating monopolies. If it were allowed to go on unrestrained, according to its theory of non-reviewable arbitrary power, none but a financial monopoly could safely exist and operate in the radio broadcast field.

"Congress had power to provide safeguards against destructive economic injury to existing licensees. In the case of the railroads, Congress waited until the condition of many of them was desperate. The commission argues that the transportation act and the recent emergency railroad transportation act were intended 'to administer oxygen to critical patients.'

"But in the case of radio broadcasters the intent of Congress was to anticipate and prevent desperate chaotic conditions. The latter form of statesmanship is equally commendable as the former and may serve better the interests of the people. In both instances the privilege of free enterprise was curtailed."

The Yankee Network, Inc., failed, however, to set aside the commission's ruling. The court held that its case failed to present an issue as to whether the anticipated competition will necessarily result in such severe loss of operating revenue as to impair the service rendered by the Yankee Network or whether it will destroy its ability to render proper service in the public interest.

FRANCE DROPS QUOTA ON DUBBED IMPORTS

Follows French Distributors' Protest That 188 Limitation Was Obstacle to Them

Limitations on the importation of foreign films dubbed in French have been dropped by the French Government, in a decree published in the "Journal Officiel," last Friday.

The measure was sought by French distribution interests, which claimed that the former quota, restricting to 188 yearly the number of dubbed foreign films shown in France, was revealed to be entirely inadequate. The reason cited was that most of the 188 dubbing visas were given to major American product, so that there were no more visas remaining for French distributors wishing to buy American independent product for supporting films on dual bills featuring French reels.

The suppression of the quota affects only those countries which admit French films without numerical or monetary restriction, such as the United States, Great Britain, Argentina, Belgium, Holland, Sweden, Mexico and Switzerland.

The measure is seen particularly as having the effect of making closer and fairer French cooperation with American and British producers. It will also allow other pictures, from Argentina, Sweden and Mexico, to obtain dubbing visas for showing in France without limitation. These countries are excellent customers for French product.

The importation of German and Italian films for French dubbing will continue to be limited, in accordance with clearing house monetary exchanges and special commercial agreements.

Major American companies are particularly gratified by the lifting of the restriction. An agreement with the French Government is now being sought which will eliminate the visa system permanently, and guarantee a year's grace before any new quota measure must be met, if one is put into effect.

12 U. S. Pictures In Cannes Festival

American participation in the Cannes International Film Festival, to be held September 1st, will reach to the extent of 12 films, of which eight, one from each of the major companies, have already been selected.

Those chosen are: "Only Angels Have Wings," Columbia; "The Wizard of Oz," M-G-M; "Union Pacific," Paramount; "Stanley and Livingstone," 20th Century-Fox; "Bachelor Mother," RKO; "Each Dawn I Die," Warners; "They Shall Have Music," Goldwyn-United Artists; "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," Universal.

The selection of the remaining four will be made on the advice of the American Embassy. They may include: "The Women," "Rulers of the Sea," "Modern Cinderella," and "Hotel for Women."

English and French participation, according to Festival regulations, will include only four films from each company. Two English films, "Four Feathers" and "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," already have been selected.

French participation was officially announced on Saturday by Jean Zay, Minister of National Education. The four French films will be "Angels from Hell," "Law of the North," "Man of the Niger" and a documentary feature, "France Is an Empire."

Many short subjects will be shown, including Disney subjects, March of Time's "March of the Movies" and French and English documentary shorts.

Other participating countries are Russia, four features; Sweden, two; Belgium, "Dark Rapture" and three documentaries; Holland, Poland and Egypt.

Norma Shearer, Robert Montgomery and French and British stars will attend the opening of the Festival.

Trans-Lux, Kodak Report Profits

The consolidated net profit of Trans-Lux Corporation, operating Trans-Lux newsreel theatres and Trans-Lux Daylight Screen Corporation, for the six months ended June 30th, amounted to $39,126.59, which is less by $51,463.33 than for the corresponding period a year ago when the net was $90,589.92.

The Eastman Kodak Company reports a net profit for the 24 weeks ended June 17th of $8,688,870, equal to $3.43 a common share. This compares with a net profit of $7,051,675, or $3.05 a common share in the corresponding period ended June 11, 1938.

In the Trans-Lux report the total net income before provision for income taxes during the first six months of the current year was $48,280.48 as against $102,098.47 in the first six months of 1938.

State, Federal and Canadian income tax provision amounted in the first six months of 1939 to $9,153.89, compared with $11,508.55 in the similar period of 1938.

Two "Movie Season" Campaigns Launched

The Twin Cities division of the Minnesota Amusement Company has launched its Greatest Movie Season a month early. The campaign is being backed by the biggest radio program in the history of the company. Other promotion includes special advertisements, special accessories, posting and heralds.

The annual Better New Movie Season cavalcade planned and executed by the Poli-New England division will start this year at Boston and take in Providence, as well as the Poli towns. A fleet of 10 specially built automobiles driven by selected girls will proceed from Boston to Worcester, Providence, Springfield, Hartford, Meriden, Waterbury, New Haven, Bridgeport and wind up at the New York World's Fair.

EDISON HONORED AT WORLD'S FAIR

Thomas A. Edison Day was observed Saturday at the New York World's Fair in commemoration of his inventive genius. The day marked the 62nd anniversary of the invention of the phonograph on August 12, 1877. Mary Pickford recited into the recording device of the first Edison phonograph the nursery rhyme, "Mary Had a Little Lamb", which was the piece with which Mr. Edison tested his invention in 1877.

It was estimated that at least 10,000 persons attended the exercises held in the Court of Peace. Speakers included John B. Kennedy, commentator for News of the day; Eugene C. Reed, assistant vice-president of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., and Miss Pickford who said that her two heroes were Abraham Lincoln and Thomas Edison.

Mr. Edison's invention of the Kinetoscope in 1889 will be commemorated in October by the motion picture industry and its "Golden Jubilee" celebration.

Film Outings and Golf Tournaments

The first annual inter-territorial stag Good Will Outing of exhibitors and salesmen of the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh territories will be held Wednesday at Lewistown, Pa., the dividing line of the two territories. Jack Judd of the Pittsburgh office of National Screen Service is chairman of the affair and Joe Shapiro, Mt. Union, Pa., exhibitor, is treasurer. Hosts are Paul O. Klingler, Rialto; Harold Cohn, Embassy, and Ike Berney, Pastime, all in Lewistown.

The annual picnic, golf and bridge tournament of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club will be held at Eddie Ott's Country Club and the Evergreen golf course at Evergreen on Friday.

The annual New Haven film district outing was held last Thursday at the Rustic Inn, Lake Quonnipaug. Twenty-five prizes for various sporting events were awarded.

The Film Section of the Toronto Board of Trade held a golf tournament Monday at the Oakdale Golf Club in Toronto.

Altec-Dominion Pact

An agreement covering the reciprocal interchange of technical information pertaining to sound reproducing and other theatre equipment and servicing techniques, has been signed, according to a joint announcement made by G. L. Carrington, vice-president and general manager of Altec, U. S., and F. E. Peters, general manager, Dominion Sound Equipment, Ltd., of Canada. They say that exhibitors in both U. S. and Canada will benefit from the field experience of both these organizations in better sound and improved techniques of service.

Nothing ever happened to this family until Pip-Emma wrote about trees . . . . . .

But that did it! That brought on the people... and the Penguins . . . and the kind of happenings that could occur only in—and out of—a typical American home!

HERE'S HOW OE PASTERNAK (Creator f the Deanna Durbin successes) CAST "THE UNDERPUP"

1. Gloria Jean's first movie role is that of "Pip-Emma," a girl full of pranks and golden voice.
2. Robert Cummings, star of "3 Smart Girls Grow Up," plays breezy "Denis," imaginative football star.
3. Nan Grey plays "Priscilla," who, for a time, denies Denis' claim that life's best things are free.
4. Beulah Bondi is inimitable as a chilly old maid with a reserve like the Federal Bank.
5. Virginia Weidler was assigned as "Shy Janet."
6. Margaret Lindsay plays Mrs. Cooper, Janet's troubled mother.
7. C. Aubrey Smith, irascible, dominating as "Grandpa."
8. Billy Gilbert got the part of "Tolio" frantic father of two T N.T. boys.
9. Ann Gillis was handed the part of "Letty-Lou," red-headed "stooge."
10. As the moneyed Mr Layton, Raymond Walburn really swings his weight.
11. Paul Cavanaugh plays the good provider but bad father.
12. Shirley Mills is the dictatorish president of the "Penguins."

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Production Confidence

Judging by the number of pictures started in the second week in August, a time during which everybody out here, from fourth assistant janitor to the most august members of the Screen Actors Guild, was talking about the possibilities of a strike, production executives stuck to business as usual. Ten pictures went into work; eight were completed.

At least five of the new productions are undertakings of more than ordinary consequence, four of the finished films concern subjects and personalities that promise to attract greater than usual attention.

Monogram launched the most ambitious effort of its history, "Murder in the Big House", a rousing prison-crime story in which Charles Bickford, Barton MacLane, Charlie Foy, Russell Hopton, George Cleveland, William Royle and Pat Moriarty will be the principals in a cast of more than 175 players.

Two pictures were started at 20th Century-Fox. The first, "High School," will star Jane Withers, with Lynn Roberts, Paul Harvey, Claire Brev and Cliff Edwards featured. "Too Busy to Work" is an item in the "Jones Family" series which will present the regular cast with Joan Davis heading the outside players.

Universal Starts Two

Universal also started a pair. Unquestionably the more important is "Tower of London", in which Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Ian Hunter, Nan Grey and Barbara O'Neil will be the principals. "Listen Kids" is a vehicle for Johny Downs, Constance Moore, Marjorie Rambeau, Edgar Kennedy, Hedda Hopper and Janet Beecher.

Franchot Tone will make his return to the screen in MGM's "Fast and Furious." The cast also will offer Ann Sothern, James Burke, John Miljan, Lee Bowman, Allyn Joslyn, Virginia Grey and Ruth Hussey.

Columbia's "Beware, Spooks" will star Joe E. Brown with Mary Carlisle. Marc Lawrence, Frank M. Thomas, Lorna Gray, Clarence Kolb and Joe Downing.

"Victor Herbert," a biography with music, is Paramount's contribution to the new work. Allan Jones, Mary Martin, Walter Connolly, Susanna Foster and Jerome Cowan will be the featured performers.

"Abe Lincoln" Started

After considerable preparation RKO-Radio finally got "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" into work. Raymond Massey will star as he did on the stage. The support lists Gene Lockhart, Ruth Gordon, Mary Howard, Dorothy Tree, Harvey Stephens, Minor Watson and Alan Baxter.

Warner Bros. started "Four Wives." The principals are John Garfield, the three Lane sisters, Gail Paige, Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh and May Robson, who appeared in "Four Sisters" and "Daughters Courageous."

Universal completed two pictures. Both are sustaining features. Johny Mack Brown, Bob Baker, Fuzzy Knight, Doris Weston, Forrest Taylor, Anthony Warde, Karl Hackett and George Anderson will be seen in "Chip of the Flying U." Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Anne Nagel, Ona Munson, Guinn Williams, William Lundigan, Leon Ames and Theodore von Eltz comprise the feature cast in "Legion of Lost Fliers."

Interrupted several times, "Here I am a Stranger" finally was moved on to the cutting rooms. It will present Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce, Kay Aldridge, Roland Young, Edward Norris, Richard Dix, Gladys George and John Arledge.

For United Artists distribution Wanger Productions completed Tay Garnett's "Eternally Yours." The principals in the large cast are Loretta Young, David Niven, Hugh Herbert, C. Aubrey Smith, Virginia Field, Broderick Crawford, Raymond Walburn, Zazu Pitts, Eve Arden, Ralph Graves, Dennie Moore and Lionel Pape.

Paramount completed "The Light That Failed," based on one of Rudyard Kipling's best known stories. It will feature Ronald Colman, Walter Huston, Muriel Angelus, Ida Lupino, Colin Tapley, Dudley Digges and Ernest Cossart.

"Ninotchka" came off the active shooting list at MGM. Greta Garbo is the star. Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire, Felix Bressart, Sig Rumann, Alex Grenach, Gregory Gaye, Edwin Maxwell, Rolfe Sedan and Paul Ellis are the featured players.

Columbia finished "Prison Surgeon", in which will be seen Walter Connolly, Onslow Stevens, Douglas Fowley, Iris Meredith, Paul Fix, Nicholas Soussanin and Don Beddoe.

"On Your Toes," a comedy romance with music, dancing and production spectacle, was finished at Warners. Vera Zorina and Eddie Albert ("Brother Rat") are teamed in the leading roles. In support are Alan Hale, Erick Rhodes, James Gleason, Frank McHugh, Queenie Smith, Gloria Dickson, Leonid Kindsky, Berton Churchill, Donald O'Connor and Paul Hurst.

U. S. RULES 25% REICH FILM DUTY

German raw stock, even though exposed and developed in other countries, is subject to a United States countervailing duty of 25 per cent, the United States Customs ruled recently.

This is in line with the countervailing duty imposed by the State Department on other imports from the Reich. Distributors importing films from abroad are protesting the impost.

Orson Welles

Any man who can panic half a continent with a sensationally realistic radio broadcast and has the temerity to rewrite Shakespeare shouldn't find Hollywood a tough nut to crack. Here now to crack the nut that has disheartened many is Orson Welles, whose public career is a revealing demonstration of how one can succeed by pulling himself up by his own bootstraps, by doing things in unorthodox ways.

A non-conformist in spirit and expression, he's here in an unusual capacity under a four way pact with RKO as writer, director, producer and actor. The studio hasn't seen much of this ruddy, robust more-than-six-footer who sports a neat Van Dyke beard. He doesn't believe in doing things that others do.

His hive of industry is a mansion, complete with swimming pool and gardens, atop a Brentwood hill, from which he rarely ventures. There with John Houseman, his partner in Mercury theatre, and Herbert Drake, formerly of the New York Herald-Tribune, and a corps of secretaries, he is busily occupied with his own idea of his RKO-Radio stint.

Claiming more than a rudimentary knowledge of the writing, acting and directing arts, the "man from Mars" admits that he's a bit puzzled as to what a motion picture producer is supposed to do. But he knows that the studio has executive producers, associate producers, unit managers and other experts whom he can depend upon for advice, and he's not afraid.

"Sure I have a story in mind. By the way, isn't that a grand swimming pool and such scenery. The legal departments which have to clear all rights and titles know that." Right away Mr. Welles, treading where possibly wiser angels would be scared to tread, is in the beginning of a probably future exciting situation. "But let the lawyers worry about that for the time," he said. "I guess they know their business."

"Will it be an original, Mr. Welles?"

"Not exactly. You see we're using Joseph Conrad's novel, "Heart of Darkness", for a theme basis. It's an adventure drama localed in Darkest Africa. I'll be the central character in the picture. We're doing a lot of rewriting."

News in Brief

Samuel Goldwyn is delaying production of "Once Upon a Time," the career story of Hans Christian Andersen, in order that the Danish government may do more research.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Madeleine Carroll will be starred in Paramount's "Safari."

The entire box office receipts of the Hollywood premiere of "Hollywood Cavalcade" will be donated to the Motion Picture Relief Fund by 20th Century-Fox.

Due to a nervous breakdown, Dolly Haas has been removed from her role opposite Paul Muni in Warners' "We Are Not Alone." Jane Bryan has been given Miss Haas' part.

Warner Bros. has changed the title "Career Man," which features Joel McCrea, Jeffy Lynn and Brenda Marshall, to "Espionage Agent."

Monogram has assigned Howard Bretherton to direct "Scouts of the Air," next number in the "Tail Spin Tommy" series.

Nunnally Johnson's adaptation having received official approval, 20th Century-Fox will start production of "Grapes of Wrath" about the first of October. John Ford will direct and Henry Fonda will be featured.

Ford Sterling, veteran screen comedian, suffered the loss of his right leg by amputation.

Hal Roach and David W. Griffith have completed negotiations whereby Griffith will direct "1,000,000 B. C."

With Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone and other members of the "Judge Hardy" series going to England for a command performance before the king and queen, MGM may make the next number in the series in London.

SUNDAY SHOW BILLS HIGHLIGHT LEGISLATION

Attorney Sues to Test Constitutionality of Illinois Veto of Bill Limiting Show Length

The week's legislative actions, predominantly local, with Congress and most state legislatures recessed for the summer, were primarily concerned with Sunday showings. Four communities took action on that subject.

Further action was reported on the Sandquist bill, to limit the time length of film shows to 2 hours 15 minutes, recently vetoed by Illinois' Governor Harry Horner after passage by the state legislature. Roland Libonati, attorney, has filed suit to test the constitutionality of the veto, with which the Governor killed the bill later than 10 days after the adjournment of the legislature. The attorney general had ruled that the 10 day period was to run from the time the Governor received the bill, not from the time the legislature adjourned.

The Illinois Legislative Council may study the film industry, with special reference to the double bill situation; representative Sandquist having said that he has received promises of cooperation from two members of the Council, representatives Saltiel and Wood. Mr. Sandquist has left for Hollywood in order to provide himself with more background for his next legislative attempt.

Chicago Reduces Theatre Tax

In Chicago, the City Council has reduced the tax on motion picture theatres, effective September ninth. Applying to theatres making a maximum charge of 25 cents, the tax will be reduced from $250 to $200 a year in houses seating fewer than 350 people, and from $325 to $275 for houses seating between 250 to 750.

Similar to the Sandquist bill in Illinois is the ordinance proposed in the Minneapolis City Council last Friday by alderman Oscar Lund, limiting film programs to two hours and 15 minutes. The ordinance was introduced at the request of W. A. Steffes, president of Allied States Association of the Northwest, according to Mr. Lund.

If adopted, the measure would serve to eliminate most double features. It will be debated by the ordinance and legislation committee of the City Council next week.

Blue Law Enforcement

The Rensselaer, N. Y., Common Council was scheduled to meet Wednesday for reconsideration of the ordinance permitting Sunday films. Having previously passed the measure, by a vote of seven to two, they may still make it law by holding to their vote; the measure having been vetoed by Mayor William Wright. The move is designed to allow the people of Rensselaer to attend pictures there rather than in Albany or Troy on Sundays. The town's one theatre is the Bright Spot, operated by Herbert Gardner.

A movement strictly to enforce Delaware's 144-year-old Sunday blue laws to bring about public reaction to, and modernization of the state statutes enacted in 1795 is the result of last Sunday night's closing of the Blue Hen Theatre at Rehoboth Beach, Del.

The arrest and fining of Manager-Owner Charles S. Horn of Rehoboth and three theatre employes on a charge of breaking the ancient blue laws resulted in agitation for state-wide enforcement of the old laws which forbid "any worldly employment" on the Sabbath in Delaware.

Three Consecutive Fines

The fine of four dollars and costs assessed on Manager Horn was the third in as many straight Sunday's that the theatreman has paid for showing motion pictures in his resort theatre on Sunday.

Caleb M. Wright of Georgetown, attorney for Mr. Horn, said the Sunday blue laws prohibiting movies and any "worldly labor" on the Sabbath should be applied to all cases instead of singling out the theatre. He said the law applies to gasoline stations, newspapers, stores, country clubs, and the like, as well as the movies.

Mr. Horn was advised three weeks ago by Deputy Attorney-General Daniel J. Layton, Jr., of Georgetown that complaints had been received about Sunday movies at the Blue Hen. The action came after the theatre had operated on Sundays during the summer for the past four years.

One Picture on Sunday

The board of aldermen of Sanford, N. C., August 1st, granted permission to R. P. Rosser, local theatre operator, to present one motion picture show on Sunday, with the understanding that the show would not conflict with church services. An amendment to the motion fixed the time of the picture show at 9:15 p.m., which was most desirable to Mr. Rosser.

Mr. Rosser pointed out to the aldermen that a number of cities and towns in the surrounding territory were allowing such shows and to meet this competition he found it necessary to open one of his two theatres on Sunday.

At Crossville, Tenn., August 4th, a special election was held to "feel out sentiment" in regard to Sunday movies. The vote was 233 to 112 in favor of Sunday movies, and city fathers announced that they will pass such an ordinance immediately.

Carlton S. Dargusch and Powers and Barton, counsel for the exhibitors and distributors, respectively, industry defendants in the two suits filed in Columbus, Ohio, by John V. Bostwick, as a taxpayer, challenging authority for tax exemption on film rentals, and urging collection of the impost claimed due the State of Ohio dating from inception of the retail sales tax law, have filed motion in Franklin County court of appeals seeking to have certain portions of the plaintiff's petition stricken out on the ground that the allegations contained therein are wholly inaccurate in the light of a number of precedents established in other cases involving similar issues, as cited in the voluminous lists which accompanied the motion. A memorandum also was filed in support of the motion to strike out the inaccuracies claimed to exist.

No further extension was granted by the court, and it now is expected that the case will come up for hearing during the September term. Meanwhile, pending a decision by the court, the State Tax Department will maintain its previous position that tax is not collectable on film rentals, according to a statement recently made by Thomas J. Herbert, Attorney General of Ohio, despite the opinion of William Evatt, head of the new Sales Tax Board, who holds that film rentals definitely come within the classification of taxable commodities in Ohio.

New Orleans Deadlock

Still deadlocked is the matter of the valuation of New Orleans film exchanges, which had been assessed at $50,000. The exchanges have taken the matter to court in an effort to have the figure reduced.

The state had been willing to value the film in the exchanges, counted as a physical property, on a footage basis, but has not been willing to allow depreciation on the film.

Wisconsin administration leaders were scheduled to attempt to enact a tax bill Wednesday. Whether or not the bill, if enacted, would contain anything to be feared by exhibitors was not known prior to the meeting, although there have been reports of an increased tax on chain stores.

State amusement tax action is also possible in Pennsylvania, at the special session of the General Assembly called for November 13th. The emergency one cent amusement tax previously enacted has expired.

POLICE TO DECIDE WOONSOCKET FILMS

Woonsocket (Rhode Island) exhibitors must provide their police commission with a list of advance bookings. These will be approved, or not, by the commission at its weekly session.

The ruling is the result of the showings of "Club des Femmes," French-made picutre, at the Laurier theatre. The commission, and the Mayor, Felix Toupin, saw the picture and held it "not suitable for children."

Protest Against Cuban Film Tax

American film distributors are protesting against a bill now before the Cuban Congress, under which a tax of 33 per cent of gross box office receipts in Cuba would be imposed upon all films shown in Cuban national territory, according to Department of Commerce reports.

The proceeds of the proposed tax, it is reported, would provide prizes for Cuban film producers, authors and composers, and an annual subsidy of $18,000 for a Cuban theatrical company.

The proposed taxation, it is felt, is an abrogation of the right of free contract and inequitable to American film distributors.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Purely Political Department:

Jo Swerling, Bruce Manning, Rowland V. Lee, Frank Tuttle, Phillip Dunne, Robert Lee, Dudley Digges, Nathaniel West and some other Hollywood personalities, have formed a music-publishing firm. They want to popularize Mr. Jay Gorney's new song, "Mr. Roosevelt, Won't You Please Run Again?"

Not necessarily connected, Mr. Gorney wrote "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?" at about the time Mr. Roosevelt was going into the White House. He'll probably be reissuing that one if Roosevelt runs again.

Birth of twins to the Chicago Pearsons—he's now with WHFC Broadcasting, Chicago, was formerly with Pathe Film—brought from the mails the following note from E. E. Johnson, manager of the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago: "Congratulations on master stroke of showmanship. Consider this double feature a well balanced attraction. Has plenty of wows. Your timely action may do much to avert legislation prohibiting double bills in Illinois. Are you planning any reissues? Trust that shipping case and sound are in good condition."

Life Magazine tells a little tale about cute little Sandy Henville, one-year-old, one of Hollywood's more successful acting finds. Seems that one evening last winter, a Los Angeles milkman named Roy Henville saw a newspaper story saying a 10-month-old baby was needed for a Bing Crosby picture. Mr. Henville debated over whether Sandra, his little babe, should apply for the job. He compromised by leaving four snapshots of her and a note of explanation on the doorsteps of Universal Pictures' Music Director Charles Previn with the morning milk. Mr. Previn showed the snapshots to Director David Butler who was making the Crosby picture. Butler was delighted and promptly sent for the baby.

The baby in the Crosby picture was supposed to be a boy and Butler and the others at the studio assumed that Sandra was. Mr. Henville had not deemed it necessary to say otherwise. Two days along with filming and Sandra's sex was discovered. The studio changed her name to Sandy and tried to keep her sex a secret.

She now gets $200 a week, can say just three words: "Mammy, Daddy, By-By." Nice work.

Errol Flynn got himself disliked by Chicago reporters the other day for acting "high hat" when they met him at the airport. He refused to take off his colored glasses for the photographers, gave them the run-around at the Drake Hotel, disappointed some of them on dates he had agreed to and other nonsensicalities. So when Dorothy Deere, cinema critic for the Chicago American wrote her piece about Errol the next day she informed fans that Mr. Flynn's well publicized smile was "practically teeth deep."

The Newman, Kansas City, was playing "Hell's Kitchen" the other day, and the newspaper ad read "Hell's Kitchen" "Comfortably Cool."

John Chapman concludes that time was when an actor's main worry was his diction, but now it's his trade union's jurisdiction.

SOME in the advertising agency business are smarting pretty badly over the way some Hollywood producers educate the public on gay, exciting times in advertising agencies, picturing what are claimed to be gross untruths about agencies' personalities and blonde models. And Printers' Ink is taking up the case in behalf of the ad people.

To this end, Printers' Ink has compiled what in its opinion represents a composite picture of what the public has witnessed in films dealing with advertising agencies. Some of the stuff is pretty funny.

"An advertising agency executive we learnt at the hands of Hollywood," says Printers' Ink, "is a man who keeps a stock of one-piece feminine bathing suits in his lower desk drawer. He is a man who is likely to stand around his office in his underwear while a tailor measures him for a new suit, and a great amount of traffic—composed of secretaries, copy writers and clients—pours through the room.

"He invariably is rather absent-minded and faintly dim-witted. He is totally devoid of a sense of humor, and he shouts when he uses the telephone.

"Whenever an advertising agency president is shown a preliminary draft of an advertisement he observes irritably that there isn't enough sex in the copy. He is chronically short on his payroll and he is likely to whip off to Europe with the firm's working capital. His organization includes a vice-president who is a spy for a rival agency, or he employs a vice-president in another agency who is a spy for him, or both. Sartorially he is given to double-breasted sharkskin suits, tone-on-tone striped shirts and boutonnieres. At odd moments he rings somebody up on the telephone and secures their account.

"An advertising agent, further, is a man of high-strung nerves, always on the verge of taking to drink, if he hasn't done so already. He deals exclusively in advertising appropriations which are neither one cent more, nor less, than a million dollars. Addicted to swift fits of towering rage, he makes Donald Duck seem a counterpart of Job. He has a secretary who regards him fondly as petulant and precocious.

"An agency's quarters seem to consist exclusively of a reception room, a studio and a president's office. The reception room, invariably crowded, offers evidence that all of an agency's business is transacted with slim, expensively dressed women under 25. The studio, identified by a Neon sign saying 'atelier,' may only be reached by going through the president's office. The latter is always of a size which would enable it to accommodate a polo game with ease. The president usually divides his time between this sanctum, the lobby of a luxurious hotel and a Park Avenue drawing room and it is sometimes confusing to tell which is which and where the action is taking place at a given time. The key to this is that his office is the largest.

"The atmosphere in an agency office, as documented on the screen, is one of breathless, headlong chaos. The principals in the action dash madly about among the furnishings (late American penthouse), usually with unfortunate results upon a heavy piece of statuary balanced on a marble pedestal. At some point a young lady, intent on securing a job as a model, barges into the president's office unannounced and starts taking off her clothes."

Of-all-things Department: Along come headline press wire stories telling about the big, brawny, black-hair-chested Victor McLaglen, the tobacco chewing, bold and bossy Bronx-cheering, tough-cussin' Sergeant Quirt of "What Price Glory"—taking monkey-gland "shots" for a long time and never saying a word about them.

The information was contained in a deposition disclosed in Los Angeles by S. S. Hahn, attorney for Dr. S. G. Sonneland. The physician is suing McLaglen for $2,789 for medical services to the actor and to members of his "Light Horse Brigade," a semi-sports riding group, known as McLaglen's "private army."

Dr. Sonneland asserted McLaglen needed the "shots" to build up his strength and they had been administered since 1935.

In the deposition, however, McLaglen declared he took them mainly because the doctor was a good friend and he wanted to see him make some money.

"If you didn't need these shots for the purposes intended by the doctor," McLaglen was asked, "why did you let him give them to you practically every week?"

"Well," he replied, "the doctor said they would improve my complexion."

Will the newsreel assignment editors please make note of the fact, for future production coverage that the National Retail Meat Dealers Association adjourned a four-day convention at the Hotel Commodore, New York, after approving a resolution asking King George VI to confer the title of "Sir Hot Dog" upon the frankfurter at the forthcoming birthday honors. Through the ensuing months members of the association will seek 5,000,000 signatures to a petition beseeching the King to remember his picnic at President Roosevelt's Hyde Park place where the hot dog won royal favor and to honor the foodstuff which rose from humble beginnings to a place on the royal picnic table.

Precedent for such action, the butchers explained, is to be found in the action of King James I, at Houghton Castle in 1609, when the sovereign conferred knighthood on the loin which has been known as "Sir-loin" ever since.

The motion picture is not the only business enmeshed in trade practice formulation. The Federal Trade Commission announces it is out to "streamline" a code for the public seating industry. Just what they mean by the "public seating industry" is not explained.

Theatricals on Broadway and Hollywood Boulevard occasionally engage in a little cafe brawl and the worst that comes out of it is a slapped face, a blackened eye, a punched nose. But not so in Red Russia, where the other day Zinaida Raich, 43, one of Russia's great character actresses was murdered, her eyes gouged out and her throat cut. Vsevulod Emilievich Meyerhold, famous theatrical producer, and Madame Raich's husband, has been in prison for years because he spoke some political words that were not liked.

MGM, "U", FOX, PARAMOUNT, WANGER BREW SOME NEW BALLYHOO PLANS

There's $11 Opening for "Hollywood Cavalcade", Orphans' Trip to "Star Maker", Search for Oldest-Wedded Couple

The majors are off at full speed with some brand new merchandising plans for new pictures which they will send to exhibitors to open the new show season in two weeks.

Added to the dozen or more "big ballyhoos" already described for as many new films, for freak showings on Indian reservations, steamships, airplanes, in orphanages and elsewhere, the companies are now coming out with a fresh batch of plans for 1939-40 openers around Labor Day.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer this week announced a $250,000 campaign budget for its 3,000,000 color-tale of "The Wizard of Oz."

Universal says it will stage "the biggest premiere in the history of the company" to launch its new starlet, Gloria Jean, in their new picture of Joe Pasternack's "The Under-Pup."

Twentieth Century-Fox is planning a $11-a-seat opening—"first in Hollywood's history" for the debut of its "Hollywood Cavalcade," and promises big things in the merchandising line for its new "The Rains Came."

Paramount is lining up "the most deserving orphans" over the country to take them to Hollywood to ballyhoo their "Star Maker."

Walter Wanger is understood to be ready to send scouts around the U. S. to dig up the longest-wed pair. Not coincidental is the title of his new picture, "Eternally Yours."

Others have other plans, as pretentious, they promise, to be disclosed shortly, on completion.

Metro's "Oz"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer started stressing newspaper and public attention on the opening of "The Wizard of Oz," on young Judy Garland, of the film, through a series of public appearances in the east, including the Capitol, on Broadway, New York, where both opened Thursday. Accompanying Miss Garland is young Mickey Rooney, of the Metro talent roster and the home office press agents appeared well satisfied Monday with the noise and attention received for the picture on the arrival of the pair at Grand Central Station, New York.

Nationally, the company says it will spend $250,000 in the public press for pre-selling "The Wizard of Oz," using full page, full color ads in 28 Sunday comic sections of city newspapers, with a total circulation of 13,721,764. The ads are in comic strip style.

The entire campaign adds up to a total circulation of 91,912,853, of which 64,736,771 is magazine circulation and 27,176,082 is Sunday comics and daily newspapers.

Two hundred high school boys and girls, picked from all parts of New York, including the slum and Ghetto sections, were guests Wednesday, at luncheon, with Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland in the Waldorf-Astoria, which was transformed into a "Wizard of Oz fairyland" for the occasion. It was the first cocktail-less cocktail party ever given for movie stars in New York, said Metro.

THIS PATRON WANTS FOUR FEATURES A SHOW

In a poll conducted by Eddie Mansfield, manager of the Regent, Kansas City, one patron was emphatic for four films, plus comedy, newsreel and sport reels and would like to see Bank Night revived. The poll showed that most of the Regent clientele prefer double bills, that many are in favor of triple bills.

Another patron tersely commented, in the space designated "What would you like to see?" in four words, "Mae West, Mae West". Another wants "Don Duck every day".

Fox's "Cavalcade"

"For the first time in its history," says Fox, "Hollywood will stage a 'swank' premiere as a 100 per cent charity affair when Twentieth Century-Fox will debut the color production of "Hollywood Cavalcade" at the Four Star Theatre in September.

Complete with arc lights, dressed celebrities and autograph hunters, this premiere is being planned by Twentieth Century-Fox as an $11 per ticket affair, the entire gross proceeds to go to the Motion Picture Relief Fund.

This move was suggested by the theme of this Darryl F. Zanuck production which outlines the growth of the motion picture from the early bathing beauty and custard pie era to the talking film of today.

Many celebrities of silent days were found to be now ill or destitute, being cared for by the industry's own charity institution, the Motion Picture Relief Fund. This fund is maintained by donations from film workers and run by a board from the various film crafts under the presidency of Jean Hersholt.

It was the studio's idea to add to the fund by turning over the entire gross proceeds to the Motion Picture Relief Fund. All expenses will be paid by Twentieth Century-Fox to insure a maximum return.

Universal's "Under-Pup"

From Universal came the announcement this week that it will stage "the biggest premiere in the history of the company" to launch its new starlet, Gloria Jean, in Joe Pasternak's "The Under-Pup." The opening will take place in Scranton, Pa., Gloria's home town, August 24th, with critics and correspondents from every top city, and editors of the industry's trade magazines, invited. With Gloria Jean and her family present, the affair will be a double-theatre premiere, the picture showing at both the Strand and Comerford theatres on opening night.

The Scranton premiere will be one of a series of publicity events to be staged by Universal during a fortnight's visit to the east by Gloria. Her appearances over national network programs, as guest of the World's Fair on "Gloria Jean Day" in New York and as the subject of a number of other activities now being lined up, are part of Universal's campaign.

Not only will the critics—more than 100 are expected—attend the Scranton premieres but they will be invited to witness the balance of the program for Gloria during a week's stay in and about New York. They will arrive in New York individually from their respective cities and will proceed to Scranton in a special train.

More Fox Plans

Plans for an extensive advertising and exploitation campaign for "The Rains Came," were announced Tuesday by Charles E. McCarthy, ad chief of Twentieth Century-Fox, upon his return to New York from Hollywood where he viewed the screen version of Louis Bromfield's novel, and discussed the campaign with studio executives and Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution.

Full page ads in color to run in the American Weekly which is carried by 21 newspapers with a total circulation of 6,615,558 and in This Week magazine with a combined circulation of 5,603,380 in 25 newspapers will augment a special assist advertising schedule to be run in 300 newspapers in 90 cities.

An intensive exploitation and publicity drive is going forward now from the publicity departments in New York and Hollywood and one of the features of the advance campaign will be a trailer in which Producer Darryl Zanuck, Author Bromfield, Director Clarence Brown and Associate Producer Harry Joe Brown will appear.

Paramount's Orphans

Twelve "most deserving orphans" have been chosen from as many leading American cities, with more about to be named for a trip to Hollywood as guests of Linda Ware, 14-year-old orphan singer of the screen.

Six to be selected will complete the party of 18 that Paramount is taking to the film capital for a round of events, climaxed by the world press premiere August 21st of Paramount's "The Star Maker," in which Linda makes her debut opposite Bing Crosby.

Most of the girls, who range from ten to 14 years, were chosen by their fellow orphans.

Republic Sells Butterfield

James R. Grainger, president of Republic Pictures, returned to New York Wednesday from Detroit after selling the company's entire 1939-40 lineup to the Butterfield circuit's 110 theatres.

Are Husbands Necessary

(Paramount)

Comedy Romance

On first glance at the production, considering the tone of the title, the fact that direction is by Edward H. Griffith, whose record includes such photoplays as "Cafe Society," "No More Ladies," "Biography of a Bachelor Girl" and "Another Language," and that the stars are Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll, it might appear that "Are Husbands Necessary" will be sophisticated problem play. It will be a problem play all right, smart, witty and clever in dialogue and situations, but comedy promises to be the fundamental entertainment element.

The heroine is a modern business executive. Endowed with beauty, brains and a good income, men, to her, are unnecessary, but her aunt spends most of her time trying to get her niece married, and in her opinon any man will do. The predictions of a fortune teller convince the heroine that strange things are going to happen and that a tall, dark and handsome man is coming into her life. Thus is erected the situation that has Osa Massen chasing MacMurray; MacMurray chasing Miss Carroll, Allan Jones chasing both, and the aunt, Helen Broderick chasing everybody. The chase, originating in New York, goes first to Bermuda and then to Bali. An orphan child enters into it and so does love which winds up happily, after many exciting detours for heroine and hero.

Release date: September 29, 1939.

Stop, Look and Love

(20th Century-Fox)

Domestic Comedy

For its entertainment substance, "Stop, Look and Love," a blending of comedy and romance, will adapt a condition that mirrors the everyday problems and foibles of millions of average American families of today.

It will detail what happens when the grownup daughter, whose mother always insists upon playing the wedding bells every time the girl has a date, falls in love. While her over-anxious mother nearly ruins the romance, sidelines of the story will take the audience into the Haller family circle, where the henpecked father who strives to see that his daughter may lead her own life has a tough job on his hands contending with a wise-cracking, lazy son, when he isn't being driven to the verge of nervous prostration by his youngest child's piano practising.

For name values the picture will offer Jean Rogers, who was featured in "Elsa Maxwell's Hotel for Women," the able comedian, William Frawley, funny Minna Gombell, good looking Robert Kellard, who has been seen with Jane Withers in "Always in Trouble" and "Boy Friend," comic Eddy Collins, Cora Sue Collins, Jay Ward, Roger McGee and Lillian Porter.

The origin of the piece is the stage play, "The Family Upstairs," which was adapted to the screen by Harold Tashis and Sada Cowen. The song number is by Sidney Clare and Jule Styne. Direction was assigned to Otto Brower.

Release date: To be determined.

The Flying Deuces

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy

"The Flying Deuces" will be Boris Morros' initial picture as an independent producer. Formerly musical director and associate producer at Paramount, Boris Morros is probably one of America's best known showmen and outstanding musicians. He has written 317 scores for pictures, composed "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers" and produced "Chauve Souris." The stars will be Oliver Hardy and Stan Laurel, and A. Edward Sutherland is the director.

Major locales of the story are Paris and French Morocco. The plot concerns the trials of a pair of American fish peddlers on the loose in Paris. When Hardy's love dream bursts, he convinces Laurel that both can forget their troubles by joining the French Foreign Legion. The experiences they encounter in a desert outpost cause them to forget more quickly than they thought, but the troubles they stir up for the Legion destine them to a place before the firing squad. Escaping, they board a plane which is being prepared for an endurance flight.

The supporting cast will include Jean Parker, Reginald Gardiner, Sheila Darcy, Jenifer Gray, Fay McKenzie, Paul Irving, Charles Middleton, James Finlayson and Jean Del Val.

Release date: To be determined.

Dancing Co-Ed

(MGM)

Collegiate Musical Comedy

Light comedy romance, with lots of music, plenty of dancing and a featured parade of youthful talent are being counted upon by MGM, producer Edgar Selwyn and director S. Sylvan Simon to provide the necessary audience interest values and showmen's exploitation ideas in "Dancing Co-Ed." The story has a bit of a Hollywood-making-a-picture atmosphere, but most of its action occurs in a college.

For names the production will offer Lana Turner; Richard Carlson, last with MGM in "These Glamour Girls," Ann Rutherford, Lee Bowman, June Preisser, Lynne Lewis, Mary Beth Hughes, the more mature Leon Errol, Roscoe Karns, Thurston Hall, Monte Woolley and Walter Kingsford and Artie Shaw and his band.

Comedy is the plot's essence. News that his dancing leading lady is about to become a mother is a million dollar headache for a motion picture producer, but a nimble witted publicity man comes to his rescue. He suggests a dancing co-ed contest conducted in every college in the land, but to protect himself against any accidental winner, he plants a vaudeville dancer (who will be the winner) in an institution and sends a secretary along to be her policeman. The dancer falls in love with the campus hero and when Shaw's band comes along to conduct the contest, it's the secretary-policeman, who, filling in for the mysteriously missing heroine, wins the dancing co-ed title.

Release date: Not determined.

Seventeen

(Paramount)

Adolescent Romance

Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen" is recognized as one of the cleverest, wittiest and gayest stories of puppy love ever written. The book, published about 1915, swept the country like wildfire. Produced as a stage play a year or so later, it was a hit in metropolitan centers and was a success for over three years on the road. Incidentally, Stuart Walker, who produced the story originally in Indianapolis and guided its destinies to the remotest towns and villages, is producing it for Paramount.

Although modernized, the present version, prepared by Agnes Christine Johnston and Stuart Palmer, will retain the original charm that made it one of the most delightful sagas of American adolescent love and family life. Oldtimers will need no description of it, but for those unfamiliar with its basic plot, it is the story of 17-year-old Willie Baxter, who, acutely aware of approaching manhood, falls head over heels in love with Lola Pratt, a sophisticated city girl who has come to visit her country cousin. Courting his lady with might and main, Willie experiences pecks of trouble as the fickle lady gives him the go-by and his friends desert him. Only in the sympathy of his family does he find solace for a blasted life.

Jackie Cooper will be seen in the leading role, with newcomer Betty Field appearing as Lola. Otto Kruger and Ann Shoemaker will be the boy's father and mother, and another newcomer, little Betty Moran, will be his impish sister. Other personalities are Norma Gene Nelson, Buddy Pepper, Donald Haines, Peter Hayes, Snowflake and Jody Gilbert.

Legion of Lost Fliers

(Universal)

Aviation Melodrama

When the screen sets out to tell any of the many stories about blacklisted fliers, it usually locates their adventures—and all the melodrama, romance, comedy and thrills that go with them—in the South American jungles or China. This time, for a change, the setting will be the snow-capped mountains and icy wastes of Alaska. The story is vividly similar to many previously told. The disgraced flier, in the face of overwhelming handicaps forces a confession from the pilot responsible for his disgrace, proves himself an exceptional aviator and wins the girl.

The picture will team Richard Arlen and Andy Devine in another of their action series. It will supplement the importance of their names with Anne Nagel, Ona Munson, Guinn Williams, William Lundigan, Theodore von Eltz and Jerry Marlowe.

"Legion of Lost Fliers" is being produced by Ben Pivar, who originated the series, and it is being directed by Christy Cabanne, who handled the first two numbers, "Mutiny on the Blackhawk" and "Tropic Fury."

188,503 ATTEND 186 BINGOES IN MONTH

And Cincinnati Independents Consider Demanding Permission to Use the Game

Chance games this week brought new faces into the parade of police, legislative or judicial threats, new competition in non-theatrical institutions, and a flood of ideas for new games, claimed to be "legal in every way."

In Cincinnati, the competition from Bingo in churches, religious societies and fraternal groups was implemented this week by action of the city council, which now allows labor, civic, athletic and patriotic societies to use this game. Independent exhibitors considered petitioning the council to include theatres among the groups allowed to use the game.

"Our business has been dealt a solar plexus blow, even with Bingo restricted to a few select groups," said one exhibitor. "But now it will be as bad and even worse than before, when the city was 'wide open.'"

188,503 at 156 Games

Police Chief Weatherly last week issued his July report, showing that 156 games were played in that month, under the present system; that their total attendance was 188,503; their admission receipts, $154,426; their profit, $37,367; their profit to sponsoring organizations, $117,058.

In Milwaukee, Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch said that games were not "immoral" when conducted under church regulations; that they were "recreational" and that the proceeds were for charity.

In that city, there was pending an action in circuit court brought by Charles Trampe, president of Film Service, Inc., and a principal in several theatres, against the Bahn Frei Hall, asking that it be restrained from operating Bingo games.

Another hearing was to be held next Monday.

The proponents of Bingo in that city, and state, said last week that they would seek legislative action to enable fraternal and religious groups to use the game.

However, the drive against Bingo in Milwaukee has resulted in suspension of the game by several church groups.

Police Action

In Sheboygan county, Wisconsin, action by police agencies against the game as used by fraternal units and churches aroused hostile editorial comment.

The Wisconsin Senate has advanced to passage the Paulson bills, which prohibit granting of prizes by lot, chance or drawing to attract people to theatres, stores, auctions, or taverns.

They declare lotteries a nuisance and empower the district attorney or any citizen of the country to start circuit court action to abate such nuisance and perpetually enjoin every person guilty thereof from continuing, maintaining or permitting its use.

Following completion of the Senate action, the measure goes to the Assembly.

In Pittsburgh, a new theatre game is being tried at the Warner Etna-Harris. It is called "I Got It," is the creation of Daniel McSweeney, advertising salesman, and is copyrighted by Mayer Sniderman, an attorney and McSweeney's partner. It combines the features of Bingo and the "Professor Quiz" idea.

It is estimated that almost 70 per cent of Western Pennsylvania's theatres are using games or giveaways. Bank Night is favored in the Pittsburgh area.

Exhibitors using games in the territory are proceeding on the decision last March in Meadville, county seat of Crawford, by Judge Clare Kent, ruling that Bank Night was not a lottery.

In New York City, exhibitors this month were abandoning their efforts to eliminate games. Failures of the license commissioner, Paul Moss, to enforce regulations against non-theatrical mediums using games was given as the reason.

Games had been eliminated on July 3rd from most of the "West Side" theatres. This was to have been a "trial" ground; if found successful, the abandonment of games would have been spread to other sections of the city.

The Century circuit, operating in Brooklyn and Queens, of New York City, had also dropped games; but on July 19th, announced their resumption.

Commissioner Moss has stated that the failure of the experiments will not deter him from his intention of ridding theatres of games; but that he would withhold police action, pending a court decision on a case affecting the Atlantic theatre.

Race Competition in Chicago

In Chicago, exhibitors were facing new race track competition, with the opening of the Washington Race Track. A "Bank Night" is being held daily at the track; $5,000 is awarded to whomever picks seven straight winners.

In Connecticut, the state which by recent legislative enactment, allows virtually everyone but the theatre owner to play Bingo, two concessionaires have been fined at Savin Rock, for using a similar game, without the proper permits. Under the new state ruling, the permits are sharply scrutinized.

Sam Herman, promoter of the "Jitterbug" contests at the Balaban and Katz State-Lake theatre, Chicago, stopped the contests after requests by city authorities.

From Hamilton, Ohio, there is also word of a Bank Night case; in this instance, called "Question Night." William Dodds, manager of the Imperial was fined $50 for operating the game.

In New York, Funk and Wagnalls has signed with De Luxe Theatre Premiums, in a deal reported involving $1,000,000, for exclusive distribution by De Luxe in theatres, of the New Standard Encyclopedia.

In London, a checkup by the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association showed that no British theatres were using Bank Night.

Pawtucket Bans "Ecstasy"

On the grounds that it is "sensuous, detrimental to the morality of youth and saturated with immorality" the foreign-made "Ecstasy" has been banned by Harry F. Curvin, public safety director of Pawtucket, R. I. The film had been scheduled to begin a week's engagement at the Capitol there when it was banned.

The National Council on Freedom from Censorship this week assailed as "capricious bureaucratic censorship" the banning of the French film, "Harvest," by the New York State Board of Censors as "immoral and tending to corrupt morals." The Council offered to aid exhibitors in an appeal of the Board's ruling to the courts. The film is based on Jean Giono's novel 'Regain," published in this country under the title of "Harvest."

Cleveland House To Reopen

The Penn Square theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, will reopen early in September presenting foreign language films exclusively. The City theatre, which operated as the foreign film house in Cleveland last season under the direction of the Herbert Rosner circuit, will not be reopened. The Penn Square has been redecorated and will be under the direction of Ralph Rose and Harry Amber.

What about Paramount TRAILERS?

Paramount's announcement to the trade, in May of this year, that it would produce and distribute its own screen trailers, has aroused gratifying interest in the field. Showmen everywhere have been writing in to tell how glad they are that we have taken this forward-looking, constructive step. Many of them ask for more detailed information. Most of them make suggestions based on their own experience with trailers. Because the queries in the letters we are receiving hit a common pattern, Paramount takes this opportunity to answer some of them for EVERY exhibitor.

Q. WHEN will Paramount begin to service its trailers?

A. The first Paramount trailer on the new set-up will be issued for the Paramount picture to be released January 5, 1940.

Q. WHY is Paramount undertaking to supply its own studio-made trailers?

A. Paramount believes that a trailer planned, made and distributed by the men who make the picture can be packed with more showmanship, more originality, and more right-on-the-picture selling power than a trailer made any other way.

Q. WHO will plan and make the new Paramount trailers?

A. YOU will! Paramount, for months, has been contacting showmen everywhere; learning through interviews, letters, questionnaires, what EXHIBITORS think a successful selling trailer should be—getting ideas for unusual presentations, new selling approaches. PARAMOUNT'S TRAILERS WILL BE THE TRAILERS YOU ASK FOR —in every sense of the phrase!

Q. WHAT sort of trailers will Paramount supply—will they suit MY audience?

A. Most emphatically they will. At present, Paramount plans to issue two styles of trailer for each picture — a De Luxe trailer for first-run houses, a regular trailer for subsequent runs. These will be styled to SELL the audiences they're made for, in the manner that's best for each picture.

Q. HOW will Paramount trailers differ from other trailers?

A. They'll be different in that they will be YOUR trailers—made by showmen for showmen, planned with your suggestions in mind! Paramount will continually check the field for criticism, new ideas, new selling slants. And Paramount will use YOUR ideas.

PARAMOUNT TRAILERS ARE YOUR TRAILERS!

When Tomorrow Comes

(Universal)

A Love Story

"When Tomorrow Comes" tells a sincerely elemental love story in a sincerely elemental way. It is one of the most untheatrical pictures this reporter has viewed in years. Never, even when the situations are particularly tense or violent, does it give occasion for any spontaneous excitement. Yet it has a powerful appeal for the adult-minded.

Its worth as screen merchandise is the result of the able and convincing manner in which Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer and Barbara O'Neil played their roles to make the story believable, the manner in which John Stahl (an expert in handling this type of screen material) produced and directed it, the honest and dignified treatment which screen play writer Dwight Taylor gave James M. Cain's original, and the artistic and spectacular settings devised by Jack Otterson which John Mescall photographed expertly.

Waitress "Helen" is attracted by "Philip," a man she believes to be an itinerant piano-player. They fall in love, but she does not discover until they are marooned during a hurricane that he is a great concert pianist. She does not learn, until after their rescue, that he is a married man. Her ignorance is not the result of any deception on "Philip's" part. She learns that his wife "Madeleine" (Miss O'Neil gives a memorably impressive performance) is mentally unbalanced.

"Madeleine," with a keen discernment that sometimes seems to be the fortune of those who live on the border line of mental blankness, makes a dramatic plea to "Helen" that she will not deprive her of the only affection that keeps her alive, that gives her hope. "Helen" and "Philip" honestly realize that they face a barrier which cannot be overcome while "Madeleine" lives. They part, hoping that they can be together again when an uncertain tomorrow comes. All that happens within 72 hours.

The picture does not seek to point any moral any more than it assumes to be a problem play or be another version of the triangular romance plot. It simply narrates a circumstance that often has happened, and it shows how three persons adjust their relationships. The story itself has unique value for intelligent showmanship, in addition to the names of Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer.

Previewed at the Pantages Theatre, Hollywood, the reaction of the audience convinced the writer that it was appreciative of the privilege of seeing an unusual picture.—G. M.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Produced and directed by John M. Stahl. Screen play by Dwight Taylor. Based on a story by James M. Cain. Joseph McDonough assistant director. Milton Carruth film editor. Photographed by John Mescall. P. C. A. certificate number 5523. Running time, 95 minutes. Release date: August 11, 1939. General audience classification.

Golden Boy

(Columbia)

Prize Ring Melodrama

Knockout is the completely appropriate word for this melodrama of the prize ring. It's a powerful story told in a straight sequence of punches, neither glorifying nor condemning the fight industry, but packing an entertainment wallop from bell to bell.

The top billing stars are Barbara Stanwyck and Adolph Menjou, both giving sparkling accounts of themselves, but the story puts the principal emphasis on William Holden, a newcomer, whose handling of the title role is something for fans to talk about. One Lee J. Cobb, likewise new to films, steals the picture repeatedly as the fighter's father. All the others listed added to their stature by their performances.

All that publicity about the search for the unknown actor to play Clifford Odet's "Golden Boy" and all those newspaper stories about the price the studio paid for the play are amply justified by the job the film producer, William Perlberg, the director, Rouben Mamoulian, and four distinguished screen playwrights have turned out. Copy reminding the public of all that fanfare is clearly indicated.

As brought to the screen, free of certain features, Mr. Odet's stage play might have been better without, the film takes an Italian boxer from his first fight to the rank of title contender. A girl, a manager, the boy's father, who wants him to be a violinist, and a gangster influence him this way and that, always logically and interestingly. The telling is skillful and the total effect is tremendous.

The place is New York, the time the present. Two or three incidents suggest discouraging juvenile attendance.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood, where it drew frequent applause and gave manifest satisfaction.—William R. Weaver.

Dust Be My Destiny

(Warners)

Melodrama

"Dust Be My Destiny" combines the entertainment and commercial qualities of a factual topical story with those of vividly imagined fiction. This and the sympathetic treatment of the sustaining love interest and the tension slackening comedy make the production meaty melodrama. It features sinister action. There are many things in it, performances of the lead and featured players, unexpected twists the story takes, and the character of settings and circumstance which exhibitors undoubtedly will be eager to call to patrons' attention. Likewise there are things which exhibitors may choose to ignore, trusting that patrons may not notice them too acutely.

John Garfield again is presented in a role of which he is rapidly becoming a type representative. Believing that the world is against him, that he hasn't a chance, he's an enemy of law and order with a chip on his shoulder. The girl is Priscilla Lane and the principal supporting players are Stanley Ridges, Charlie Grapewin, John Litel, Alan Hale, Billy Halop and Bobby Jordan. Using Jerome Odlum's crime-career novel as a basis, the screen play, developed by Robert Rossen with Lewis Seiler directing, covers a lot of territory in theme and counterplot as well as geography.

"Joe Bell," a wild boy of the road, arrested for a minor crime, lands in a work camp where "Mabel," stepdaughter of the superintendent, falls in love with him. The pair flee after "Joe" thinks he has killed "Charlie." Ensue long days of hitch-hiking and freight-hopping, during which the pair are married at a theatre wedding. Temporary sanctuary is found in employment with "Nick," but "Joe's" jail delivery of "Mabel" sends them on the lam again. In New York, trying to hock a camera, "Joe" photographs a bank robbery, sells his pictures to editor "Leonard" and they are instrumental in causing the arrest of the criminals. But the notoriety brings him to the attention of the state from which he fled and he is returned there to face a murder charge. "Mabel's" honest story, however, wins his acquittal.

To a great extent the picture is developed in a highly theatrical manner. So many implausible episodes are contained that it makes those that are logical hard to believe. Yet the picture is not supposed to be an expose or a preachment any more than "I Stole a Million" was. It's simply action melodrama and romance, the spirit of which tends toward the grim and bitter.

Chicken Wagon Family

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy Melodrama

Jane Withers is growing artistically as well as physically, and the lively young star's assignment in this is the kind a growing young woman of her peculiar ability feasts upon. She is the mainspring of the picture and always its focal point, despite the presence of such known players as Leo Carrillo, Spring Byington, Hobart Cavanaugh and Marjorie Weaver. That is what her fans want her to be and why they have placed her twice among the top ten Money Making Stars in MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S poll of exhibitors.

The Harry Benefield novel had a wide reading and much mention in the magazines. Additionally, it was one of the stories enacted via radio by Orson Welles shortly after he had stirred up the nation with that Mars broadcast and while, presumably, a large part of the listening public was acutely Welles-conscious. It is, therefore, a story of considerable ready-made acceptance.

Viola Brothers Shore wrote the screen play and Herbert L. Leeds directed the picture. Neither sought to make more of the story than there is in it. What's in it is an account of the adventures in New York City of an itinerant merchant and his family, who drive into the metropolis in the mule-drawn wagon in which they've been touring the back roads of the provinces these many years. These adventures are both comic and melodramatic, about 50-50, and could happen just about as they seem to. The result is pleasing entertainment.

Miss Withers is a little taller and a little leaner, perhaps a little less headlong and a deal more certain of her timing. There is no awkwardness and no embarrassment. There would seem to be no reason why her 'teens should hold terror for her, or disappointment for exhibitors, in material as well suited to her ripening talents as this one.

Previewed at the Uptown theatre, Los Angeles, where it seemed to give complete satisfaction.—W. R. W.

Hawaiian Nights

(Universal)

Musical

Swing music and Hawaiian melodies blend in Universal's "Hawaiian Nights," a musical whose chief action takes place in and around the famed resort. Insouciantly entertaining, the story brings to Hawaii a young man interested in leading a swing band, but whose father insists upon his following the hotel business. He meets the daughter of a rival hotel proprietor and aids her in defeating his father's "grab" of the other hotel.

The romantic leads are Johnny Downs and Constance Moore, with Mary Carlisle, Eddie Quillan, Etienne Girardot, Thurston Hall, Samuel S. Hinds, Robert Emmett Keane and Willie Fung supporting. The music is provided by Matty Malneck and his orchestra, and Sol Hoopiis Hawaiian Band.

Albert S. Rogell directed, from a screenplay by Charles Grayson and Lee Loeb, who adapted the original story by John Grey. Max Golden produced.

These Glamour Girls

(MGM)

Glamour Stuff in College

Capitalizing upon reams of current newspaper space given to debutantes and glamor girls, self-made and otherwise, "These Glamour Girls" is a timely exploitation picture of adult nature. Based on college life and the allure of girls being rushed by men-in-the-best-fraternities, the plot has for contrast and motivation the actions of a taxi dance hall girl thrown helter skelter into what soon turns out to be trouble and more trouble.

The cast includes Lew Ayres, Lana Turner, Tom Brown, Richard Carlson, Jane Bryan, Anita Louise, Marsha Hunt, Ann Rutherford, Mary Beth Hughes, Owen Davis, Jr., Ernest Truex, Sumner Getchell, Peter Hayes, Don Castle, and Tom Collins, a sufficiency of marquee names. A. Sylvan Simon directed the Sam Zimbalist production. Jane Hall and Marion Parsonnett wrote the screen play from a Cosmopolitan Magazine story by Miss Hall.

Basically, the story is not new. "Phil Griswold," wealthy young man, meets "Jane," taxi dancer, while drunk, and invites her to a fraternity house party to which he also invites a girl whom he is supposed to marry. Complications develop, furthered by a display of cattiness by the girls when the identity of "Jane" is discovered. Romances are shattered, a "perennial Prom" girl commits suicide after being compromised, and "Phil" finds he loves "Jane."

New Frontier

(Republic)

Western

Confronted with another problem of the never static movie west, "The Three Mesquiteers" ride again. The solution is summarily attended to when the last reel draws alarmingly near its close.

The script has the Mesquiteers falter and bungle before that last fadeout, while their legion of fans squirm in their seats.

The roll call of the "Mesquiteers" finds John Wayne as "Stony Brooke," Ray Corrigan, the only remaining member of the original trio, in the role of "Tucson Smith," and Raymond Hatton as "Rusty Joslin," the names based on characters created by William Colt MacDonald.

William Berke was associate producer and the film was directed by George Sherman.

The settlement of New Hope is celebrating the 50th anniversary of its founding, when news arrives that the valley is to be converted into a reservoir for a nearby city. "The Mesquiteers" are taken in by a land grant swindle and it is through their efforts that the people agree to leave the settlement and settle on the new land. Too late the "Mesquiteers" discover that the promised land is a mirage. They try to warn the settlers but are captured and held prisoners. Escaping, they overcome "Gilbert," the heavy, and his cohorts. In the end the settlers move to the new land after the state has run an irrigation pipe into the barren country.

Action, as in all of this series, is the keynote.

Where's That Fire

(Twentieth Century-Fox British)

Firefighting

Indications that Will Hay's sponsors seem disinclined to widen his field of appeal, apparent in his more recent films, are again manifest in this latest creation by the Islington chefs. It is true that the bold determination on originality which had previously cast the schoolmaster comedian as a lawyer, as a railway porter and as a skipper of a scow, now dresses him in the habiliments of a fire brigade chief, but the slapstick mixture is very much as before, and the appeal of the unsophisticated comedy is neither to those who have been satiated nor to those who have not yet been converted. The aim is obviously and directly at that audience which wants neither subtlety nor novelty, which is set ready to laugh at Mr. Hay and his stooges before the film starts. Exhibitors booking the picture, on the other hand, are likely to be critical of its box office merits, and there would not seem to be much likelihood of an overseas market or one outside that of the star's devotees.

Hay's adventures as "Captain Viking," chief of the Bishops Wallop fire brigade, lead him into mishaps with his own apparatus, find him fighting a fire on to which his assistant, Moore Marriott, has hosed petrol, and ultimately capturing crooks after the Crown Jewels in the Tower of London, with the aid of a formula which buries them beneath an ocean of soap suds. In between whiles the trio—for Graham Moffatt, the cheeky boy, is again included—wrestle with a pole in a china shop and a gout-stricken invalid's bedroom, argue with the Mayor and have their fire engine stolen. It is rather the two-reel comedy brand of humor strung to feature length. That there is a public for it, there is of course no doubt. Whether that publice will increase by virtue of "Where's That Fire" is another matter.

Both script and dialogue are less effective

Apart from the Hay-Marriott-Moffatt trio, Peter Gawthorne alone seems successful in instilling life into his characterization.

Shown to a trade audience in a small preview theatre, the film did provoke laughter at appropriate moments, but exhibitor reaction seemed, in general, to be that it would need stronger material to retain the comedian's public next time.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Bad Lands

(RKO Radio)

Western

This is a western cut from a different mould. It tells the story of a posse of nine men and a sheriff marooned in the "Bad Lands," and surrounded by Apaches. The little band that, when starting out on the hunt for a half-breed killer resembles any posse in any western, develops into 10 distinctive character types under the imminence of death. It is a film not unlike "The Lost Patrol" in its study of men knowing they are about to die.

The posse's roll call starts with the sheriff (Robert Barrat), a man strong-willed and powerful but withal kind and understanding; "Mulford" (Douglas Walton), a tenderfoot who lacks confidence but is not without courage; "Cluff" (Andy Clyde) and "Garth" (Francis Ford), veterans of the Civil War and inseparable companions; "Eaton" (Robert Coote), a dishonorably discharged English Army officer who has covered up for a recalcitrant brother; "Sweet" (Guinn Williams), an easy going cowboy who wants to live but is not afraid to die; "Lyman" (Noah Berry, Jr.), a braggard who is found wanting; "Curley Tom" (Paul Hurst), dependable veteran of the west; "Lopez" (Francis McDonald), a half crazed groom whose murdered bride was the reason for the posse, and "Rayburn" (Addison Richards), who fears no man and asked no quarter.

"Eaton" is the first to die, followed by "Cluff." When "Cluff" went "Garth" cared no longer what happened and he and "Sweet" slipped out under cover of night to seek help, and both are killed. "Lopez" goes mad and rushes out into the night after knifing "Curley Tom". When the sheriff and "Mulford" are the only ones left they trick the Apaches into exposing themselves but a stray bullet finishes "Mulford". When the cavalry arrives the sheriff alone still lives.

Dick Tracy's G-Men

(Republic)

Fifteen-Chapter Serial

"Dick Tracy" on the screen is slowly but surely acquiring the permanence of "Dick Tracy" of printers' ink. Coming on the heels of "Dick Tracy" and "Dick Tracy Returns," both serials, this continues to follow the ace detective as he grapples mentally and physically with the head of an international spy-ring by the name of "Zarnoff." Judging from what happens in the first chapter this serial appears likely to be as popular as its predecessors, replete with action, suspense and more action. Ralph Byrd continues in the "Tracy" role with Irving Pichel as "Zarnoff" and Ted Pearson, Phylis Isley, Walter Miller and many others in support. Based on the cartoon character created by Chester Gould the many angled story is an original concoction of Barry Shipman, Franklyn Adreon, Rex Taylor, Ronald Davidson and Sol Shor. William Witney and John English divided the directorial assignment. Running time, first episode, 29 minutes. General audience classification.

Sportlight Study of Feet

Not concerned with the steps of a safety campaign but rather a pictorial study of human and animal walking and running techniques, this Grantland Rice Sportlight number offers an interesting variety of intriguing shots through the medium of regular and slow motion camera work. Running the gamut in its inspection of two and four legged ambulation and racing, the subject studies the uncertain, experimental toddling of a baby, a comparative shot of a giant and a midget pacing each other, the brisk military march, the shuffling gait of a Southern negro and the formulated step of a prison gang. Further examples include racing, both human, equine and canine, the waddle of a hippo, the bouncing travel method of a kangaroo, the characteristic gait of the duck and the stately step of the giraffe. Humor and human interest are combined with excellent camera reporting to produce a short whose material should educe interest and entertainment from any gathering composed of the genus erectus.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Looney Tune

A perfectly "ducky" miniature is this most recent pen and ink composition from the Looney Tune gallery. Peopled with Mr. and Mrs. Daffy Duck and Porky, as principal portraits, the subject concerns a blessed event that comes to the Daffy Ducks. The happy occasion almost turns into something tragic when a nasty natured hawk snatches away one of the brood. But daddy Daffy comes to the rescue of his offspring and the group is united into one not too happy family. Special sequences which will particularly delight audiences are those portions picturing Mrs. Daffy hatching her brood, papa's rescue of the young one and the finale with the pursuer and pursued forgetting the bitterness of the chase over a jug of potent beverage. The action and the pace of depiction match in speed the breezy rate of the gags.—Running time, seven minutes.

Bushman, Lew Cody, Mabel Normand, Clara Kimball Young, Bessie Love, Constance Talmadge, Norman Talmadge, Lillian and Dorothy Gish, Jack Dempsey, Estelle Taylor, Antonio Moreno, Rudolph Valentino, Buster Keaton, and others.—running time, 10 minutes.

French Answer on "Smuggling"

Transmission to the United States of motion picture films in diplomatic pouches, permitting them to enter the country without passing through the customs, will be guarded against in the future, the U. S. State Department was assured Monday by French Ambassador Count de Saint-Quentin at Washington.

In a formal note submitted to Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles, the Ambassador expressed regret over the incident, which last week was the subject of a report by the Federal grand jury in New York.

The note, made public by the department August 15, revealed that the matter was brought to the attention of the Ambassador last March and, upon his representations, an investigation was immediately undertaken by the Paris government.

The grand jury report held that upon two occasions, in April, 1938, and January, 1939, films were brought into the United States in the French diplomatic pouches, without the payment of duties.

The investigation of his government, Count de Saint-Quentin said, has established "that there may have been ignorance of the American regulations or lack of surveillance on the part of certain of the French officials who handled the shipment by the pouch of the films in question."

"I express to you my regrets on this account," he said, "but I am pleased to be able to give you assurance that not one of the officials in question deliberately facilitated the usage of the diplomatic pouch by an American business man in order to permit him to defraud the Federal customs.

"Nor was that the intention, I am convinced, of the directors of the French Line who make it their duty to respect the laws in the United States as in France.

"I have no need to add that the French government has taken all measures necessary to correct the irregularities which may have been committed in the use of the diplomatic pouch and to prevent their recurrence," he concluded.

This petty tempest, in the eyes of those experienced in international relations pertaining to topical and news films, is in the nature of the absurd. For many years motion picture film has been traveling both ways across the Atlantic in diplomatic pouches, primarily for the sake of expediting its movement, mostly for newsreels, but also with tacit understanding of a courtesy relation. In no instance, including this one, have important revenues been involved. It is to be regretted that an eruption of personal controversy, which is in the background of this case, should impose red tape handicaps upon the international relations of the motion picture. Here the letter of the law is not its spirit.—TR.

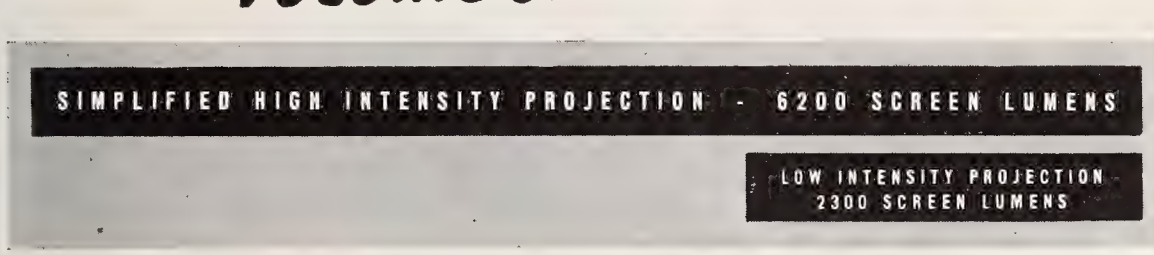
HIGH INTENSITY PROJECTION VS. LOW INTENSITY PROJECTION

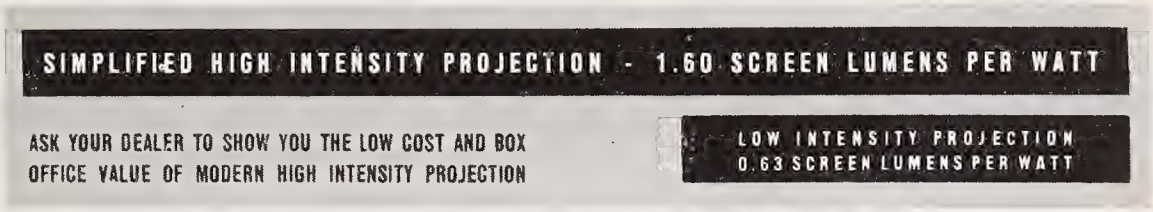
A GLANCE AT THE FIGURES BELOW WILL SHOW WHY MORE THAN ONE THIRD OF THE THEATERS IN THIS COUNTRY HAVE ADOPTED HIGH INTENSITY PROJECTION

COLOR COMPOSITION



The even color balance of high intensity projection light gives natural and pleasing screen reproduction of color features.

Lack of blue and excess of red in low intensity projection light distort the natural hues and beauty of color features.



VOLUME OF SCREEN LIGHT 2.7:1

Simplified High Intensity projection provides 2.7 times the volume of screen illumination obtained from low intensity lamps. This gives a clear screen image at a comfortable level of general illumination.

EFFICIENCY OF LIGHT PRODUCTION 2.5:1

Simplified High Intensity lamps provide 2.5 times as much screen light per watt as low intensity. You cannot afford to retain low intensity projection when a few cents more per day will give you snow white projection light in more than twice the volume.

BOOK REVIEW

MOTION PICTURE LAW DIGEST, Including All Court Decisions from 1900 to Date. By Dennis Hartman, L.L.B. 217 pages. D. Hartman, 501 Landfair Ave., Los Angeles, Cal. $10.00.

There has long been a crying need for a comprehensive text book or analysis, covering the law insofar as it touches upon the motion picture industry. Mr. Dennis Hartman of the California Bar has published a book, entitled "Motion Picture Law Digest." This book although exhaustive does not obviate the confusion that still exists in the law affecting the motion picture industry.

Mr. Hartman in his preface explains that in compiling his book he has utilized 350,000 decisions, of various courts of the United States. No doubt this fact is true. A tremendous amount of ground is covered from "Actors" through "Lotteries," "Copyright," even unto "Taxes, and Workman Compensation." However, the digestive method used is appropriate for lawyers, but it would seem that lay members of the industry would be little benefited by this book.

There is no doubt that Mr. Hartman has done a considerable amount of work. A compilation of so many court decisions must have required months of research. He has not completed his work. It is, however, a necessary and constructive beginning which should lead to other and further works on the subject of motion picture law.—RUDOLPH ALLEN, New York attorney.

MAKE YOUR OWN MOVIES, by Arthur L. Gale and King Pessels. Illustrated, indexed. 230 pages. Coward-McCann, Inc., New York. $3.50.

This volume on "Make Your Own Movies" tells the amateur just how to do just that, expertly. It is a part of that gradual development by which the art of the motion picture is beginning to acquire a background of amateur endeavor from which it will one day draw talent and probably technical contributions. It is also a part of that process by which the medium of the motion picture, so long exclusively concerned with entertainment, is beginning to enter the service of the whole field of expression and communication. The authors are authorities. Mr. Gale is the editor of Movie Makers, the organ of the Amateur Cinema League. Some important chapters reveal the already surprisingly wide application of the 16 mm. film to business, community movements and social causes. The movies are, one would gather, no longer a mystery, anywhere.

Acquires Hoffberg Franchise

Harry Lande, head of the Independent Film Service of Cleveland, has acquired the franchise for J. H. Hoffberg pictures for Ohio and Kentucky. The American premiere of "Living Dead," Gabriel Pascal production distributed in this country by Hoffberg, will be held at the World theatre, New York. The date has not been set.

Columbia plans an extensive campaign for "Golden Boy," to be released early in September. It will include space in newspapers, in fan magazines appearing between August 15th and September 10th, and in cooperative ads.

Awards Are Offered In Universal Drive

Exhibitors' support of Universal's booking dating drive as sponsored by exhibitors for the months of August, September and October gained momentum this week when several exhibitors offered awards to salesmen and exchanges. M. A. Lightman, head of the Malco circuit in Memphis, has offered a piece of luggage for the salesman with the best record for the drive.

John Nolan, of the Comerford circuit, has offered a cash award, while Bob O'Donnell, of the Interstate circuit, will also contribute an award. Charles Hayman, Buffalo exhibitor, has offered $200.

Disclose RFC $750,000 Loan to Walt Disney

The monthly report issued this week by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation discloses that Walt Disney was advanced $750,000 at about the same time that an advance of $400,000 was made to Educational Pictures by the RFC.

It was explained, however, that no information regarding the making of loans is made public other than in the monthly reports. The RFC participated in the Disney financing with the Bank of America and National Trust and Savings of Los Angeles.

Another Newsreel Theatre

The opening of the new Telenews theatre in San Francisco, operated by Pacific Coast Newsreel Theatre Corporation, has been scheduled for Sunday, according to Herbert Scheftel, president of the company, which is spending $200,000 to remodel the new theatre property downtown. Ellis Levy has been named manager.

Chesbrough Circuit Divided

Division of the neighborhood houses at Columbus and Dayton, Ohio, which comprised the Chesbrough circuit has been effected coincident with the separation of William and Ethel Chesbrough, owners. Under the terms of the settlement, Mrs. Chesbrough will continue operation of eight houses in Columbus and two in Dayton, while Mr. Chesbrough retains the Empress in Columbus and the Classic in Dayton.

McGuire Joins Co-op

Thomas McGuire has been appointed director of public relations for the Co-operative Theatres of Michigan. He will handle labor relations and legislative contacts. Mr. McGuire was formerly manager of the Hollywood theatre in Detroit, Mich.

Increased Rates

An attempt by the Cleveland "Press" to raise advertising rates in film theatres 25 per cent has aroused Cleveland exhibitors, who point out that business there won't stand increased advertising costs.

Wayne Christie has opened the fifth unit in the Premiere state rights circuit in Seattle, Wash. Other exchanges are in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Salt Lake City and Denver.

Clyde Eckhardt's Chicago Twentieth Century-Fox branch has won the company's total delivery championship of the 1938-'39 season.

INDECISION ON 'NON-FLAMMABLE' FILM DISAPPOINTS BRITISH INDUSTRY

Home Office Advisory Committee Finds No Reason for Special Safety Regulation or for Non-Theatrical Censorship

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Having long waited, with an optimism now seen to have been misplaced, the deliberations and finding of the Home Office Advisory Committee on the 1909 Act, the basis of all picture house legislation, the industry finds the position almost exactly unchanged. Dissatisfaction with the findings of the Committee, a dissatisfaction particularly with its inability, or at best refusal, to pass judgment on the applications of the Act to non-flammable films, is widespread and pronounced.

Committee Opposes Change

The Committee, which has been in operation for nearly a year, has issued its first report on "non-flam" film and the law. Its judgment is virtually that there shall be no change, that there is no call for special safety regulations, and no need for censorship of non-theatrical films. Its outstanding distinction, and the one which has provoked the sharpest trade criticism, is that it has not even expressed an opinion on whether the 1909 Act applies to "non-flam" film.

With the situation left unchanged and nothing contributed to the problem of the free show, British exhibitors must now seek a new method of tackling the problem and combating the competitive menace. It is certain the matter will be discussed at the next meeting of the General Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association on September 27th.

Minor Stipulations

It was hoped that the Committee would give a sharp opinion on whether "slow burning" films were inside or outside the aegis of the Cinematograph Act. It was hoped they would pass stringent judgment on the whole question of safety precautions, and expected that they would do something in regard to the censorship of "non-flam" films. These matters are left almost exactly as before. The Committee has decided that there is no great danger of fire, as a general rule, but suggests minor stipulations regarding lighting and safety exits, most of which, with even the smallest halls, would not call for drastic alteration. They do not think there is need for censorship for the type of films screened at "non-flam" shows, leave responsibility for the character of films shown to those who show them.

Set Up Last Year

The dissatisfaction which is felt throughout the industry is not lessened by a retrospective glance at the history of the Committee and the purpose for which it was set up. Originally mooted several years back, it was set up last year to examine and advise upon the administration of the Cinematograph Films Act (1909), the legislative measure upon which is based the whole of picture theatre licensing, and the holding of cinema exhibitions. Under this Act come the whole questions of safety, censorship, management rules, building, and every detail of picture house operation as they relate to the legislature.

Pressure from Industry

Its first meeting was held a year ago, and on the advice of the Home Secretary, and as a result of pressure from the industry, as well as requests by the various local authorities administering the Act, its first operation was to consider and examine the subject of the "non-flam" film, which by reason of the fact that the Cinematograph Act, was explicitly designed to govern the conditions and the showing "of exhibitions of pictures . . . for the purpose of which inflammable films are used," did not seem to come within the purlieus of existing legislation.

The increasing menace of free film shows given on "non-flam" film, to which no rules of safety or censorship apparently applied, shows which have been held in every exhibitor area and to the detriment of local trade, made the problem acute. It was not considered necessarily equitable or constructive that the Committee should have been composed exclusively of representatives of those bodies administering the Act, that no trade point of view found expression.

Reason for Confusion

The Report, after a technical dissertation on the respective inflammability of films on a nitrate basis and films on an acetate basis, divides them into "highly inflammable" and "slow burning," and launches forth into a statistical analysis of the attitude of local authorities in England and Scotland on "slow burning" films as outside the Act. The confusion, in this matter, is amplified by the fact that, for instance, 68 English boroughs treat "slow burning" films as outside the Act, and 8 as within, that 184 delegated authorities say "without" and 86 "within," that 50 Scottish burghs passed judgment as "outside" and 37 "inside." On the crucial point, however, whether the Act should apply to "slow burning" films, or not, the Committee decline to pass comment, and have no suggestion either constructive or destructive to offer, on the very point which it was thought would be the hinge of their deliberations.

Fire risks of "slow burning" films, the Committee thinks, are negligible. "The risks of accidents are extremely small." They "see no grounds for discriminating between audiences assembled to see an exhibition of slow burning films and audiences assembled for other purposes which do not involve control by the local authorities."

In the matter of censorship they pass the buck back to local authorities, judging that where "slow burning" films are treated as outside the Act there is no power to exercise censorship. A clear distinction is to be drawn, they opine, as regards the need for censorship of films shown in the picture house and non-entertainment films shown elsewhere. "We do not think there is any need for censorship of what may be broadly described as the educative, informative and technical films normally shown at exhibitions, of slow burning films. . . . Those who are concerned with the production and exhibition of "slow burning" films, may in present circumstances be safely left with the responsibility for the contents of the films and may be relied upon not to produce or exhibit films distasteful or offensive to the public."

It is accepted in the trade that though many of the films shown on "non-flam" stock are contentious, and sometimes, with propagandist pictures, "horrific," the condition of their showing is often of a specialized nature, to audiences who know precisely what they are going to see. It is felt, however, that the Committee has done nothing to restrain the undue elasticity of legislation as it applies to such shows, that conditions being left as they are, there is likely to be considered irregularity, confusion and, ultimately, trouble.

Commons To Get Plea

An appeal for the lowering of the exhibitors' quota is to be made by Colonel Harry Day in a question which he is to put before the Government when the House of Commons meets again in October. Colonel Day's move is inspired by the difficulty he claims is being experienced by independent exhibitors in obtaining British films to comply with the Films Act.

GB Meeting Stormy

Despite efforts of a shareholders' committee to bring about the adjournment of the Gaumont British annual meeting last Thursday in London the stormy session passed the financial statement and balance sheet with only six dissenting votes.

The committee sought adjournment pending the receipt of the consolidated accounts and the report of the Board of Trade committee investigating the affairs of the company. They also sought a resolution opposing the reelection of the present board of directors.

British Venice Participation

British entries in the annual Film Festival at Venice, Italy, have been disclosed as "Four Feathers," "The Mikado" and "Young Man's Fancy." Short subjects include four Gaumont British instructional films and a GB newsreel.

It is believed the showing of the British features will be contingent upon the conclusion of trading guarantees by the Italians. The British walked out of last year's festival after expressing displeasure with the manner in which the awards were made.

Other Developments

Associated British Pictures Corporation, headed by John Maxwell, has assets of approximately $90,000,000, he reported at the annual meeting of the company held last Wednesday. An additional $20,000,000 was credited to reserves and undistributed profit balances. The general reserve was set at about $14,275,000. A final dividend of 20 per cent was declared.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will build new premsises in London on a site in Shaftesbury Avenue, W. It will be ready for occupation in June, 1940, and will cover 50,000 feet of floor space on eight floors. There will be a theatre seating 400.

CITIZENS GROUP FIGHTS DRIVE-IN

A Citizens' Committee in Milford, Conn., has organized a war chest to fight the 800-car Drive-in theatre on the Milford Turnpike as a public nuisance and a source of excessive noise. The committee announced its intention to take the matter to court at a meeting in the Town Court building following a hearing at which sound experts retained by the Guarino-Meckelberg interests, operators of the venture, testified there were no grounds for complaints.

SCHINES TO SELL INDUSTRY AS AN INSTITUTION FOR "GOLDEN JUBILEE"

"Movie-Line" Project September 3 to 11 in 150 Theatre Circuit Calls for Replies on Films' Place as Entertainment

The Schine Circuit, one of the largest independents in the country, with 150 theatres in New York, Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky and Ohio, will put on a contest of its own for ten weeks, from September 3rd to November 11th, in behalf of the motion picture's "Golden Jubilee," designed to sell the institution of motion picture entertainment, the particular pictures to be played during the opening of the new show season, and the 50th anniversary itself.

The request of the brothers Schine, J. M. and L. W., for more effective methods of advertising, has brought out a plan that incorporates the suggestions and recommendations of their managers.

Scenes from "Jubilee" Films

Basically the plan is "Schine's Movie-Line Contest," to which all of the distributing companies have assured their cooperation. An outline of the idea was submitted to the advertising managers of the eight majors, and they endorsed the plan.

The contest itself is based on a series of scenes from "Golden Jubilee" pictures that the managers will be playing during September, October and November. Each of these scenes will be a still from one of the pictures. With each illustration there will appear some dialogue, not from the picture, but the kind of conversation a person might have with his family or friends.

A question mark imprinted on one of the characters indicates that there is to be a reply, and the hint is given that the best replies will have something to do with the advantages of the motion picture as an entertainment medium. Four suggested answers will be given for each scene, and there is also an opportunity to write a fifth original answer. Contestants are to indicate which reply, in their opinion, is the one best suited to the remark in the illustration.

Weekly and Final Awards

There are to be both weekly and final awards. Final awards will be made for the best complete set of answers, as fully explained in the rules of the contest. The final awards are for the complete series of answers over the ten weeks whether original or otherwise. In addition, each set of final entries must be accompanied by a letter of not more than 50 words on the subject: "Why I Like to Go to the Movies." The weekly awards are to be made for the best original answers each week. Any answer not printed in the various contest lines will be considered original. Contestants can win one or more weekly awards over the period and also be eligible for one of the final prizes.

In a special "Golden Jubilee" edition of the circuit's "Scoops," the management and the advertising-publicity department, headed by Gene Curtis, at the home office in Gloversville, N. Y., gives to the managers the complete layout for their individual city campaigns, the details of the contest, the form the plan is to take either in newspaper form, combination newspaper and heralds, or in herald form alone where no newspaper is available or where the publisher or editor refuses to participate by running the contest stills. Also included are various styles of contest exploitation, full description, with dialogue of a special "Golden Jubilee Trailer," "Golden Jubilee Newspaper Stories," and fall campaigns received from the field for the new show season.

The contest is so arranged that it can be run one, two or three times in each of the ten weeks, depending upon the number of show changes per week, upon how many Schine theatres there are in the city or town, and the ability of the manager to get the contest planted in his local newspaper or get cooperative ads on the heralds.

Illustrations Available

There will be illustrations available, from the distributors, on practically every picture that will play during the contest. The choice of the illustrations to be used is up to the manager or managers concerned and will naturally be on coming attractions which will play in the following week. Illustrations will be available for pictures playing "A" and "B" houses, second-runs, neighborhoods and in towns where the product is split.

In towns where the Schines have an "A" and "B" theatre, two illustrations are to be used weekly, one for each house. In cases where the "B" plays second-run after the "A," the "B" will get the additional benefit of the illustration advertising the picture of the "A."

To start the campaign, each house will be provided with the special trailer, also a special 40 by 60 lobby poster announcement.

The trailer combines the historical observance, the new season's product and the contest itself. Much of the copy is given over to the industry as an art and institution. Scenes are given from old films, starting with "The Kiss," with May Irwin and John Rice, as it was shown in Koster and Bial's Music Hall in New York in 1889, followed by shots from "The Soul Kiss," "McKinley's Inauguration," and on up to the product of the present day.

Special effort will be expended by each manager participating to reach those who could be regulars but are not.

Where there are two Schine houses in a town, each herald to be distributed will carry the imprint of the other house. Heralds are to be distributed on a blanket, house-to-house basis, and to all R.F.D. box holders in the surrounding countryside.

In selling the cooperative ads to the local merchants, thus assuring the cost of the heralds, the Schines point out to their managers that they should emphasize the angle that the heralds will be kept in the homes for the ten weeks.

In presenting the contest to the newspaper, the managers are told to explain that it is not a lottery or drawing, that there is no element of chance, and it therefore complies with rules and regulations.

A total of $150 in awards is authorized for each city. This allows $5.00 a week for ten weeks for weekly prizes, and $100.00 in final awards, as follows: $50.00, $25.00, $10.00, $5.00 and ten of $1.00 each. In addition, each manager is authorized to issue five pairs of tickets each week for weekly awards, and 25 pairs of guest tickets for final awards.

To augment the circuit's own cash awards at each theatre, and for which the company is putting up $22,500, the managers are advised to consider approaching local merchants on the question of their putting up awards.

Local Judges

Judges are to be appointed locally for each single contest. Each contest will be limited in scope, open only to the people of the city and surrounding territory.

Some of the added ideas to be used include, where possible, a "Golden Jubilee" stage show, presenting a "cavalcade" idea, depicting in scene and song, the events and typical music to show the passing of time from 1889 to 1939, with the cast appearing in costumes appropriate to the period. Celebrants of "Golden Jubilee" wedding anniversaries are to be sought through the newspapers and entertained as guests of the theatre management. "Golden Jubilee" dinners are to be staged, in tie-ins with local hotels and restaurants. Tieups will be made with products using "gold" in trade names.

In some cases, there will be a pageant of progress in citywide celebrations, with local businessmen cooperating.

WILL HAYS CITES ANNIVERSARY FILMS

"The pictures that will mark the screen's 50th anniversary, in October, during the new entertainment season will demonstrate the progress and significance of the art," stated Will H. Hays, MPPDA president, this week, in listing some 40 features which will for the most part be available for exhibitors for the industry's observance of its Golden Jubilee.

"History, biography, science, music, romance, comedy, adventure and contemporary subjects out of life will be among the vast variety of themes pictured," he said, adding: "The new pictures that will soon make the rounds of the theatres do not mark the closing of a period but the beginning of a new and greater era of universal entertainment."

The anniversary "marks the emergence of the screen as an increasingly significant social as well as entertainment force," he declared.

Judge Denies Bank Plea in Fox Suit

John C. Knox, federal judge, in New York this week, denied the application of the Trust Company of Georgia for the appointment of a temporary receiver for Fox Theatres Corporation and for an injunction restraining Milton C. Weisman and Kenneth P. Stenreich from carrying on transactions as trustees of the Fox theatres.

The court pointed out that, in denying the application due to lack of jurisdiction, no consideration was given to the merits of the petition.

Sues on Projectors

Radtke Patents Corporation has filed suit in the United States district court in New York asking an injunction against Willoughby Camera Stores, Inc., to restrain it from selling 16 mm. motion picture sound projectors which, it is claimed, infringe upon the plaintiff's patent called "Methods of and means for optically reproducing sound." The plaintiff as assignee of Albert A. Radtke also seeks an accounting and damages against the defendant.

Ukrafilm Files Petition

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed in the United States district court in New York against Ukrafilm Corporation of 747 Broadway, by three persons who claim they are creditors of the company. They are Alexander Koshitz, creditor for $700; Michael Zaroweny, $1,200, and John S. Sztogin, $200.

Leslie Howard Sued

Leslie Howard has been named in a suit filed in superior court in Los Angeles which seeks $91,128 damages by United Player Productions, Inc., instituted on behalf of the English company, United Player Productions, Ltd., claiming breach of contract. The suit claims Howard signed a contract in 1935 to produce and star in a film, "Bonnie Prince Charlie," and was to receive $75,000 for two months' work and a share in the profits. The plaintiff claims that large sums were spent for exploitation, but Howard never made the film.

Rowland Signs Ad Agency

Richard A. Rowland, president of Rowland Productions, Inc., has appointed Donahue and Coe, New York, to handle all advertising for the 1939-40 product which he will release through United Artists.

The first Rowland picture will be "Three Cheers for Miss Bishop," from the Bess Streeter Aldrich novel, "Miss Bishop," and will be directed by Archie Mayo and star Barbara Stanwyck.

Washer to Donahue & Coe

Ben Washer, New York advertising and publicity representative for Samuel Goldwyn, will join Donahue & Coe, advertising agency, shortly. A former newspaper man, Mr. Washer has headed the publicity division of United Artists and also been publicity chief for George Abbott, Broadway stage producer, in the past. He will devote his time at Donahue & Coe to the legitimate theatre advertising activities of the agency, which he is joining in an executive positon.

IN COURTS

Alperson Particulars Bill Filed by Grand National

Grand National Pictures, Inc., Educational Pictures, Inc., and E. W. Hammons, in federal court in New York Tuesday applied for an order directing Edward I. Alperson to file a bill of particulars.

Mr. Alperson is plaintiff in a suit claiming breach of contract in which he is asking for $100,000 damages against Educational and Mr. Hammons and $35,525 and 10,000 shares of stock against Grand National.

File Plagiarism Action

A plagiarism suit for injunction, accounting and damages has been filed in federal court in New York by Isabelle Knotter against Hal Roach Studios, Inc., Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation, Loew's, Inc., and Culver Export Corporation. Plaintiff claims to have submitted her story "So Zwei Pechvogel" or "Two Down and Outs" to the Hal Roach Studios on July 16, 1937, which she claims was infringed in the film "Swiss Miss" and "Au Far West." Her manuscript had been returned in August, 1937, with a notation stating that it had been unread, the complaint said.

Paramount Suit Filed

A suit for $100,000 damages and an injunction was filed this week in New York supreme court against Paramount Pictures, Inc., by Opera Under the Stars, Inc. The plaintiff contends that it owns exclusive rights to a dramatic musical work called "Un Homme en Habit" (A Man in Dress Clothes) and that Paramount has either produced or is planning to produce a film adapted from the work.

Eastman Sues Agfa Ansco

Eastman Kodak Company has filed a suit in the United States district court in which it named Agfa Ansco Corporation as defendant and charged it with infringment of a patent No. 1,905,442 issued on April 25, 1933, and covering a method of producing motion picture film. The complaint that infringement was committed by the manufacture and sale of film embodying the plaintiff's patents. An injunction, accounting and damages are asked for in the complaint.

Dunn Sues Victory

James Dunn, actor, this week filed in superior court in Los Angeles a suit against Victory Pictures Corporation asking $20,000 damages and judicial determination of a contract under which he said he was to receive $2,000 per picture for a series of eight. The complaint claims the first picture was postponed from time to time and that none of the films have been made.

The New York State Labor Relations Board has dismissed the petition of Max Steinboch, formerly a clerical employee at the Paramount New York exchange. Mr. Steinboch claimed that he had been dismissed for union activity but the board ruled

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

GOOD GIRLS GO TO PARIS: Joan Blondell, Melvyn Douglas, Walter Connolly—Here is one that will stand alone in any spot, big or little. Running time, 78 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

First National

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, "Dead End Kids," Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart—We consider this a very fine picture from every standpoint. Played this one to three days of good business. The weather was hot here but did a good business just the same. Running time, 97 minutes.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

KID FROM KOKOMO, THE: Pat O'Brien, Wayne Morris, Joan Blondell, May Robson—Played this on a Sunday and was not disappointed. A good cast and plenty of laughs with May Robson a scream. Drew more than some of the so called big ones and pleased everyone. Played July 2-3.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BRIDAL SUITE: Robert Young, Annabella, Walter Connolly—A silly little inane comedy (?) that was terrible. It might have been good but as the female casting was done MGM gave us their poorest picture of the season. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY SERENADE: Jeanette MacDonald, Lew Ayres, Ian Hunter, Frank Morgan—We can readily see why this picture did not click with the masses. It is too long and the length could be remedied to the benefit of the picture and the cost of production by the elimination of the "Madame Butterfly" number and the cutting at least in half of the finale. Otherwise it was a swell picture but drew very poor business. Running time, 113 minutes. Played July 30-31.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY SERENADE: Jeanette MacDonald, Lew Ayres, Ian Hunter, Frank Morgan—Definitely not a small town picture and no business for us. Running time, 113 minutes. Played July 28-29.—Beatty and Johnston, Capitol Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

BURN 'EM UP O'CONNOR: Dennis O'Keefe, Cecilia Parker, Harry Carey, Nat Pendleton—Can't say much for this one. In my opinion this should have been burnt up. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 4-6.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Kent Taylor, Ann Rutherford, Una Merkel, Alan Marshal, Buddy Ebsen—Fair picture that drew one of the biggest houses of the summer. This drew better than many a special. Running time, 74 minutes. Played July 28-30.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Nice picture. Nice business. Running time, 83 minutes. Played July 12-13.—Beatty and Johnston, Capitol Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

MAISIE: Robert Young, Ann Sothern—Very good picture which pleased nice business. Is an outdoor story and fine fare for small town. Played July 30-31.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ON BORROWED TIME: Lionel Barrymore, Bobs Watson, Beulah Bondi, Una Merkel, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Henry Travers, Eily Malyon—A fantastic story and not the type to appeal to the masses, but will please if you can get them in. I think in every show I report on Lionel Barrymore I say "his best performance," and what a portrayal this veteran actor gives as "Gramps" and what a swell running mate he has in Bobs Watson, while Beulah Bondi, Una Merkel, Sir Cedri Hardwicke, Henry Travers and Eily Malyon form a perfect supporting cast. A grand picture and one that deserves your best playing time. Running time, 99 minutes. Played August 28-30.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TARZAN FINDS A SON: Johnny Weismuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—The public was ready for another Tarzan and this one will get them in if ballyhooed right. The average exhibitor could use two or three of these a year from Metro instead of "The Great Waltz," "Dramatic School," "Broadway Serenade," and "The Citadel." Played July 7-8.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

THREE COMRADES: Robert Taylor, Margaret Sullavan, Franchot Tone, Robert Young—Another box office disappointment. We are beginning to look for them from Metro.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Monogram

STREETS OF NEW YORK: Jackie Cooper, Marjorie Reynolds, Dick Purcell, Martin Spellman—Another big hit from Monogram. Did capacity business. Story, direction, acting and settings very good.. Jackie Cooper is a big draw in this theatre. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 3-5.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

Paramount

MAN ABOUT TOWN: Jack Benny, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes, Rochester (Eddie Anderson)—A positive honey in every sense of the word. Outdrew "Union Pacific" and pleased more than any picture I have played in months. Just the type picture for Benny, Rochester and Lamour. Paramount, how about three or four of these a year? A relief from the last six months of miserable business. Played July 27-28.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

SING, YOU SINNERS: Bing Crosby, Fred MacMurray, Donald O'Connor, Ellen Drew, Elizabeth Patterson—The first Bing Crosby picture that I have played in some time and it is a good Bing Crosby picture. This was doubled with "Nancy Drew, Detective" to above average summer business. As to whom to credit with the special draw, I will know more when I play the next Bing Crosby picture.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

TIP-OFF GIRLS: Lloyd Nolan, Mary Carlisle—A racketeer drama with a different slant, plenty of peppy doings and suspense. Would class this as above average racketeer drama. It was a cool, rainy Sunday, so we did above average for this time of the year. While this has no special draw, it pleased those who came. This was doubled with "Tom Sawyer, Detective."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

UNION PACIFIC: Joel McCrea, Barbara Stanwyck, Brian Donlevy, Robert Preston, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman—Very fine. Business better than "Gunga Din." Lynne Overman and Robert Preston extra good. Entire cast excellent.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Republic

BLUE MONTANA SKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Gene scored again. Good story, good songs, was liked by all. We don't think this one was as good as "Mexicali Rose." Running time, 59 minutes.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

FEDERAL MANHUNT: Robert Livingston, June Travis—Fair picture; fair business. This little action picture will please the cops and robber fans. Played August 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FIGHTING THOROUGHBREDS: Mary Carlisle, Ralph Byrd, Robert Allen, George Hayes—Fair horse race story with good acting by entire cast. George Hayes fine as Gramp. O.K. for bargain or family night. Business zero! Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 18.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General and rural patronage.

FRONTIER PONY EXPRESS: Rog Rogers, Mary Hart—Very good. Not the business we expected. Farmers busy and a little too hot yet for us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SOUTHWARD HO! Roy Rogers, George Hayes, Mary Hart—Average western picture which pleased Friday-Saturday trade. No extra draw. Played August 4-5.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

FISHERMAN'S WHARF: Bobby Breen, Leo Carrillo, Henry Armetta—Above average midweek business. Breen never has been popular here.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FIT FOR A KING: Joe E. Brown, Helen Mack, Paul Kelly—This Joe E. Brown not so good. Failed to draw at BO. Played July 20.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

GUNGA DIN: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Cary Grant, Victor McLaglen, Joan Fontaine—Business nothing extra.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PECK'S BAD BOY WITH THE CIRCUS: Tommy Kelly, Edgar Kennedy, Spanky MacFarland, Ann Gillis—Picture I was afraid of. Played double feature with "The Flying Irishman" and had one of the best shows of the year. Very pleasing and interesting.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

RACKETEERS OF THE RANGE: George O'Brien, Marjorie Reynolds, Ray Whitley, Chill Wills—Fine western. O'Brien's short dance brought the laughs. Chill Wills good. Let's see him more.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SMASHING THE RACKETS: Chester Morris,

Finds Fan Turning Backward; Stops Patron Walkouts

BRISTOL, N. H.—"It was a hot midsummer night. Despite the fact that we have a modern pressure ventilator, the air in the theatre was stifling," said William L. Lydston, manager of the Bristol Theatre here. "I had eight walkouts during the evening and had called Boston for a ventilation engineer.

"When our Altec man, F. A. Brown, called at the theatre, I told him my troubles.

"After checking the ducts and dampers, Brown crawled into the fan room. A few minutes later, the cool air began pouring into the theatre, and the system has worked perfectly ever since.

"Brown explained that he found the fans turning in the wrong direction—someone must have changed the leads—and that he had our electrician reverse one leg of the 220 volt 3 phase supply, thus restoring proper rotation and blower speed.

"We were saved the expense of having a ventilation expert come up from Boston, and the theatre patrons were comfortable again. What our Altec man did was certainly 'service over and above the contract'."

THE SERVICE ORGANIZATION OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

Frances Mercer, Rita Johnson, Bruce Cabot—Here is a picture that has plenty of action. Good story that pleased. Direction, acting, story good. Played with Three Stooges comedy, which resulted in a good BO attraction. Running time, 68 minutes. Played July 28. Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

STORY OF VERNON AND IRENE CASTLE, THE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Edna May Oliver, Walter Brennan—Satisfactory picture. Hot weather hurt. Running time, 98 minutes. Played July 18-19.—Beatty and Johnston, Capitol Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

GORILLA, THE: Ritz Brothers, Anita Louise, Patsy Kelly, Bela Lugosi—Played on a holiday and went over okay. The best picture yet from these boys, even if it was a "B" and they walked out on it, which proves that all nuts don't grow on trees. Outdrew many of Fox's misplaced upper bracketed pictures. Played July 4.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

HOLD THAT CO-ED: John Barrymore, Marjorie Weaver, Jack Haley, George Murphy, Joan Davis—It's a very good picture but no draw at the BO. Joan Davis is outstanding in the comedy. Catchy songs, good story, but failed to draw at the BO. Running time, 79 minutes. Played July 9-10.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

INSIDE STORY: Michael Whalen, Jean Rogers—Just another of those double bill fillers that we have had to use this year. Here's one exhibitor that is not going to do it another year. Running time, 61 minutes. Played July 26-27.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

JONES FAMILY IN HOLLYWOOD: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—The same old thing. Just a picture. No picture can possibly click with same cast day in and day out. One of these a year would be plenty. As good as any has been. Running time, 63 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

LITTLE MISS BROADWAY: Shirley Temple, George Murphy, Edna May Oliver, Jimmy Durante—A good picture but failed to draw at B.O. Shirley is slipping fast. The poorest Sunday business in a long time. Running time, 71 minutes. Played July 2.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

RETURN OF THE CISCO KID, THE: Warner Baxter, Lynn Bari, Henry Hull, Cesar Romero—Drew very well and seemed to please. No special comment, however. Running time, 71 minutes. Played July 28-29.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee, Edna May Oliver—Good picture; good business. This musical show should please anywhere. Played August 2-3.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SPEED TO BURN: Henry Armetta, Michael Whalen, Lynn Bari—Henry Armetta steals the show. A real good racehorse programmer enjoyed by everyone. Business only average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, THE: Don Ameche, Loretta Young, Henry Fonda, Young Sisters—Nice interesting picture but not for Saturday crowd. Business just fair. Running time, 97 minutes. Played July 21-22.—Beatty and Johnston, Capitol Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, THE: Don Ameche, Loretta Young, Henry Fonda, Young Sisters—Crashed with a sickening thud. A complete washout at the box office. Fox, it's been a helluva long time since "Jesse James." Played July 16-17.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

THANKS FOR EVERYTHING: Adolphe Menjou, Arleen Whelan, Jack Haley, Jack Oakie, Tony Martin—A fair picture but failed to draw at B. O. A little silly in spots. The last few Fox pictures did not register at B. O. at this theatre. Running time, 73 minutes.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

United Artists

GAIETY GIRLS, THE: Jack Hulbert, Patricia Ellis—This English made musical showed up better than I had expected. It has good production values and good story as musical comedy stories go. This will entertain nicely, especially on a double bill. This was doubled with "There Goes My Heart."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Fredric March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly, Alan Mowbray, Eugene Palette—What with the time of the year and warm weather, this did not make much of a showing at the box office, but the picture delivers good entertainment. Patsy Kelly does her share to help liven up things.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

BIG TOWN CZAR: Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Ed Sullivan—A very good gangster picture but heaven deliver us from any more of such for the next six months. No draw as our public is fed up on such. Running time, 66 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

EAST SIDE OF HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Joan Blondell, Mischa Auer, Baby Sandy—Six reels too long. Absolutely nothing to it. The biggest disappointment we have had in several months. If you must play it, bargain night would be the best booking. It was really laughable when they dubbed Bing's song the "Sly Old Gentleman" on the sound track as it was so much louder than the baby crying that even the audience could tell there was something wrong. Running time, 88 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PRAIRIE JUSTICE: Bob Baker—Poorest western in the past few weeks. Poor story; the direction and acting amateur. No action in this western. This western star has no drawing power here. Running time, 59 minutes. Played July 21-22.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

BROTHER RAT: Priscilla Lane, Wayne Morris, Jane Bryan—A very good picture. Fair box office draw. Supporting cast very good, which kept the audiences in an unroar all through the picture. Running time, 88 minutes. Played July 16-17.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

DAWN PATROL: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone, David Niven, Donald Crisp—Good airplane picture. Didn't break even on it, though. —Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

JUAREZ: Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Brian Aherne, Claude Rains, John Garfield—No dice on this one. Drew well but had plenty of squawks. This should have been a knockout but the direction or something missed fire. About 30 minutes too lengthy. Played July 9-10.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

NANCY DREW, DETECTIVE: Bonita Granville, John Litel, Frankie Thomas—I have read several good reports on this and can only confirm the good things that have been said about this so I am looking forward to the other Nancy Drew pictures. This was doubled with "Sing, You Sinners." This program behaved nicely for a hot Sunday and gave us an above average Monday.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Willis Kent

PACE THAT KILLS: Dope picture played to good business and pleased generally. Little out of the beaten path. A good change from the major rot we have to run. Running time, 75 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

COMMUNITY SING SERIES: These shorts have a definite place on our program and are thoroughly appreciated.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY: Scrappy Cartoons—So-so.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MUTTS TO YOU: Three Stooges—Just fair.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NIGHT IN A MUSIC HALL, A: Music Hall Vanities—Very good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 11—Not so good as some we have run but still this series pleases.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALFALFA'S AUNT: Our Gang—One of the best Gang comedies we have had in a long time. Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ART GALLERY, THE: Cartoons—Here is an extra good colored cartoon.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BEAR THAT COULDN'T SLEEP: Cartoons. Excellent in all respects. Use it your best days. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FISTICUFFS: Max Baer—Good one reeler with Max Baer. Understand Grand National will make westerns with Max Baer. I sure would like to play them. Should be great box office for Saturdays.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

GIANT OF NORWAY: Passing Parade, No. 7—This historical short is excellent for its kind but too educational for the average small town fan. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HELP WANTED: Tom Neal, Jo Ann Sayers—Very good two-reeler from "Crime Doesn't Pay" series, exposing crooked employment offices.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ICE ANTICS: MGM Miniatures—Good short on ice skating and gives the Ice Follies a swell send off. Running time, nine minutes.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

JOY SCOUTS: Our Gang—"Joy Scouts" is a good name for this hilarious comedy featuring these fine actors. Wish we had more of this type short. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

OPENING DAY: Robert Benchley—These Benchley shorts are plenty poor and don't think my patrons didn't let me know about it. Running time, nine minutes.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

Paramount

RHYTHM ON THE RESERVATION: Betty Boop Cartoons—Average Betty Boop cartoon which pleased.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SWANS: Paragraphics—Just a filler.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BIRD DOGS: RKO Pathe Sportscope—Excellent.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, THE: No. 11—Suppose it was good for what it was trying to put over, but our patrons are getting very tired of all this war propaganda in this once very popular series. Let's have more of what we used to see in it.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MOTH AND THE FLAME, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—Considering prices, give me Warners' "Merrie Melodies" in place of these. Disneys all good though.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PRAIRIE PAPPAS: Ray Whitley Comedies—Fine two-reeler. Perfect for Saturday or anytime. Let's have more.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

AFRICA SQUAWKS: Terry-Toons—Good black and white cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

INSIDE BASEBALL: Ed Thorgersen (Sports)—Exceptionally well liked sport subject. We believe a number of these devoted to one major league team per reel would be very popular.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ONE GUN GARY IN THE NICK OF TIME: Terry-Toons—Very cheap cartoon material.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Universal

GALS AND GALLONS: Rita Rio—The poorest Mentone Musical in weeks. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LITTLE TOUGH MICE: Lantz Cartunes—Fair cartoon for the kids but nothing to rave over. Just average. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

DEAN OF THE PASTEBOARD: Vitaphone Varieties—Excellent novelty reel which pleased our patrons immensely.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GREAT LIBRARY MISERY, THE: Vitaphone Varieties—Very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

HOBO GADGET BAND: Merrie Melodies—Very good color cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

QUIET PLEASE: Broadway Brevities—Worse than "Swing Time in the Movies." The poorest of this series. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Serials

Columbia

GREAT ADVENTURES OF WILD BILL HICKOK: Gordon Elliott—This shouldn't have been over 10 or 12 chapters. Last few chapters not so good. Serial pretty fair. Nothing extra.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Universal

SCOUTS TO THE RESCUE: Jackie Cooper, Vandell Darr—Only fair so far. On fifth chapter. Not as good as expected.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Wilcox on Another

Herbert Wilcox, English producer affiliated with RKO, is preparing for a picture on the romance between "Bonnie Prince Charlie" and Flora MacDonald. The British star, Anna Neagle, will play the role of Flora.

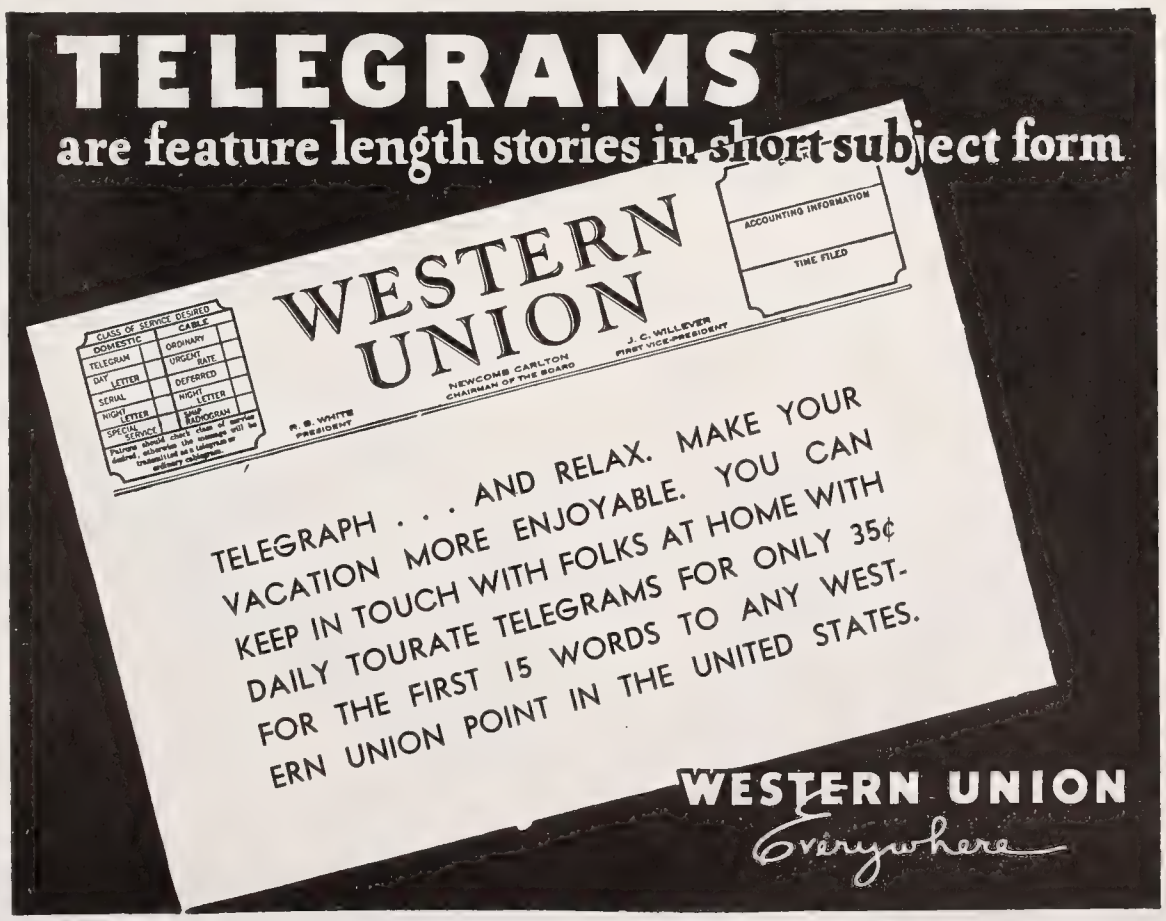
Variety Club Award

The Variety Club of America, which last year instituted an award for the outstanding contribution to humanity, an award which went to Father Flanagan, of Boys Town, Nebraska, this year has created a nominating committee of eleven writers and editors.

Academy To Study Theatre Acoustics

The Academy Research Council Theatre Standardization Committee began an investigaton last week of theatre acoustics, under the direction of a subcommittee consisting of Jack Durst, Chairman, Fred Albin, Lloyd Goldsmith, Don Loye, and Michael Rettinger.

"At present there is a great lack of knowledge on the entire subject of motion picture theatre acoustics, and very little correlation between acoustical and electrical measurements of sound equipment," says the Academy, and "the committee will attempt to work out standard methods for making acoustical measurements, and will also consider the possibilities for correlating studio review room acoustics with theatre acoustics for the purpose of establishing a 'judgment factor' for evaluating review room listening tests with theatre listening tests."



As a first step a series of acoustical measurement tests and experiments will be conducted in a review room being made available to the committee at Columbia's studio, Hollywood, for the next 60 days of these tests.

Theatre sound equipment and service companies which will cooperate with the Research Council in this acoustic investigation are Altec Service, Dominion Sound, Electrical Research, International Projector, Lansing Manufacturing, Northern Electric and RCA Manufacturing Company.

M. Switow and Sons Enterprises, Inc., of Louisville, Ky., capitalized at $250,000 has been granted a charter. The concern is a consolidation of M. Switow and Sons Enterprises and Lafayette Amusement Company, motion picture theatre organization.

Fewer Ohio Censor Cuts

The Ohio censors ordered nine eliminations in the 452 reels they reviewed in July. This is the smallest number of eliminations in any one month for three years.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

NEXT SEASON

We would pick one of the Summer's hottest days to talk about it, but since it is only a question of weeks before cold winds nip, it may be well for more of the membership to turn serious attention to the business of Fall and Winter grosses.

Farseeing theatremen for weeks have been doing a bit of sweating, and not exclusively because of the weather, to formulate money plans to pile up those September-October lines at the boxoffice. Immediately coming to mind is the circuit-wide project of the Schine Theatres, already in work, wherein a "Movie-Line Contest" is designed to sell the institutional advantages of motion picture entertainment, coming feature attractions and the Golden Jubilee. As analyzed before the recent convention by Gene Curtis, Schine advertising director, the plan has decided merit, since it was formulated from suggestions of the managers and home office executives. Distributor heads also have given it their blessing.

The Minnesota Amusement people are also preparing to break out shortly with a "Greater Movie Season" drive. Charlie Winchell, ad head, and others of the John Friedl personnel are laying great stress upon this promotion which promises to be outstanding in a circuit where the outstanding is not unusual. Guided by the Oscar Doob forces, various divisions of Loew's Theatres, as usual, are storing ammunition ready to touch off those giant Fall showmanship guns. Other sectors are mobilizing at the ticket window, many tieing-in with the Golden Jubilee through the comprehensive manual made available by the M.P.P.D.A. office for this purpose.

Your able theatreman rarely rests, and never does he rest on his laurels. So far as concerns his immediate interests, the Summer is gone. Crisp Fall and cold Winter advance with beckoning finger, and the lad who is going ahead needs no second invitation.

CURE FOR JADED APPETITES

Happened at an Indiana theatre few weeks back. Picture was doing capacity with long lines outside waiting to get in. House staff was having a time of it trying to cope with the crowds. Came a vacationing district manager of another circuit, travelling through on his way East. Noting the throngs, he stopped, parked his car, found and addressed himself to the harassed manager, volunteering his services. Offer accepted, the visitor took tickets, handled ropes, worked aisles until things cooled off.

Gratefully thanked by the manager as he climbed into his car to continue the journey, the visitor replied:

"Think nothing of it. Enjoyed every minute. I have discovered that nothing will sharpen a jaded theatre appetite better than to battle with howling mobs breaking down the doors to get in to see a picture."

Checking over the recent pressbook aids offered to exhibitors on United Artists pictures, Monroe Greenthal points to the conspicuous success enjoyed by the papier mache mask available on "The Man in the Iron Mask". Theatremen have been keeping the wires hot for extra supplies, says the exploitation chief, which is evident by the number of smart mask ideas reported to this department.

THE SMILE BRINGS 'EM BACK

Over a cupa cawfee with one of the boys whose work takes him to a lot of key cities, the traveler had occasion to remark upon the failure of theatre cashiers to observe the usual box-office amenities. The taken-for-granted "Thank you" was noticeable by its absence, he said, in noting that managers in the larger cities opine that the greeting of patrons is neither necessary nor expected.

All wrong, we agreed. The "Howdy do" and "Come right in" atmosphere is as much a part of showmanship as anything else in the shop. No manager ever knew nor greeted every last patron by name. But the customer who gets the broad nod from the headman is liable to remember that long after he forgets the picture. And the chances are he will return because he does.

To be emphasized to the dissenters are the recent articles from managers in the series having to do with theatremen's representative days. In every instance, the authors stress being around prominently to greet the paying guests.

Here shown are one of the two large panels used by Ted Routson on the front of the Hippodrome Theatre, in Baltimore, to sell "Bachelor Mother." Panels are 13 feet high and 24 long, the head of Ginger Rogers measuring 10 feet high and six wide is hand painted. At right, Round Tabler Routson sells his stage show and Donald Duck.

As part of his campaign on "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever", Publicist Milt Harris for that picture's opening at Loew's State Theatre in Cleveland, Ohio, effected a tieup with the Cleveland News whereby a handsome trophy was awarded to the winner of a special speed race prior to that paper's annual Soap Box Derby. Illustrated at right is Harris holding the trophy.

Roulette wheel turning with a clicking noise attracted attention of passersby and formed basis of Spence Pierce's "Lucky Night" animated display at the Midwest in Oklahoma City. Stills were planted between numbers. The giant heads of Robert Taylor and Myrna Loy were stationary but, due to illusion, seemed to turn in the opposite direction as wheel revolved. The bottom of the display was cutout and illuminated, with spotlight used to light the top. To those correctly guessing on what color and number the wheel would stop guest tickets were awarded.

Reported as an effective ballyhoo was the sound truck used by Russ Bovim at the Ohio, Columbus, for "Tarzan Finds a Son". Live animation was provided by the entire Tarzan family in costume which rode on the truck as it toured the city. Newspaper publicity was secured through tieup with the Columbus Dispatch whereby Tarzan club certificates and buttons were given to those making small contributions to the paper's fund for bringing a new baby elephant to the local zoo.

Use of a moving panorama showing an African Safari was one of principal parts of the New York Roxy front created by Homer Harman, publicity chief for the run of "Stanley and Livingstone". Graphic maps of Africa showing the dangerous route followed by Henry M. Stanley in his search for Dr. Livingstone were also effectively portrayed as well as pictorial displays of African scenes and blowups of Spencer Tracy and cast. Also featured were photostats of old papers carrying stories of the search.

Two attractive girls in flashy ski regalia covered the downtown business districts of Seattle, Wash., as an advance and during-run publicity stunt on "Winter Carnival" at the Liberty Theatre. Girls carried ski sticks stuck through large cards bearing tiein copy. Slant was arranged by Manager C. C. Chellew and United Artists Exploiteer Sammy Siegel.

TOMPKINS SELLS 'EM

Even in this day and age of high-power theatre promotion, there remain too many merchants sceptical of the ability of showmen to put over tieins that will sell merchandise as well as extra tickets at the boxoffice. Another convert to the cause, a jeweler, in the following letter to Chick Tompkins, makes known his reasons for now believing.

Mr. Chick Tompkins
Manager, Voge Theatre
East Chicago, Ind.
Dear Chick:

Perhaps I should say "Dear Houdini," as you sure pulled a few rabbits out of a hat last Thursday.

I have been in business in East Chicago for many years, but I have never seen as many people on our streets as you drew out with your stage coach.

When you made the boast that you could put on a sale and pull some stunts that would get more people into my store, I took it with a grain of salt and okayed the prize of some silverware to be given away.

That was several weeks ago, but now I salute you. They did everything but smash up my windows, but I did business and that's what counts.

Come again, we need more of this kind of thing in East Chicago, and I am for you.

Sincerely yours,
Bernard Friedman

Yell Contest at Theatre Sells "Tarzan" for Bell

Arrangements were made recently by Ray Bell, Publicist, Loew's Theatres, in Washington, for a yell contest to be held in front of Loew's Capitol in connection with "Tarzan Finds a Son." Station WJSV gave seven gratis spot announcements and broadcast the entire affair for 15 minutes including desirable plugs. Total cost to theatre was for medals awarded to winners.

Newspapers were generous with stories and art work and Bell also arranged with local department store to distribute "Tarzan" club buttons and promoted them for two co-op ads. Local dairy was sold on the idea of paying entire printing and distribution cost of four-page tinted heralds selling the picture, back cover of which carried the merchant's ad and stressing that anyone could be a "Tarzan" if they drank plenty of milk.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Ford Accords Varsity Gala Hollywood Opening

For the opening of the new Varsity Theatre, in Peoria, Manager Willis Ford brought one of the WMBD portable units over to the theatre to broadcast the opening festivities and introduced local celebrities as they arrived. Entire business section around the theatre was decorated in gala attire for the occasion, merchants tied up for the distribution of ice cream, etc. Large lobby easel was erected containing congratulatory telegrams from local and Hollywood celebrities, followed up next day by ad in paper thanking everyone for their attentions.

Quite a ceremony was made in connection with the arrival of the first patron at the theatre opening night, the young lady's picture was taken and run in paper together with story. Also featured, was a special dedicatory ceremony for a mural which was painted by a local college student as a result of a contest in the art department.

U. S. Map Rug Promoted For "Stagecoach" Display

When visiting a department store recently, C. L. Hollister, at the Babcock in Wellsville, N. Y., discovered on display a congoleum rug, center of which depicted a map of the country with all state capitals and principal cities shown, also a pictorialization of each state's main industry. Around the border was an evolution of transportation from pony rider to sky clipper. The enterprising theatremen immediately went to work on the store owner to promote the rug for display in the theatre lobby in connection with his date of "Stage Coach." In exchange, Hollister gave a small credit card.

Planting an ad on the "help wanted" page of local daily four days in advance of opening of "Dark Victory," Holly asked for ideas on how to get outstanding business with the picture. An unprecedented number of replies were received, with guest tickets offered as prizes. Picture was sold with a money back guarantee and as a suspense builder the theatreman stressed that there would be no last 15-minute seating while the picture was on.

ARNOLD INVITES GIRLS TO COMPARE

For "Man About Town" at the Atlantic City Steel Pier, Franc Arnold, promotion director, tricked up a paper tape measure throwaway marked with various dimensions of Betty Grable, so that women could compare their own measurements with the star's.

Throwaway was folded for distribution so that only two catch lines were apparent, "How Do You Measure Up?" and "What Shape Are You In?" Unfolding revealed markings and copy on the picture.

Bathing Beauties Carry Baby Dolls In 'Mother' Tiein

In a situation where newspaper publicity breaks are reportedly few and far between, Don Cottrall of the Chief Theatre, in Colorado Springs, Colorado, and T. Bidwell McCormick, RKO exploiteer, recently put on a "Bachelor Mother" bathing beauty contest on the observation roof of the Hidden Inn, in the famed Garden of the Gods. In addition to the modelling of bathing suits, contestants were required to carry a doll representing the adopted baby which is the cause of all the merriment in the picture.

The idea of holding the contest in such a picturesque setting and the added novelty of the doll angle together with the fact that the contest was open to entry by tourists and residents alike, took on with the newspapers for good advance play.

Mayors Act as Judges

Mayors of both resort cities of Colorado Springs and nearby Manitou Springs acted as judges and were assisted in their task by two prominent society women and the manager of the local radio station which broadcast the entire proceedings from the judges' platform. Special luncheon was tendered the mayors at leading hotel prior to the contest and was attended by newspapermen, radio and theatre executives, a few prominent citizens, all of whom as well as the contestants, who assembled at the theatre, were taken in special bannered cars by police escort to the Garden of the Gods where an assembled crowd awaited the entourage. Motion pictures were made of the ceremonies, which were shown along with the screening of the picture starting the following day.

In addition to the bathing beauty contest which highlighted the campaign, there were numerous window displays, tieups with cafes and tourist camps for distribution of special pamphlets and window cards, numerous spot radio announcements and an increased newspaper advertising campaign.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Seymour Reports Cortland Activities

Numerous stunts have been reported by Seymour Morris at Schine's State, in Cortland, N. Y., and among them was the merchants' cooperative ad page laid out for "Hardy's Ride High" and which was made in the form of a house with all the merchants being lumber dealers. Banner across roof read "Now is the time to think about remodeling or building a home like America's first family does in," etc. Contest angle was featured in that guest tickets were given to those submitting correct list of the misspelled words run in the ads.

For "Alexander Graham Bell," in addition to having a large telephone display in the lobby, Morris promoted the telephone company for a supply of almanacs and a book telling of the birth of the 'phone. Also furnished by the company were old telephone directories which were cut up and printed into heralds plugging the picture and opening.

Binstock Revives 'America' Contest to Smash Returns

From an initial four-line newspaper note to a series of full-columns and art layouts, over a period of eight weeks describes the progress of the Miss Connecticut and Miss Hartford contest put on aggressively by Manager Paul Binstock of the subsequent-run Warners' Lyric in Hartford, Conn. Previous local campaigns to discover entrants for the Atlantic City Miss America title were reported as less than successful. It remained for Binstock to revive the idea for new publicity and cooperative "highs", according to the evidence. Merchant tieins provided all the extra expense, the theatre cost coming to $12, approximately. Without newspaper sponsorship from the notably conservative Hartford press, Paul waged his own campaign in obtaining support, listing over 30 different tieups in his report, the highlights of which were as follows:

Civic Heads Attend Luncheon

Personal appearances of winning contestants night before Grand Finals at other Warner houses, presentation of awards to winners by Acting Mayor at the Lyric, parade on Main Street with Miss Connecticut and Miss Hartford in bannered promoted new model Packards headed by police motorcycle escort, testimonial luncheon tendered by the Bond Hotel after the parade, invited guests including representatives of the Governor and Mayor, civic and organization heads, chief of Hartford police, commissioner of state police, heads of radio stations, Warner district manager, Harry Needles and leading business men.

Promotions of gifts and cash prizes secured by Binstock were topped by contribution of leading food market which underwrote prizes for the six-week preliminaries and lobby display, trailer and windows. In exchange, market received lobby ad and announcements from stage by the Round Tabler. No screen credits were given. Silver trophies and loving cups were also secured from jeweler and leading restaurant.

Contest Tied to World's Fair

The World's Fair Beauty Pageant was tied in to accept the winner as Miss Connecticut and to receive a week's accommodations with chaperone at the Hotel Astor, in New York, with all expenses paid. For second winner, the Fair also arranged a week-end all-expense trip with chaperone at the Hotel Taft. Radios, beauty treatments, flowers and traveling make-up kits were other prizes. The judges for the Grand Finals included Julian Tuthill, drama editor, Hartford Times, M. Oakley Christoph, drama editor, Hartford Courant, Willard Rogers, president, Bond Hotel.

Actual procedure for the contest was a series of Wednesday evenings at the Lyric, starting July 5, entrants judged for beauty in bathing suits and talent. Three cash prizes were awarded weekly. Winners of the preliminaries then competed in the Grand Finals for the two main titles, at the Lyric, on August 9. Binstock officiated in all instances as master of ceremonies at the microphone, his participation contributing no little to the continuing high interest and entertainment.

In addition to the unusual publicity in the local press on behalf of the project, reported as a first-time contest of this type locally in years, much extra business was had during the preliminaries with a capacity house at the Lyric for the night of the Grand Finals.

Warners Launch "Old Maid" With Intensive Campaign

A large and intensive publicity and advertising campaign has been launched by Warner Bros. for its production of "The Old Maid" co-starring Bette Davis and Miriam Hopkins, which is scheduled for national release on September 2nd as the first release on the 1939-40 schedule.

Big gun in the campaign will be the appearance of full-page ads in the October issues of seven of the nation's most influential fan magazines. Over ten million fans will be reached by the ad campaign which has been designed to sell the stars and the Pulitzer Prize winning story.

The film has garnered a national series of publicity and picture breaks from the new dance designed by the Dancing Masters of America entitled "The Old Maid." In addition, five radio broadcasts have described the dance in detail, giving the film a tremendously effective plug.

The home office publicity department is making available to exhibitors a special advance sales manual, in addition to the regular press book on the picture. The manual will contain special stills and feature stories, cast and synopsis material, reprint of the fan ads and samples of the press book ads, exploitation ideas, and a special story entitled "Bette Davis' Story of 'The Old Maid'," told in the first person, and giving highlights of the making of the picture.

Kalberer Aids Girl Scouts On Fund Raising Campaign

With the Girl Scouts of Washington, Indiana, endeavoring to raise funds to send their members to camp, and looking around for the proper means, Manager A. J. Kalberer of the Indiana stepped into the breach with an idea that netted him the goodwill of the entire organization.

Each day for four days, the theatreman engaged two of the Scouts to act as paid ushers, while his own staff vacationed. Entire earnings of the girls went toward the fund and the newspapers came through with abundant publicity in which the theatre was duly honored for its part in the fund raising campaign.

"Fortnight" Ideas In Last Period

Lucky Number Contest Held By Graefe for "Lucky Night"

In connection with the showing of "Lucky Night" at the Badger Theatre, in Merrill, Wis., Manager Herbert Graefe tied up local merchants on a lucky contest angle. Stores and boys on street properly bannered distributed small envelopes with card enclosed bearing picture copy and lucky numbers. To the winners, cash prizes and tickets were awarded, entire cost of which was met by the sponsoring stores. Merchants plugged the tieup storewide and in their ads, theatre also selling the stunt in its ads.

Shaffer Distributes Tabloids In Advance of "Four Daughters"

With the Auto Lite Spark Plug Company of Toledo issuing four-page colored tabloids called "Parade of Star News," Frank Shaffer, at the Dixie, in Staunton, Va., contacted them for a gratis supply of some thousand of these papers, front page of which featured cuts of the Lane sisters as they appeared in "Daughters Courageous." In advance of that picture's opening, the theatremen distributed hundreds of these to various factory employees, the balance being distributed by the dealers. Theatre and playdates were imprinted on the paper. Ad was run in paper advising that each woman patron attending opening matinee would be presented with an autographed tinted photo of Priscilla Lane. These were also distributed by the local Auto Lite dealers.

Newspaper Teaser Campaign Effected by Zinn on "Maisie"

Several days in advance of the "Maisie" opening at the Century, in Minneapolis, Minn., Charles A. Zinn ran teaser personals in the want ad section of the three daily newspapers. Government postcards with the simple announcement that "Maisie Is Coming" were sent to special mailing list as were scenic postcards to leading citizens in the suburban districts. Movie columnist ran item to the effect that the first 100 blondes attending the opening matinee would be admitted as guests of the management, daily for week ahead, each theatre employee called 25 subscribers and asked for "Maisie" and cooperating restaurant featured a "Maisie" sandwich and sundae.

Frederickson Uses Gag Monster In Advance of "Gorilla" Date

Man in bannered gorilla costume was led about town by chap dressed as one of the Ritz Brothers four days in advance of "The Gorilla" date at the Lawler Theatre, in Rochester, Minn., as part of Manager Don Frederickson's campaign on that picture. Chap carrying a pair of handcuffs and magnifying glass stopped at various points about town and made investigations of dirt spots, footprints, etc., on the sidewalks. As crowds gathered, cards carrying picture copy, cast and playdates were distributed. The Gorilla also worked from the stage.

Newspapers Cooperate With Skelly on "Wings"

Reported as a first time in the history of the Newark Advocate, was the feature "Angels" page promoted gratis by C. A. Skelly, manager of the New Arcade, in Newark, Ohio. Also promoted by the theatreman was a double truck spread, all ads for which were written and sold by him, and carried tiein copy on the picture. Banner across top read "Not Only Angels —money flies unless you're wise," followed by list of bargains offered by the cooperating merchants. Dowdle reports that with the newspaper having an ABC circulation of about 16,000 in a community of slightly over 30,000, a solid coverage was secured for his date.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Brown Holds Contest on "King of the Underworld"

As an advance on "King of the Underworld," Bob Brown at the Ritz in New Kensington, Pa., planted a contest out front of his theatre. Easel board was erected containing scene stills of previous Humphrey Bogart films and to those correctly giving corresponding title names guest tickets were awarded. Ballot box was stationed in lobby for the occasion. Also out front and for his street bally was an electric chair in which a dummy was seated, appropriate tiein copy overall. Bookmarks were distributed, cost of which was met by jeweler's ad, announcements were made from stage in advance and costless heralds were distributed house-to-house.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Mayor Leads Parade For "Dodge City"

With the cooperation of the Mayor of Pendleton, Oregon, who led a gala parade to the Rivoli Theatre, Manager Johnny Matlock recently staged an effective campaign on "Dodge City." The chief stunt was cowboys on horses, including covered wagons properly bannered and other paraphernalia of the West of 50 years ago. In addition, a large space ad campaign was taken in local papers with teaser ads reading "Lusty Life. Sudden Death. That's Dodge City." These ads were used several days before opening in addition to numerous newspaper stories and special art work which helped to ballyhoo the picture.

A neat tieup which is reported to have caused a lot of comment in Atlantic City was arranged by the Warner Theatre with the Atlantic City Daily World for the engagement of "Each Dawn I Die." The theatre arranged for the tabloid daily to print a large scene still of Cagney and Raft on the front page with a five-column, two-line streamer at the top of the front page reading "Daring Prison Break by Cagney and Raft." In addition line asked readers to see page 12, where a large publicity story was run.

The unusual stunt attracted a great deal of attention, and helped in giving the film a successful opening at the house.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

A popularity contest conducted from among the staff of the Starland Theatre, in Winnipeg, Manitoba, was recently staged by Manager Harry Gray. Small orange tinted cards bearing copy "Courtesy, service and comfort are as essential to your entertainment as good pictures," etc., etc., were distributed to all patrons for a period of a week. Provided for at bottom was space for guests to check the names of the various members of the staff listed. On reverse side, Gray featured a list of his forthcoming attractions.

Contacting local department store, distributors for the "Lone Ranger" merchandise, Theodore J. Friedman at the Strand in Suffern, N. Y., made arrangements for a large window display which was tied to his current showing of "The Lone Ranger Rides Again." In the store, a "Ranger" trading post was set up with cutouts and theatre copy conspicuously displayed. Friedman says the store reported active business on the merchandise and the publicity helped bring the children into the theatre.

Another theatreman to start his own paper, is Bill McCollister, Chakeres Colony, Hillsboro, Ohio. Called the "Colony Theatre News," sheet is four pages, carries cuts and stories on forthcoming attractions and is paid for by merchants' ads. First run was 3,000 copies which were distributed by direct mail to the rural routes and house-to-house in the towns.

Borrowing a regular chuck wagon from a nearby ranch, Dwight Seymour, Kermit Theatre, Kermit, Texas, stationed it in front of his house during run of "Dodge City" and had ranch boy in attendance dispensing promoted doughnuts and coffee which was made over a wood camp fire. Two horses tied to a hitching post completed the effect, while cans of tobacco, sacks of meal, two gallon coffee pots, etc., were placed around the wagon.

Week ahead of "Calling Dr. Kildare" opening at the Virginia Theatre, Harrisonburg, publicist Jack W. Fretwell, set the cashiers to calling telephone subscribers about the picture. Also in advance the houselights were brought up before the trailer and usher's voice rang out with "Is Dr. Kildare in the house? Calling Dr. Kildare," etc., etc.

Obtaining about 150 feet of net, Gordon Carson, Royal Theatre, Fort William, Ontario draped it around his marquee in advance and during run of "Fisherman's Wharf." Cutout title letters were appliqued to the net in such fashion as to make it appear they were caught in the net. Carson reports the front attracted plenty of attention.

N. Y. Loew-men Follow Thru for Summer Grosses

Following through on an "action" plan designed to speed up summer activities and inaugurated in June by C. C. Moskowitz, in charge of the Loew New York circuit, below are detailed some of the activities put over by the various Loewmen.

Special kiddie parties with advance sale of tickets to merchants, have been held in almost every in-town Loew house. Only expense attached to these parties is cost of lobby announcement card and heralds. Through contact with local mechants entire staffs promote ice cream, candy, toys and other gifts for their special matinees, the piece de resistance being two-wheel bicycles which retail for $50 each. Merchants find it good advertising to cooperate with the theatres and are pleased with the exchange advertising they receive. Loew's Theatres limit their cooperation with merchants to mention on the lobby cards and heralds. No screen advertising is a standing rule.

Sam Pearlstein, manager of Loew's Apollo and his assistant, Buddy Neustein, put on an unusual party in connection with the opening of their roof garden. A kid party was staged on the roof at 12 noon. Tickets were sold in advance, with Sam and Buddy acting as play leaders for two hours, entertaining the kids with all sorts of games. Ice cream and candy were also promoted and served after a number of prizes had been awarded.

Jitterbug Contests Held

Jitterbug contests have caught on with theatre patrons and show marked boxoffice increase on the nights they are held. Like the kiddie parties, the staff tied up local merchants for prizes and ballrooms or restaurants sent along their band to play the show in return for which they get advertising.

The old reliable bathing contests also go over. In order to interest local girls in these contests, the managers are tying up with merchants who sell bathing suits and other sporting goods. In addition to the three or four prizes for the winners, each girl who enters gets a bathing suit as a consolation prize. Loving cups and complete beach outfits are the main prizes.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Brien Plants Contest In High School Paper

Conceived by Lige Brien, Prince Theatre, Ambridge, Pa., was a crossword puzzle idea on "Oklahoma Kid," scattered throughout were such keys as picture title, theatre name, stars, etc. Contest was planted in high school paper, with guest tickets going to winners. Also arranged by the theatreman was a tiein with local ice cream company whereby promoted cones were distributed to kids who told the most people about the show. A 40 by 60 "wanted" board was stationed in front of theatre, one sheets were placed in vacant store windows and costless heralds distributed.

Local Newsreel Returns Increase In Attendance

Round Tabler Describes Handling of 16mm. As Added Program Feature

by MALCOLM GILBERT
Manager, Ritz, West Point, Miss.

This small southern town has proven ideal for experiments with local picture making. Theatre patrons in our town and surrounding territory have proven their interest in our efforts by increased attendance and by cooperation in many other ways.

We have had fair success with our local newsreels and list here information as to how we handle them in our theatre. I find photography a perfect fill-in for spare moments and right in line with my job.

We use a Keystone A7 Camera with a 1.5 lens and a 750-Watt Keystone Projector at a throw of 75 feet. Naturally, our pictures are not as bright as our regular 35-mm. machines, but using a good grade of film we get very good results.

Loaded Camera Always Ready

Keeping a loaded camera ready at all times, we catch many subjects that prove interesting as newsreel subjects. Our schedule calls for a reel every other Friday. We usually have a feature subject that runs about 100 feet with from four to eight shorter items making an average newsreel run about ten minutes. Several rehearsals are required in perfecting the script, background music and sound effects. Using a dual turntable pick-up in our booth with a microphone and volume control in one unit, sound effects records can be played right along with another record of music with the commentator breaking in at any time by just turning down the volume of the turntable. We use Gennett Electrical Transcription Effects Records which can be supplied in anything from the click of an adding machine to the howling of the wind. As an example of the effectiveness of the records, we shot 250 feet on a large fire, shooting from the outbreak to the time the walls fell in, even using a plane for aerial shots. Sound effects included crowd yelling, fire truck aproaching, motors roaring, water from hose, glass breaking, second truck arriving, confusion of voices in the background. All of these sounds are recorded on one record. During the aerial shots a recording of an airplane motor was used, making the entire reel very realistic with many favorable comments from the largest crowd ever to attend our theatre.

Stress School Athletic Meet

After making a 400-foot reel in the local schools, showing actual school work from the first grade through High School, the reel was presented to the school superintendent after being shown in our theatre. Sixty-three members of the graduating class were filmed from the wings of the auditorium stage with photofloods for lighting. A short scene was made of each student as he received his diploma. This made an excellent feature subject for another reel, later being added to the school reel for future use by school or theatre.

School athletics make an outstanding subject. We have had excellent results at dances, especially costume affairs. Four photofloods are set up just inside the entrance and a short scene is made of each couple or group as they enter. Then as the dance gets started, the lights are turned on the dance floor and a few scenes made of the dancers, maybe including a couple in fast motion. They certainly turn out to see themselves.

Here are a few other subjects that we have found to be worth while: Street Construction, New Homes, National Guard Drills, Boy Scout Activities, Auto Accidents, Garden Parties, Special Church and Sunday School Programs, Parades, American Legion Activities, Contests and Winners, College Activities, Celebrations, etc.

Another idea in local movies used here with excellent results was a Summer Style Revue in color. This was an entire reel sponsored by four leading merchants and one beauty parlor. The merchants were signed up to furnish film and about six models were selected for each store. Approximately seventy-five feet of film was allotted for each sponsor. A main title in script, "Summer Styles," against a background of flowers, opened the reel with the sponsors listed on another title faded in on the same background.

Fashion Reel Favored Widely

The film was divided into five sections with the title of each store preceding their section, such as Pryor's Presents, Dell's Presents, etc. Each store showed street dresses, sports clothes, evening dresses and bathing suits. Shoes and accessories were given particular attention by using close-ups. As many different settings as possible were used, such as beautiful yards, swimming pool, tennis courts, railroad stations.

Filming the reel attracts considerable attention which helps right along on the exploitation angle. Preparations and shooting took about three weeks, with another week or so for editing and script. A woman commentator described the clothes and hairdress and we used a five-piece orchestra in the pit for background music. The merchants were more than pleased and are anxious to make a Fall Revue. While shooting, we made production stills which were used on display cards in the various store windows at least a week in advance of the playdate.

Magazine Tieup Aids Smith

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

SECTION TWO

MONITOR automatic electric motor control was recognized as the best available control for the heating and air conditioning of the new Kentucky. The F & Y Building Service of Columbus, Ohio, co-operating with Mr. Louis Wiethe, owner, in designing and building this up-to-date theatre, took full account of the importance of perfect, unfailing, dependable motor control.

Monitor has an outstanding and enviable reputation in the movie field. In Baltimore, Md., alone, Monitor's own home town, there are nearly a score of moving picture houses whose air conditioning apparatus is dependably actuated week in and week out by Monitor starters and controllers for compressors, fans and pumps.

Whether you are contemplating the air conditioning of a new or an existing theatre, bear in mind . . . a good installation deserves Monitor control.

A THEATRE OF TODAY IN BOMBAY

A THEATRE combining indirect lighting and bright color schemes in the latest American and European decorative manner is the new Eros, just completed at Bombay, India. Built and operated by Mr. S. C. Cambata of that city, the Eros is housed in a large, combination office, apartment and theatre structure under a tower reaching 140 feet high. . . . The prominently located corner entrance gives directly on a large, circular foyer floored with marble and elaborately decorated with murals. Elevators carry patrons from this foyer both to the balcony and to soda fountain, cocktail bar and restaurant dance-hall which are parts of this theatre, and are equipped with loud speakers through which patrons can hear musical portions of the picture while waiting to take their places in the auditorium. . . . Marble and teakwood are the most prominent auditorium materials. Walls and ceiling are painted sky blue; side walls on the lower floor and the area above the proscentum are decorated by life-size marble friezes. Balcony walls are decorated with two large, oblong panels with silhouette design in silver and blue. Large electric clocks of two different face designs located above the front exits are surmounted by tall, ornamental grilles. Tableau curtains are of blue silk velour carrying an elaborate design in silk of many colors. Auditorium lighting is entirely indirect, and is designed to provide a constantly changing play of colors. . . . Chairs were specially made to order by American Seating Company according to a design specified by Mr. Cambata, with ventilated spring construction, enclosed hat holder and foot rest. . . . Sound equipment, by RCA, includes hearing aid attachments in different parts of the theatre. Epuipment incluudes Simplex E-7 projectors.

No Real Change Seen In Net Building Costs

THEATRE BUILDING costs today are just about the same as a year ago, according to the building trade and representative theatre architects. Changes in some costs have been offset by contrary fluctuations in others. Figures of the Dow Service Daily Building Reports show an overall variation, as compared with last year, of only ½ of 1 per cent.

While those figures are based predominantly on conditions in the New York metropolitan area, they are, according to Myron L. Matthews of the Dow Service, representative of conditions in the country as a whole. Theatre architects in other sections are of the same opinion. Thus H. F. Pettigrew of Pettigrew and Worley, Dallas, Texas, has "not noticed any change in the cost of theatre construction this last year." Mark D. Kalischer of Chicago, citing some increases and some reductions, concludes that "the net result has been no change in cost."

New Materials Effect Balance

A particularly interesting point is that there has been comparatively small change in construction expenditure per theatre for many years past. New materials, however, had to be developed to keep costs down in an era of rising taxes and, to some extent, of increased labor charges. Robert Boller, Kansas City architect, points out that "if today we were using the materials widely used ten years ago, such as bronze, marble, terra cotta, ornamental plaster, etc., and if taxes had not advanced, the total cost of theatre construction would probably be about the same now as at that time." The newly developed materials have, however, more than offset the effect of increased taxes. The long trend in overall construction costs has been slightly downward; according to the Dow Service this year's cost index figure is 94.5 as against 100 for 1926.

Skilled Men at Premium

Stating that he did not feel that labor costs have risen excessively in most crafts, Mr. Boller went on to say, "The greatest criticism of labor at present appears to be that in numerous lines of work the unions have formed closed corporations and are refusing to take in apprentices, nor have they done so to any great extent for ten years past. Then, too, I have recently run across a couple of cases where the progress of construction has been considerably impeded because local unions would not allow badly needed workmen to cross the line from an adjoining State to expedite the work on a theatre under way. The failure to train apprentices has, of course, created an unnecessary shortage of skilled labor at a time when jobs are at a premium, and the second situation has delayed the completion of theatre buildings within a reasonable time limit. Often the lack of workmen necessitates paying a double-time rate in order that a limited number of workers may complete a building within the scheduled time."

No Rise in Well Water And Storage Cooling

AIR-CONDITIONING installations made during the Summer have shown no tendency toward increase in the percentage of well-water or storage refrigeration systems. Mechanical refrigerating devices continue to predominate enormously, according to representative air-conditioning equipment manufacturers.

A new wrinkle in the interest law-makers are taking in the use of water for air-conditioning is reported from Reading, Pa. In order to obtain what amounts to a water tax even from theatres that utilize their own wells, the city fathers proposed a sewage tax, specifying use of a water meter in the discharge line and a payment of 2c for every thousand gallons of water passed into the city sewer system.

Local theatre operators who use well-water in cooling estimate that the tax would cost them $30 a week. Protests were not effective in securing rejection of the ordinance, but did succeed in having final action upon it postponed until next spring.

Court Warns on Low Auditorium Light Level

BECAUSE OF the conflicting points of view among theatre engineers, architects and operators as to what the level of illumination should be in the auditorium, a bit of litigation over personal injury in Connecticut is especially interesting. The court said the theatre must supply enough auditorium illumination to protect patrons against accident.

The Connecticut Supreme Court of Errors at Hartford made this observation in reversing a lower court judgment for $643 against Poli's New England Theatres, Inc. The reversal was granted purely on an issue of fact, which will be retried; however, the responsibility of the theatre in providing adequate illumination was unanimously affirmed by the high court.

The case was brought by one Frances Miller. The plaintiff was seated by an usher in a row of seats which, because of the slope of the floor, is located on a platform 7½ inches above the aisle. The edge of this platform is marked with a white line. She asserted she could not see this line, and fell in attempting to leave.

Illumination was by eight red and blue 25-watt lamps in a ceiling fixture directly above, eight 25-watt red and blue lamps in a similar ceiling panel 9 or 10 feet distant, and by a rear wall bracket with three 25-watt amber bulbs. The lady's contention that these colored lights were not reflected from the white line was held unproved, and that will have to be tried again, but the court in its decision left no doubt about the duty of the theatre operator "to use reasonable care in the construction, equipment and management of the theatre, having regard to the character of the entertainment given and the customary conduct of the persons attending."

The decision further recognized that "a moving picture theatre necessarily operates in partial darkness while pictures are being shown; to provide too much light would spoil the entertainment for patrons," but it added that it is necessary to consider, on the other hand, "the customary entering and leaving by patrons during the showing of a picture and the dangers to them of too great darkness."

Academy Adds Acoustics To Its Theatre Studies

THE RESEARCH COUNCIL of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences is going further into the capacity of theatres to present Hollywood's pictures effectively. A new committee has been formed to study acoustical conditions in theatres, among other activities. The ultimate objective is to provide a series of test references by means of which sound equipment in different theatres can be set to give identical results in tone quality regardless of variations in house acoustics.

As a first step toward that end, Academy technicians have worked out a set of standard adjustments for sound equipment designed to give ideal results at the loud speakers, regardless of what auditorium acoustics may do to the sound after it leaves the speakers. The adjustments thus arrived at were embodied in recent recommendations of the Research Council. The work now being undertaken will begin with mapping out a set of standardized acoustical tests, to be applied in the same way in all theatres. The settings designed to give ideal sound at the loudspeakers, as now provided by Academy standards, will then be correlated with the figures obtained from the new acoustical measurements, to show the modification in system adjustments required for each individual auditorium. When the indicated modification in system setting has been applied, it is expected, a given print will sound exactly the same in all theatres where the Academy's recommendations are followed.

Hollywood preview rooms will be similarly tested and treated, thus enabling production executives to hear the picture in the course of its making exactly as it will sound when it reaches Main Street.

A sub-committee of the Theatre Standardization Committee has been appointed, consisting of Fred Albin, Lloyd Goldsmith, Don Loye and Michael Rettinger, with Jack Durst as chairman. The committee will make initial acoustic measurements in a Columbia review room for the next two months, following which the procedures thus worked out will be tested in Los Angeles theatres, and modified if necessary.

Co-operating with the Academy in this work are the Altec Service Corporation, International Projector Corporation, Lansing Manufacturing Company, RCA Manufacturing Company, Electrical Research Products, Inc., Northern Electric Company, and Dominion Sound Products, Ltd.

New York Theatre Uses Maskless Type Screen

PATRONS OF the Edison theatre on upper Broadway in New York have been viewing their pictures the last few weeks on a screen from which all masking has been eliminated, and around which is light corresponding in intensity to that of the picture itself, and varying according to changes in that intensity.

No screen supports are visible; the picture appears to be floating in space, in the midst of an area of changing light. Surprisingly, many viewers find screen definition improved. The Edison is a 600-seat theatre; the lamp is of low-voltage high-intensity ("Suprex" carbons) pulling 52 amperes.

The new method is called the Synchro-Vision Screen by its developers, Jacob Gilston, electrical engineer, and Ben Schlanger, New York theatre architect. A model was demonstrated before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, but the installation at the Edison theatre is the first to be used in practical exhibition. Commenting on the results of this installation, Mr. Schlanger said, "The theatre itself which was recently altered, has not been decorated, the white plaster walls having been left without any painting. We do not know how well we like this method of finishing an auditorium, and are inclined to think that it reduces the advantages of projection without the dark masking.

"By eliminating the dark masking, the unnatural framing effect is avoided, and in addition eye strain is greatly reduced because the sharp contrasts between screen brightness and dark framing disappears. A surprising improvement in definition of picture is obtained which is entirely contrary to expectations. The intensity of the projected light on the screen in the Edison theatre is lower than that considered necessary in most theatres, nevertheless, the picture has better definition and is clearer than would be obtained with the dark masking."

To Exchange Data With Foreign Firms

NEWLY COMPLETED plans for exchange of technical information between Altec Service Corporation and reputable sound service organizations in other countries is expected to produce a double advantage to the American motion picture industry. Foreign engineers, it is pointed out, will be able to use technical information and practices developed by Altec, resulting in a better showing of American films abroad, while U. S. exhibitors will benefit by their developments.

Noted Among Reports

Approximately 40 theatres in Kansas City and vicinity are now installing running water and toilet facilities in their projection rooms in compliance with the terms of a new contract with Local 170. The contract, which will run until August, 1940, additionally provides for continuance of existing wage and hour schedules.

Western Electric tubes supplied by Altec Service Corporation will henceforth carry an unconditional six-month guarantee in place of the 100-hour guarantee previously in force. An exception is made in the case of the 50-watt tubes, for which the existing 100-hour guarantee will be extended to a pro-rated guarantee on any tubes of that type that fail within 1,000 hours.

Connecticut's first drive-in theatre, at Milford, has encountered the same type of complaint which has confronted similar enterprises in other locations, and may be compelled to install individual loudspeakers. Twelve Milford residents have filed suit in the Superior Court for New Haven County, alleging that the 800-car exhibition lot constitutes a public nuisance.

The stage area of the Times Square theatre, New York, in which Catherine Cornell, Jane Cowl, Lee Tacy, Dennis King and others once starred in Broadway successes, is being converted into a haberdashery store, confirming the theatre in permanent adherence to a motion picture policy. The house runs east and west along 42nd street, half a block from Broadway, and includes 30 feet of highly valuable frontage located behind the screen.

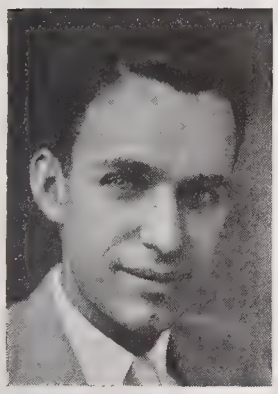
Proposed new trade practice rules of the public seating industry, which includes manufacturers of theatre chairs, are being considered by the Federal Trade Commission. Prohibition of price discriminations, in conformity with the Robinson-Patman law, is the principal innovation.

A Finer Theatre for the Workers of an Industrial Suburb

Describing the Kentucky theatre with which young Louis Wiethe has luxuriously replaced an outmoded playhouse in Cincinnati's outlying Latonia

The front, of brick and terra cotta.

THE KENTUCKY theatre in Latonia, Ky., represents the replacement of an outmoded playhouse in a suburb populated largely by workers in local industries and in the offices, stores and factories of two larger cities. With a population of 17,000 in its own right, Latonia is immediately suburban to Covington, and both are of course communities within the metropolitan area of Cincinnati. Louis Wiethe, who became an exhibitor at the age of 18, followed his success with one theatre in Latonia, the Derby, with the acquisition of a second, the Latonia. Upon the recent opening of the modern Kentucky theatre, the Latonia was closed, no longer capable of meeting today's standards.



Designed in a colorful scheme with distinctive devices in lighting and form to mark it as thoroughly representative of today, the Kentucky seats 900 on a single floor. Designers and engineers were the F & Y Construction Company, with headquarters in Columbus, Ohio.

Constructed of brick and steel, with wood sheathing and joists, and containing 205,000 cubic feet, it was built at a reported cost of about $70,000, exclusive of equipment, at prevailing basic wage levels of 75c per hour for common labor, $1.65 for masons, and $1.45 for carpenters. Equipment, exclusive of air-conditioning, cost $17,000.

Featuring an angular main center panel of saw-toothed burnt orange terra cotta, the front of the building is faced on either side of the panel with tapestry brick. The lower portion of the facade is covered with blue-green terra cotta with slightly protruding horizontal yellow bands. To the right of the main center panel is a large ornamental curved pillar of oxblood red brick accented with buff horizontal striping.

A porcelain enamel sign shelf at the top of the main panel carries the theatre name sign, each letter being 6 feet high by 12 inches deep, and channeled stainless steel containing double line green neon tubes. The bottom of the sign shelf is used to

He Began as a Shipping Clerk—Now Owns Three Theatres at 30

Louis Wiethe

■ Only thirty years old, Louis Wiethe has been an exhibitor for twelve years, and today is the owner and operator of three theatres in the Cincinnati area, one —the Bond, which he built two years ago— located in an outlying neighborhood of Cincinnati itself.

Louis Wiethe started in the motion picture business as an exchange poster clerk. He soon became a shipper, and a short time later was advanced to booker. A good job though it was—and he was only a lad in his teens—Young Wiethe nevertheless had an ear or two cocked for the rap of Opportunity. He heard it in the chance to lease the theatre catering to the soldiers at Fort Thomas near Cincinnati. That began his career as an exhibitor at the age of eighteen.

However, it was in 1932 that he got into real theatre operation, when he took over the Derby theatre in Latonia. The theatre was run down, had never been successful. Latonia, moreover, is located next to the larger city of Covington, which in turn is suburban to Cincinnati. Wiethe remodeled the Derby as his first step; then he did plenty of advertising; and finally the Derby was getting its share of patronage, and some to spare.

Two years later he took over the Latonia theatre. This house the Kentucky really replaces, for with the opening of this modern theatre, the Latonia was closed.

Latonia, known nationally to the scratch-sheet boys for its race track, has a population of about 17,000 made up importantly of railroaders, industrial workers, and employes of Cincinnati offices and stores. One of the Standard Oil Company's plants is located there, besides several other sizeable industrial establishments.

Louis Wiethe is married and has three children. His brother Edward manages the Bond theatre, and a brother-in-law, Sandidge Bacon, manages the new Kentucky.

spot the main panel angular reveals. A large vertical name sign, facing only one way because of local traffic direction, projects 4 feet from the facade, and the back of the sign is used as an integral part of the curved brick ornamental pillar as well as a means of floodlighting it at night. The vertical sign face is golden yellow with vermilion channel letters lined with ruby red neon tubes.

The marquee proper is low with three line silhouetted letter attraction boards rising above the roof and splayed to form a triangle, at the apex of which is a channel, neon-lighted and scroll-ornamented. The top borders of the attraction boards are trimmed with serpentine red neon; the bottom border has chaser trim with the lamps placed on 6-inch centers. Marquee colors are yellow, red and blue, and the ornamental K is in four shades of blue. The white marquee soffit, which also serves as the ceiling of the vestibule, is stepped down 4 inches at 2-foot intervals following the profile of the marquee face, and is illuminated by neon and incandescent lamps on 6-inch centers. Recessed into a brick trim design, structural steel display frames on the right and left of the building front are illuminated with white neon tubing around their sides.

¶ Entrance Area

Mottled brown terra cotta, horizontally curved and moulded, makes up the corner piers and base of the vestibule, which receives its illumination from the marquee soffit lights reflected by peach mirrors framing the entrance doors and ticket booth.

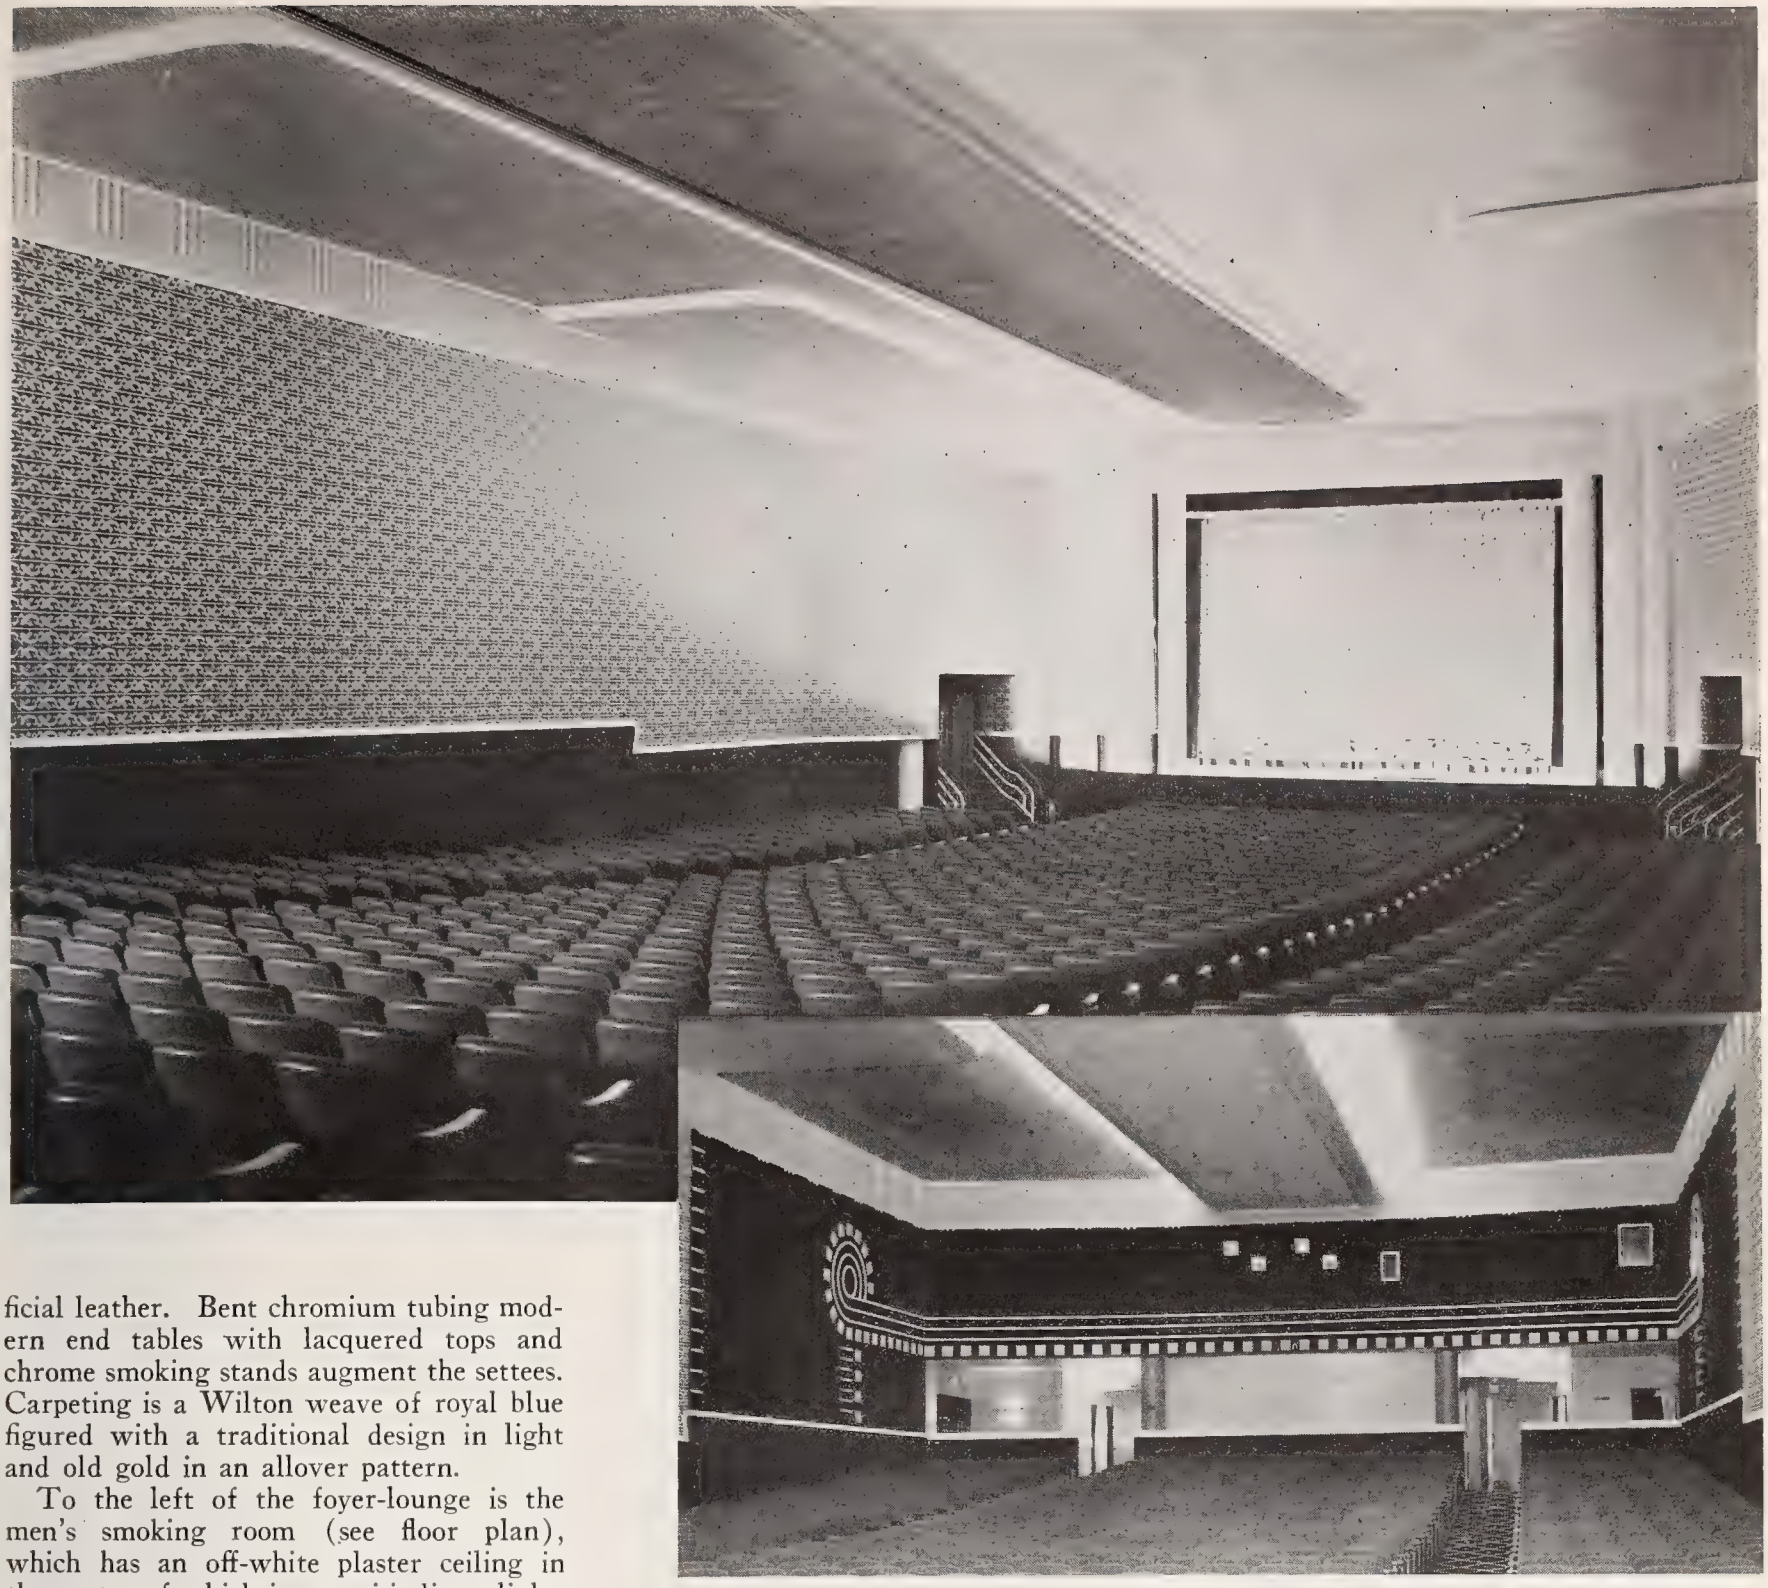
Entrance doors are of slab type birch wood in light walnut finish with rose-colored Belgian glass block inserts. The ticket booth is faced in oriental red marble and has a reeded moulding at the cap of the booth. The interior is illuminated by a specially designed, frosted, semi-indirect dome fixture.

Maroon, with yellow and blue directional stripes, the terrazzo vestibule floor leads into the lobby, which has walls and ceiling of plaster—the walls painted flesh color, the wainscot ox blood red, the ceiling powder blue. Eighteen-inch lumiline lighting fixtures with directional shields are set into the recessed soffit of the plaster cornice.

THE LOBBY

The convex lobby wall has an inverted cove with continuous lumiline lamps, which also light azure blue wooden display frames. On the floor are patterned corrugated and perforated rubber mats laid on concrete and bordered with maroon terrazzo. The doors to both the street and foyer are in natural birch finish with azure blue trim.

THE FOYER



The foyer (see floor plan) was designed primarily as a lounge area with standee spaces at the extreme right and left. The plaster ceiling, painted in burnt orange, is illuminated indirectly with incandescent lamps placed into the troughs of a recessed elliptical lighting dome which has a soffit finished in a stippled light flesh color. Heavy wood ivory mouldings panel the plaster walls, which are finished in several shades of burgundy and also have center insert panels covered with comb-effect imported gold wallpaper. Rust-colored, vertical half-round mouldings form a reeded type of wainscoting in the lounge area of the foyer, and the end standee wainscoting is painted burgundy on cement below walls of turquoise blue.

Placed at either end of the lounge space is an ornamental drinking fountain executed in brick red ceramic porcelain. Both are of automatic type with the water supply mechanism actuated by interruption of a photoelectric cell beam.

The furniture is of chromium-plated metal construction upholstered in red artificial leather. Bent chromium tubing modern end tables with lacquered tops and chrome smoking stands augment the settees. Carpeting is a Wilton weave of royal blue figured with a traditional design in light and old gold in an allover pattern.

To the left of the foyer-lounge is the men's smoking room (see floor plan), which has an off-white plaster ceiling in the center of which is a semi-indirect lighting fixture, three walls of the plaster covered in imported gold wallpaper, and the remaining wall papered in horizontally banded powder green and peach. This room, which leads into toilet room, has chrome and red leatherette seats. Carpeting is the same as in the foyer.

The women's powder room, off the left of the foyer, is substantially the same as the men's smoking room in treatment. Here, however, is a single cosmetic table and seat.

¶ The Auditorium

The auditorium wall and ceiling treatment is in a modern, colorful style. The main ceiling feature is a suspended trough 12 feet wide edged on both sides with a light cove 3 feet deep. There is a total of 600 feet of neon tubing in three colors, one line of fluorescent orange, and 390 ten-watt incandescent lamps on 6-inch centers. These circuits are controlled from the projection room. Ventilation outlets are above the trough, which extends from proscenium to rear and is 100 feet long.

The soffit of the trough is finished in acoustical plaster tinted a Venetian red and trimmed with wiped ivory moulding.

Two 6-inch beveled offsets in the ceiling on either side of the trough, and running to pillars flanking the proscenium opening, are treated in azure blue and deep flesh color.

The rear half of the ceiling is painted in receding shades of from dark to light blue and is co-ordinated with the design on the side walls.

The Guiding Idea Behind the Law Of Liability for Injury in Theatres

● What the more recent decisions of the higher courts offer as a basis for the formulation of a protective policy and defense measures in suits

By LEO T. PARKER

THE BODY of law of a few years ago cannot today be depended upon for guidance in determining liability to the same extent it formerly could be. Laws and liabilities have been changing. For example, a few years ago the law was established that a theatre owner was not liable in damages for injuries sustained by an employe, actor or patron if the testimony indicated that the owner of the theatre used an ordinary degree of care to avoid the injuries. Today this law is classified into distinctive channels.

¶ Unusual Conditions

If either a patron, an employe, or another person, is injured as result of an unusual condition in a theatre, the injured person is not entitled to recover damages unless he proves that the theatre owner, or his representative, knew that the dangerous condition existed, or that by the exercise of ordinary care the theatre owner or his representative, should have discovered the dangerous condition and removed or effectively remedied it.

For example, in Fier v. Chicago Orpheum Company (14 N.E. [2d] 860), it was disclosed that an actor was upon the stage of a theatre for the purpose of performing with his partner. When leaving the stage, the actor stepped upon a rubber ball and fell to the floor on his side, turning his ankle. Both the theatre owner and the actor testified that they did not know how the ball "got on the stage," that the ball may have been tossed there "from the audience." The lower court held the theatre owned liable for $1,500 damages, but the higher court reversed this verdict.

The decision of the high court sets forward the following consideration:

"In a case of this character it was essential to prove actual or constructive notice to defendant (theatre owner) of the alleged unsafe condition of the stage by reason of the presence of the rubber ball thereon. Since there is no evidence that tends to show that defendant (theatre owner) had knowledge or notice of the claimed unsafe condition of the stage, plaintiff (actor) failed to prove the negligence charged against defendant."

On the other hand, let us review the facts in the leading case of Franklin v. Amusement Company (175 A. 305). In this case the testimony disclosed that a vaudeville actor was injured while carrying on his act. The actor's engagement called for three performances a day for three days, and the accident happened during the last performance. The act was an exhibition of markmanship carried through with great rapidity. It consisted in shooting a piece of chalk from his assistant's mouth, shooting out candles, shooting a cape from a woman's back, and several other feats, which unquestionably required not only a high degree of skill, but a steady nerve and strict attention to the work at hand.

In the six minutes during which the act continued, there were fired approximately a hundred and fifty shots. In one of the features the actor ran from the wings on the stage and, sliding on his feet and leaning backwards on his left hand, he fired at a target in the back of the stage. As he was doing this stunt his feet struck a wet spot on the stage, and he was thrown forward so suddenly that his left leg was broken. The evidence disclosed that this dampness was caused by water, which had not been wiped up, spilled on the stage in an earlier act which went on a considerable period of time before the scheduled time of the markmanship act.

In view of this testimony the higher court held the theatre owner liable in damages for the injuries sustained by the actor.

Now, the important question, to the average theatre owner, is: Why was the theatre owner held not liable in the case where the actor was injured by stepping on a rubber ball, and why was the theatre owner held liable in the case where the marksman was injured when he slipped.

The difference lies in the legal attitude that by the exercise of ordinary care the one theatre owner could not have anticipated that a patron in the audience would throw a rubber ball on the stage, whereas if the other theatre owner had used "ordinary care," he would have known that, since the marksman had performed the same stunt three previous days, it was necessary, in order that he would be safe, to provide a dry stage, and he also knew that the act prior to the marksman's act usually spilled water on the stage.

¶ Patron's Proof

From the above explanation it is quite apparent that in order for a theatre owner to be liable for an injury sustained by either a patron, employe, or actor, it is necessary that the testimony prove that the injury resulted from negligence, or lack of ordinary care, on the part of the theatre owner or his representative, who may be the theatre manager or other employe properly authorized to represent the theatre owner.

Now, the next important point to be borne in mind is that the injured person must prove that negligence of the theatre owner or his authorized representative resulted in the injury.

For example, in Interstate Circuit, Inc. v. Van Dusen (118 S. W. [2d] 635), an eminent patron sued the Majestic theatre, a Texas motion picture house for damages. This woman alleged that when she attempted to drink from a fountain in the theatre, she was hurt because the base of the fountain was polished, slick and slippery, and her foot slipped. Although the lower court held the theatre

TWO significant higher court decisions which are highly pertinent to Mr. Leo T. Parker's discussion of liability for injury to patrons and employes, were handed down recently by the Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court, and by the supreme court of Oklahoma.

In the former case (Florabell Amusement Company v. Standard Surety & Casualty Company), it was ruled that the insurance company must pay the costs of defense in a suit brought by a patron over injuries allegedly received in an assault by a theatre employe acting within the capacity of the theatre operator's agent (as would be the case if a manager forcibly ejected an obnoxious patron).

The Oklahoma court, ruling in the case of Hughes vs. the Standard Theatres Corporation, in which a patron was finally adjudged damages for injuries blamed on inadequate lighting, theatre operators were admonished to use a high degree of care in protecting patrons.

Continuing Auditorium Design to Serve Both Sound and Decoration

Above is pictured the auditorium of the Strand theatre in Berlin, N. H., in which Nu-Wood is used in a relatively ornamental treatment of modern pattern. The side walls are finished in Nu-Wood Variegated Tile, with bands in Nu-Wood Ivory Tile. The ceiling has a ground in the latter material, with decorative squares of Nu-Wood tile on which "modernistic" patterns have been painted. The fluted areas at the sides of the screen opening are of Nu-Wood board.

THIS is the second of a group of features devoted to architectural materials which are peculiarly applicable to the dual problem of acoustics and decoration met with in the design of auditoriums. The purpose is to supply guidance for the efficient use of the material acoustically, and suggestions (so far as possible, pictorially) for its effective use decoratively. Acoustical discussion is prepared in collaboration with C. C. Potwin, acoustics consultant.

2. Nu-Wood

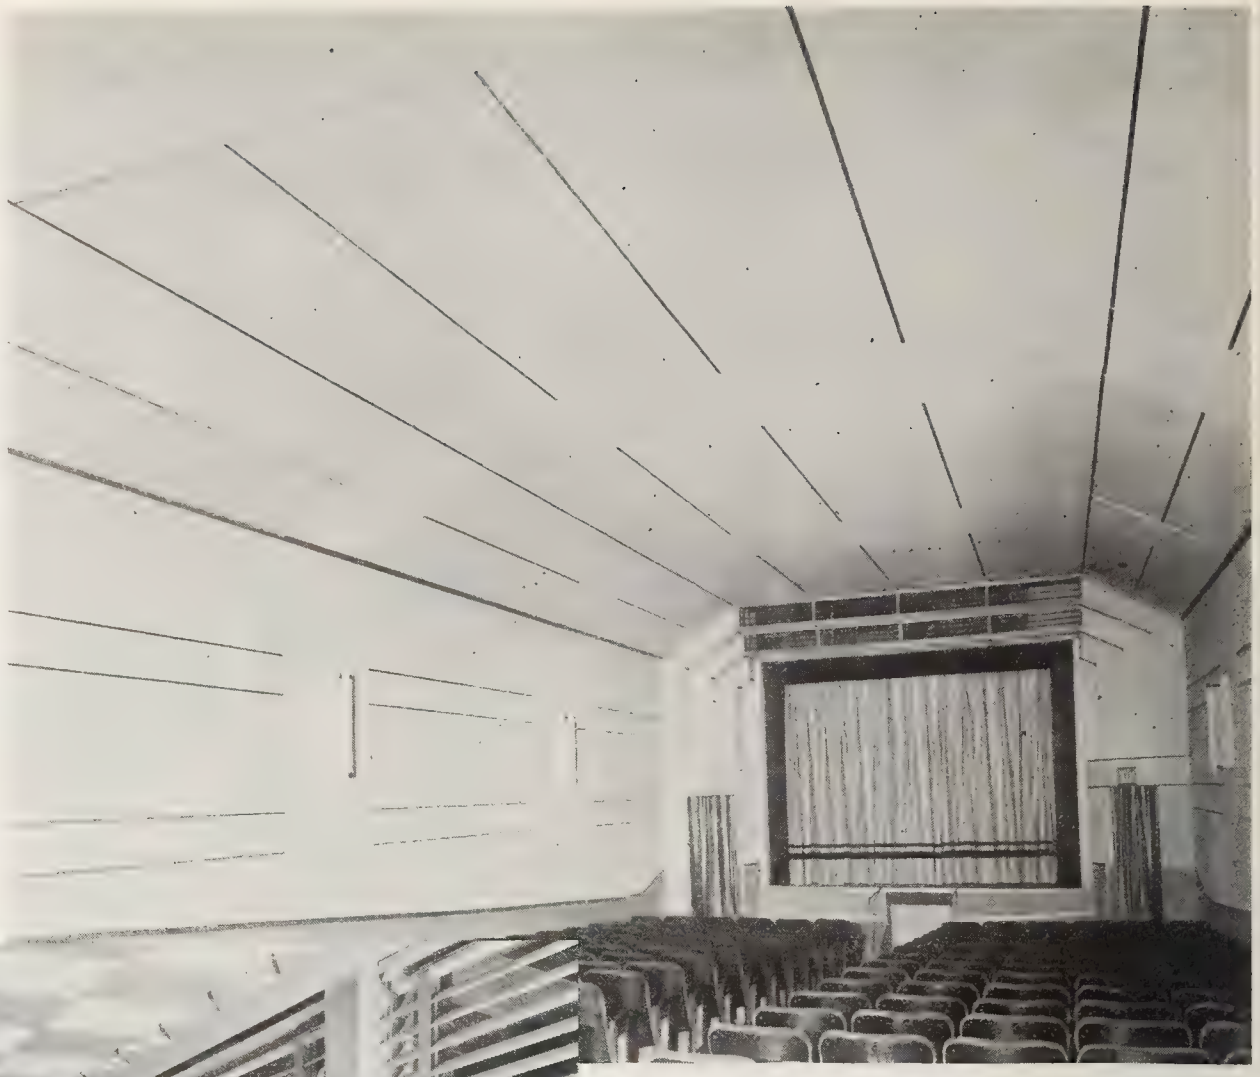
NU-WOOD IS a processed wood material which combines acoustical absorption with a finished decorative treatment for the theatre interior. It is also an efficient insulator against heat and cold, and can be used to take the place of metal lath and plaster for interior wall or ceiling construction, in those localities where nonfireproof materials can be employed.

Consisting of individual fibers compressed into board form, it is available in five general styles, for construction and decorative purposes. These are: (1) Boards, (2) Tiles, (3) Planks, (4) Wainscot Material, and (5) Kolor-Trim Mouldings.

¶ Acoustical Application

From an acoustical standpoint, Nu-Wood is a moderate sound absorbent. It is most adaptable for those particular theatres where the sound absorption per square foot of a material need not be extremely high to overcome objectionable sound reflections or to reduce the reverberation time to the proper value, and where it is possible to use such a moderate absorbent to cover a large portion of the interior surface.

As is true of most insulating boards, the sound absorption values of Nu-Wood are most uniform with frequency when the material is mounted on furring strips so that a suitable air space is provided behind it. When the material is applied flat, or glued directly to a structurally solid surface, its maximum sound absorption is in the middle range and high frequencies, and it tapers off rather rapidly in absorption at the low frequencies.



Flat application of the material may be suitable for ceiling coves, small domes, or other limited areas where objectionable sound reflections are principally in the higher frequency range and the necessary low frequency absorption can be effected in the treatment of other surfaces. In general, the greater percentage of the total amount of material used over various surfaces should be furred, if the most satisfactory acoustical conditions are to be assured.

Nu-Wood is usually most suitable for the acoustical treatment of side wall or ceiling areas. It may also be possible to use the material satisfactorily for the rear wall, in cases where the depth of the auditorium is shallow and the rear wall area is small and well broken in contour so that a moderate absorbent will reduce direct reflections substantially.

If acoustical or insulating boards, such as Nu-Wood, are used to form irregular or broken surfaces in the form of angles or convex curves for the interior, the apparent efficiency of these materials can be appreciably increased. (This will be discussed in a coming issue of BETTER THEATRES, in C. C. Potwin's column on acoustics.—The Editor.)

From a decorative point of view, Nuwood offers very interesting possibilities with respect to color, pattern, and ornamental treatment. The board material available in sections 4 feet wide and up to 12 feet in length, having either the neutral tan color or an ivory finish, is well adapted to plain or simple wall and ceiling treatments. The tile material, available in units of various sizes, ranging from 6x6 inches to 24x48 inches, and in different colors, permits the creation of unusual pattern effects for walls or ceiling, combined with a blending of soft and pleasing shades.

The plank material, also available in different colors, gives an interesting effect where strong horizontal or vertical lines are desired. The wainscot material has a hard finished surface (not a sound absorbent) and is well adapted for use over low wall areas which are subject to impact or wear. Precolored (Kolor-Trim) wood mouldings, finished with a semi-gloss enamel, can be used harmoniously with the various types of Nuwood treatment.

¶ Special Ornamentations

Nu-Wood ornaments and frieze work of special design can also be obtained for those particular installations where such decorative treatment is desired in conjunction with the use of the board, tile or plank. On the other hand the Nu-Wood itself can be grooved or bevelled with special tools in cases where original decorative effects, "out of the ordinary," are preferred.

The natural texture of Nu-Wood, together with the precolored effects in which it can be obtained, makes it well adapted to many types of decorative treatment without the need for painting the material. As previously emphasized in BETTER THEATRES, incorrect painting is harmful to acoustical boards and can destroy their sound absorbing efficiency.

With respect to the use of Casein base paints, the manufacturer of Nu-Wood states that several paint concerns claim their caseins do not reduce its sound absorption value materially, but that these statements are based primarily on experience and on few actual laboratory tests. The manufacturer suggests ordinary calcimine as the most acceptable form of paint application, from an acoustical standpoint. It is bought in powder form and mixed with water before use. It is suggested that the surface be dampened with a brush or spray coat of clear water immediately following the application of the calcimine to the unsized Nu-Wood. This will reduce suction and suspend only fine particles of calcimine on the surface of the board, thus retaining, as far as possible, the original sound absorption value of the Nuwood. Certain types of stains can also be used, although care must be exercised in their application.

Light brushing with a whisk broom or wiping with a dry, untreated rubber sponge is recommended for cleaning the surface of Nu-Wood board, tile, or planks. An ordinary vacuum cleaner with hose attachment may also be used.

¶ PATTERNS

Nu-Wood can be applied in a variety of board, tile or plank patterns. Joints are not concealed. In the tile-type pattern they are exposed, being part of the design, and this is also generally true of the planking type of finish, in which the "planks" may be of different widths or colors. In the board design joints may be covered with Nu-Wood moulding, with Kolor-Trim moulding, or with suitable wood or metal moulding of any type. With large units of Nu-Wood board it is best not to butt the square edges if moulding is not used, but in that case to bevel or ship-lap them; the latter term meaning a bevelled joint in which an extension of one board is mortised or lapped into a recess cut in the other.

Attractive designs in board patterns are readily obtained by arranging unit boards so the joints or mouldings fall into a symmetrical design. For surfaces longer than the longest board available the joints are aligned vertically as well as horizontally to provide a pre-determined decorative effect. Door or window openings, pilasters or other breaks in the wall surface can readily be worked into the design.

Tile patterns may be rectangular, or diagonal (as in the illustration on this page). It is recommended that both planning and installing of tile patterns be begun at the center of the surface to be covered, working outward toward the edges, since this method will make the effect of any irregularity in wall dimensions less noticeable. Specific recommendations for laying out and applying tile patterns are offered, with diagrams to indicate exactly how the work can be done with maximum efficiency.

Nu-Wood "plank finish" consists of units often applied in random widths, and placed either vertically or horizontally. It is also used with units of uniform widths, or of two widths alternated. Planks may be of different colors. In the random patterns two planks of the same width or color are usually not placed next to each other. Window openings, door openings and pilasters, moreover, are framed in planks of equal width, and it is usual to have planks of equal width meet at corners. Where the surface requires greater plank lengths than are available, moulding is used or joints are made to occur at pilasters, etc., in order not to leave the butt joints exposed.

Seemingly random plank arrangements are preferably marked on the wall in advance of installation, the width and color of plank to be used at each point being carefully indicated: this procedure avoids the inefficiency of experimenting and shifting during actual installation.

¶ Balsam Wool Blanket

Among other Wood Conversion Company products is Balsam Wool Acoustical Blanket, also a non-fireproof material available in one-half inch and one-inch thicknesses. This material has a fairly high sound absorption value at the middle range and high frequencies, but is somewhat deficient in absorption at the low frequencies. Furring strip application tends to improve its low frequency absorption. In those cases where it is suitable for use as an acoustical corrective, a light weight decorative fabric covering is usually employed to lend a finished appearance to the material.

.about PEOPLE of the THEATRE

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

WALLACE KAUFFMAN has reopened the Bauxite theatre, Benton, Ark., after the house had been dark for ten years. Mr. Kaumann also operates the Imp in Benton. Both houses are affiliated with the Robb & Rowley group.

ELLIS LEVY has been appointed manager of the newsreel theatre being built on Market Street in San Francisco, Calif. Mr. Levy made a trip to New York in July to get some management tips from the operators of the Trans-Lux theatres.

SAMUEL GRIMES is remodeling his Cine theatre in Brazil, Ind. Plans call for a 450 seating capacity. The front of the house will be refinished in porcelain enamel. Included in new equipment will be Wenzel projectors, Ashcraft lamps, a Hurley screen, and seating by the American Seating Company. The Stanley Theatre Supply Company of Chicago, Ill., is furnishing most of the equipment.

ALBERT E. KUEHN and DR. H. J. HAUBRICK, operating as the K & H Amusement Company, have opened their new 500 seater, the Mode, in Oshkosh, Wis. Mr. Kuehn formerly operated the Star theatre there.

T. H. SLOTHHOWER has opened his new Sandra theatre in Wichita, Kas.

DONALD BLAINE is now sole operator of the 499-seat Jodoin, in Baltic, Conn., having acquired the interest of J. HEBRENS.

The Troy theatre, Warner house in Troy, N. Y., has been closed for complete renovation, according to CHARLES A. SMAKWITZ, Warner district manager. Cost of the project is reported as $40,000.

A. T. VINSON, JR., is the new manager of the Martin theatre in Florala, Ala. Mr. Vinson was formerly assistant manager of the Martin in Opelika, Ala.

WILL H. KRAHN, at one time a member of the Beach-Krahn Amusement Company, operating three theatres in Berkeley, Calif., has been elected secretary of the Berkeley Rotary Club.

The Mikado theatre in St. Louis, part of the St. Louis Amusement Company circuit, has been reopened after being closed since May for remodeling, said to have cost $50,000. Renovation has been done along an ultra modern line and includes a new front and marquee, new individual upholstered chairs, new carpets, and all year-round air conditioning system and the latest type of sound and projection equipment.

VERNON HUNTER, city manager for Sparks Theatres in Orlando, Fla., reports closing of the Rialto there for remodeling. HARRY VINCENT, manager, will be moved with his staff to the Roxy in Orlando. Two stores on both sides of the Rialto will be taken over to be transformed into lounges. A balcony seating 125 will be added.

WILLIAM EXTON has opened his Roosevelt theatre in Kenosha, Wis., after the installation of new carpets, lighting, sound equipment and interior decorations.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN ROBERTSON, who operate the Opera House in Bainbridge, Ohio, and the Vanard at Osborn, Ohio, have acquired the Linda at Shawnee, Ohio, and the Delwyn in New Straitsville, Ohio, from ELIAS HATTAM and CHRISTIAN DAVEY, respectively. The Linda will be renamed the Shawnee.

LLOYD REID TOWNS, manager of the Wilby theatre in Selma, Ala., and member of the city council, died August 7 at the age of 51, after a long period of ill health. Mr. Towns, formerly manager of motion picture theatres in Montgomery and Birmingham, Ala., at one time held an executive position with the Wilby-Kincey theatres and was past-president of the Selma Rotary Club.

The Griffith Amusement Company will operate the 550-seat State theatre in Sapulpa, Okla., which is now under construction, as a subsequent-run house. Jimmy Zartaludes, city manager in Sapulpa, will be the manager.

Eskin Theatres, Inc., plan to remodel their Salem theatre at West Salem, Wis. MYLES E. BELONGIA, Milwaukee architect, has drawn the plans.

E. R. BRENNAN has been named manager of the Kenosha theatre in Kenosha, Wis., to succeed FOSTER NORTON, who has been transferred to the Strand in Oshkosh. Mr. Brennan has been manager of the Orpheum in Green Bay.

SAM SUGGS, manager of the Palmetto in Columbia, S. C., has been named chairman of the theatre division of the 1939-40 Community Chest campaign there.

GUS DIAMOND, who operates houses at Salina and Arkansas City, Kas., will open a new 550-seat house, the Roxy, at Eldorado, Kas., soon.

Several Griffith Amusement Company officials went to Ardmore, Okla., from the home office in Oklahoma City, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Jeannette Herzmark, sister of HARRY LOEWENSTEIN of Ardmore, a Griffith partner. Included in the party were L. C. GRIFFITH, president; H. R. FALLS, general manager; B. J. McKENNA, comptroller; and H. O. STARK, head of the real estate and expansion department.

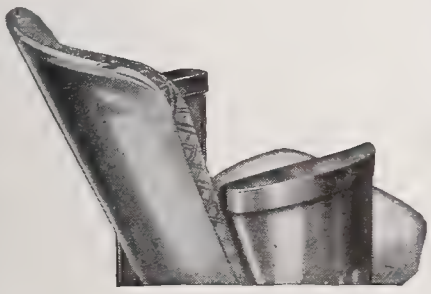
VIRGIL A. JACKSON and JOHN MURPHY, operators of the Uptown, Wilmar and Goodale theatres in Columbus, Ohio, have reopened the Piccadilly in that city after the house had been shut to allow extensive remodeling.

ROBERT SCHWARTZ has contracted with National Theatre Supply Company to install the projection equipment in his 700-seat Park theatre in Thomaston, Conn., now under construction.

C. H. and F. L. McDONALD plan to make alterations on their Grand theatre in Mondovi, Wis. LIEBENBERG & KAPLAN, Minneapolis architects, have drawn the plans.

GLEN THOMPSON, operator of theatres in Tishomingo and Atoka, Okla., has opened his new 464-seat Thompson theatre in Tishomingo. The new house was built to replace the Princess theatre which was destroyed by fire last winter. Mr. Thompson is also reported to be building a new

A Way to Cash in on That Outdoor Appeal



If outdoor theatres of one kind and another are going to offer competition to the regular theatres, maybe E. D. Chessman, operator of the Baker theatre in Macclenny, Fla., has a suggestion to make. He is building an outdoor bowling alley.

Located just a short distance from his theatre, the project will have two alleys of concrete. The two ends—where the bowlers stand and where the pins are set up—will be the only sections covered.

A new front will be installed on the Lyric at Decorah, Ia., according to H. E. ENGBERTSON, who recently purchased the house.

LOUIS GROVE of Sulphur, Okla., expects to open his new Villa theatre in Oklahoma City, September 15.

VINCENT ARAIZA has taken a lease on the Carlsbad theatre at Carlsbad, Calif.

The New Hopkins theatre in Oakland, Calif., has been opened, with R. T. La Marre as manager. Capacity is 1,000.

The Bridge theatre in San Francisco has been opened as the first of three new houses operated by ATTILIO ZERGA.

Nick Rajacic, formerly manager of the Peoples' theatre in Calumet, Mich., has removed to Marinette, Wis., to manage the Fox-Marinette. KENNETH ZURCHER of Hancock, succeeds Mr. Rajacic at the People's.

MISS NONA KYSTER, operator of the Strand in Ada, Okla., has closed the house for remodeling.

SOL GOLDFARB is remodeling his Ritz in East Alton, Ill.

WILLIAM MENAGH, who had operated several theatres in Denver following the World War, died at his home in Boulder, Col., following a long illness. He was 66. Mr. Menagh at one time operated houses in Greeley, Longmont and Boulder, Colo. A son, ELDON, now operates a theatre at Ft. Lupton, Col.

Essex Square Theatre, Inc., has acquired the 500-seat Pratt's theatre at Deep River, Conn., formerly operated by LOUIS E. PRATT. Mr. Pratt will be retained as house manager. The theatre has been closed for remodeling.

FRANK PANERO, who operates a theatre at Delano, Calif., has purchased the Wasco at Wasco, Calif.

LOUIS and GUS KERESOTES of Springfield, Ill., have taken over the 500-seat Lory theatre in Highland, Ill., from HERBERT LORY.

KENNETH BOWERSOOK, new owner of the Auditorium at Carthage, Ill., has reopened the house after remodeling.

C. S. BALDWIN has renamed his Monroe theatre at Monroe, Ia., to Fox.

MRS. W. E. DIMICK has sold the Capitol at Roisclare, Ill., to the Egyptian Amusement Company at Harrisburg, Ill., which owns and operates a dozen other houses in southern Illinois. The new owners are remodeling the theatre completely.

TRUMAN MOULDER has been named manager of the Geneva at Geneva, Ill. The house, formerly known as the Fargo, has just been remodeled.

MICHAEL LION, JR., manager of the Strand in Vicksburg, Miss., for several years, has succeeded A. M. JACOBS as manager of the Saenger in that city. F. H. BUCHANAN, formerly of the Saenger at Meridian, Miss., has replaced Mr. Lion as the Strand manager.

DON BLOXHAM has bought the Palace at Exira, Ia., from C. A. CARTER. Mr. Carter recently purchased a theatre at Walnut, Ia.

M. W. HUGHES has taken over the Colonial at Lewiston, Ill., from EARL WEBER, and has abandoned his plans for a second theatre there.

JACK F. GOLDMAN, operating the Roosevelt and Lincoln in Cincinnati, has taken over the Beecher in that city. All three houses cater exclusively to colored patronage.

J. C. Parker of Dalhart, Tex., has purchased the Cover and U. S. A. theatres at Fort Morgan, Col.

Remodeling of the Wells theatre at Ft. Wayne, Ind., has been completed, according to ALFRED H. BORKENSTEIN, manager. The interior of the house was completely renovated, and a new air-conditioning system installed.

Three openings are promised for Labor Day in the New Haven, Conn., territory. ROBERT SCHWARTZ will open a new 700-seat house now under construction at Thomaston, Conn. MICHAEL CASCIOLI will have ready at that time his new 900-seat Forest, in the Allingtown section of West Haven. JOSEPH QUITTNER and PETER PERAKOS also expect to have ready for an early September opening their new 700-seat theatre in Jewett City. If present negotiations are completed, Nathan Lampert also plans to open a 500-seat theatre Windsor, at about that time.

GEORGE SCHMIDT, who recently acquired the Fayette theatre in Cincinnati, has taken over the Ohio in Celina, Ohio, from C. MAUS.

RICHARD FRYER has reopened the Virgil at Virgil, Kas. He also operates the Grove at Grove, Okla.

In the recent purchase of four Nebraska houses, H. J. GRIFFITH had as a partner H. F. WILLIAMS of Minneapolis. Purchases were effected in the Williams-Griffith name; however, the four theatres, two of which are at Auburn, Neb., and the other two located at Nebraska City, Neb., will be operated out of the Griffith-Dickinson offices in Kansas City, Mo.

JOHN DANZ, head of Sterling Theatres, Seattle, has taken over the lease of the Orpheum theatre in Portland. The house was formerly operated by the Evergreen State Theatres as part of Fox West Coast.

Classic Art as Decorative Devices in Theatres Today

• Modernism has by no means ruled out the use of plastic figures, and they sometimes can add just the needed decorative "touch"

IN CONTEMPLATING possibilities in the decorative design—or we might say, the environmental scheme—of the modern motion picture theatre, we would do well sometimes to recall the old adage, "Life is short, Art is long." From the point of view of style in decorative effect, the theatre interior today can be exploited along two general avenues—the novel and bizarre, or the modern classical.

It is true in any age that the merely novel—which is to say, superficially different—is relatively short-lived. To consider the theatre: After patrons—say, in a small city or a neighborhood—have been in contact with it several times, if its treatment merely represents a striving for novelty, they are likely to find its former interest for them grow less and less, perhaps becoming even repellant. At best, they may becomes just indifferent. This idea also has been established in a saying—"The bizarre, through repeated recognition, becomes banal."

The Problem of Variety

Theatre treatment of course has less permanence than that of many other classes of buildings, but basically it has a substantial period of life, as modern structures go; and it commonly is being revisited at brief intervals of time, with its decorative forms re-examined, its environmental character re-felt.

Novelty naturally holds a high place in show business. The values of the entertainment are inevitably transferred by the showman to every device by which he tries to attract patronage. The method has been proved sufficiently sound in actual practice to require no apologies. On the other hand, it is obvious that theatres should not be duplicates of each other, even in a general way (for example, the tendency to adopt widely, and abruptly, some new material that happens to be peculiarly advantageous in theatre architecture, is to be discouraged; it may be added, too, that many a good material has been "killed off" by becoming a fad). Fortunately, modernism is not so restrictive in its decorative devices as our usual uses of it may indicate. Classic-modernism is another way of being authentically modern, and it provides variety.

A ready means of introducing ornamentation of authentic beauty into the modern-classical interior treatment of theatres is the plastic figure, which is available in durable reproductions of fine pieces of art. Costly buildings of a monumental character, and entirely modern in their architecture, are today employing sculpture for friezes, medallions and other decorative devices, in full-round and bas-relief, patterned on both primtive and classic art. Such ornamental pieces are, indeed, being produced for these buildings by sculptors who are entirely to be identified with modern art. The availability of reproductions of classic pieces, many of them facsimiles of famous works in museums, bring such decorative devices within reach of today's theatre.

Modern design is modern essentially in the sense that the structure is arranged to fit the purpose efficiently. This functionalism receives great emphasis among some designers. It should be remembered, however, that the theatre must provide suitable emotional conditions for the enjoyment of the motion picture, and this too is a function of theatre design. But so far as the relationship of modern architecture and classic art is concerned, it is to be noted that the very simplicity of line and surface that modernism brought back into favor, is in sympathy with classic architecture, and the same motive for introducing sculptured forms into Greek architecture applies to modern buildings.

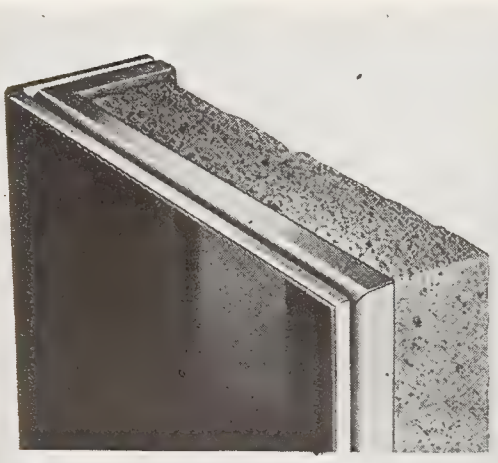
Bas-relief entitled "Cupid Awakening Psyche," which illustrates a group available for various applications set flush in a plaster wall, as at the edge of stepped panels in an auditorium, in narrow spaces between doorways, in a women's lounge, and so on.



Out of the plastic pieces obtainable in relatively inexpensive reproductions, may be selected statues and statuettes, busts, bas-reliefs, etc., aptly expressing romance (love), music, drama, gaiety and other ideas pertinent to the interests of the theatre, as well as subjects with which to express the name of the theatre (Lincoln, for example, or Pioneer) or to symbolize its locality (such as Gettysburg). It also should be pointed out that the patens (thin disc-like forms) which more recently have been developed, make it possible to use composition reproductions with an effect comparable to bronze or marble.

MODERN Architectural & Decorating MATERIALS

GLASTONE

THE DEVELOPMENT of means to combine Vitrolite as an architectural glass facing material, with other materials to form a masonry unit, has resulted in a new product called Glastone. It has been brought out by the manufacturers of Vitrolite, the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company of Toledo.

Glastone is made by bonding Vitrolite with haydite, a lightweight concrete, in the manner indicated in the accompanying illustration. Between the haydite and the glass is a mastic binder, while to make the union further secure, a metal anchor extends from the glass facing over the edge of the slab and is crimped into the concrete. The block, with architectural facing in any desired color and pattern of Vitrolite, is thus a load-bearing unit for the construction of exterior or other walls.

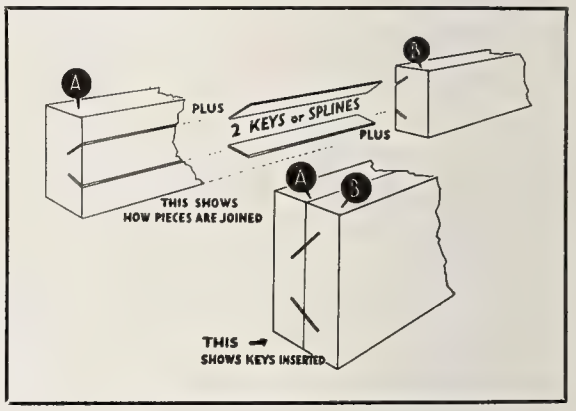
Glastone is available in thicknesses of from 4 to 8 inches and with surface areas up to 12 square feet. It is applied like any masonry unit, and plaster can be used directly on the inner surface of the wall it forms.

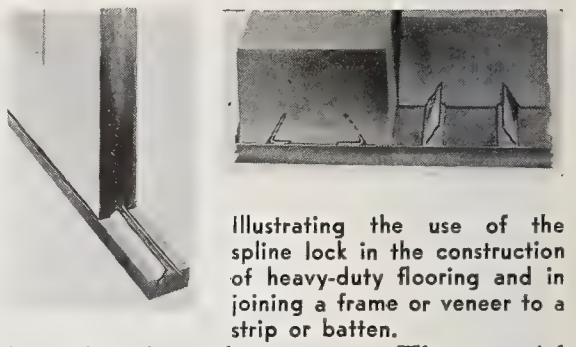
Data on tests presented by the manufacturer give the strength as 1,500 to 2,000 pounds per square inch over the gross area, which compares with a compressive strength of 1,000 pounds in representative building codes. It is also pointed out that the glass contributes a higher resistance to heat transmission than is possessed by cast stone or brick. The glass of course also allows the exterior surface of this masonry unit to be washed with soap and water.



Spline Lock

A JOINING device consisting in a spline of metal (or wood if such material is indicated) fitting into grooves of specific dimensions and angle, has been developed as a means of effecting a secure union without the use of tongue-and-groove methods, dowels, nails or screws or other conventional means. Called the Homer Spline Lock, it is applicable to wood, metal, tile, plastics or any combination of such materials. How the spline is applied is indicated in an accompanying descriptive drawing.

Use of the spline lock is based on the principle of friction and tension, which can be controlled through the width of the splines.



This joining device is intended for innumerable applications—bonding veneer to its softwood bonding, formation of block flooring, substitution for glue, furniture assembly, etc., etc. Obviously, a method of this kind would have specific advantages in the erection of temporary structures, such as radio and stage sets, lobby displays and so on.

With respect to the theatre, the method would have the same application as those related to any building or interior construction, but it may be additionally pointed out in relation to remodeling involving the installation of veneer finish over existing walls, ceilings, pilasters, piers, etc.

Splines of any dimensions and suitable material are available, and a special tool is used to form the grooves. The material and equipment are marketed through a licensor, the Doughty Marketing Corporation of New York.

walls have a pastel blue and vermilion Grecian cornice painted over a Prestwood base. The walls below are covered with horizontally figured satin damask in a cream leaf design on a plum ground. The rear of the side walls, and also the rear wall, are covered with royal blue velour having a design executed in applied moulds and built-up squares in ivory and bright Chinese red. The design employs concentric circles 8 feet in diameter, turning into horizontal lines running along the rear side walls, the cap of the standee space, around to the opposite wall, to finish into another circle. This pattern also forms a secondary frieze throughout the rear of the auditorium, as well as the cap treatment for the standee space facing the auditorium.

The cement wainscoting and floor throughout the auditorium are finished in dark maroon with a "dye" recently developed to be used in place of concrete paint. This finishing material penetrates about $\frac{1}{16}$-inch into the cement and can be restored to its original lustre by the application of a special wax which can be procured for the purpose.

The top of the proscenium is shaped like a huge lintel over the supporting columns and actually functions as an indirect light trough, throwing light on that portion of the ceiling which terminates its ornamental design in the proscenium.

The auditorium is 115 feet long from the screen to the last row of seats, which is 96 feet from the first row. Seating, on a reversed slope type floor, is in three banks and the rows are spaced 32 inches back-to-back.

The chairs have backs upholstered in coral mohair fabric, seats covered in blue artificial leather. Arm rests are in natural maple finish.

¶ Projection

The projection room is 20 feet long by 11 feet deep and 9 feet high. The walls are finished with a 7-foot high olive green wainscot, and the remaining 2 feet of wall, and also the ceiling, have a natural acoustic plaster finish. The room is lighted with drop cord fixtures.

Projection is at an angle of 3° ; the screen image is 20 feet wide. Equipment includes two projectors, which represent the first installation of the new Brenkert "Premiere" mechanism, complete with Brenkert pedestals and Brenkert "Enarc" low-voltage high intensity lamps. Arc supply is by Robin-Imperial motor generators, 65-130 amperes, 220 volts, 60-cycle, 3-phase, complete with panelboard and rheostats.

¶ Air Supply

A feature of the Kentucky theatre's air-conditioning is a three-step variable control method of regulation. In the machine equipment room are three General Refrigeration "Lipman" 15-ton compressors. In a penthouse above each compressor is a More glamour, more comfort, more efficient theatres, and more "boxoffice" at a lower cost, result from F & Y centralized responsibility and erection service.

From conception of the idea through the planning of every detail, including the design and installation of the mechanical refrigeration and the complete decorating and furnishing, ready to sell tickets, The KENTUCKY is an F & Y job.

Combining efficiency of operation, low maintenance cost and startling beauty, this theatre is an outstanding achievement of which any agency or combination of design and erection agencies might well be proud. It is a fitting testimonial to F & Y's specialized ability to design and construct theatres that are live, pulsating "boxoffice" successes at reasonable costs.

These columns are regular features of Better Theatres dealing with methods by which the theatre may be planned as efficiently as possible for the exhibition of motion pictures. Both Mr. Schlanger and Mr. Potwin are consultants on inquiries from readers seeking counsel on the planning of theatres.

VESTIBULE SPACE

IN THE EARLIEST of the motion picture theatres, the street approach and the seats of the auditorium were separated only by a distance of a few steps and not more than a single set of doors. Later, in the days of lavish theatre construction, this space between the seats and the street started, in size and decoration, to vie with the auditorium. As a matter of fact, you could put a fair-sized audience in the lobbies of some of the theatres.

In many instances, plot conditions force either excessive lobby space or inadequate area for passage from street to seats. In these instances you have the problem of making large spaces appear smaller, or one of making the best of limited space. But in those cases where plot conditions leave complete freedom to the designer, the function of this area becomes the guide for determining space requirements.

The Transition Area

The approach leading to the seats usually starts with a vestibule exposed to the weather; then there commonly is a set of doors, a loby, then another set of doors, foyer space, and finally the space called the standee or promenade area immediately behind the seating area. Sometimes another set of doors separates the foyer space from the standee space.

Space limitations and the need for economy in structure cost in many instances make it necessary to omit the third set of doors and the foyer space. The third set of doors are entirely unnecessary if the first and second set are arranged properly. If there is no space that can be used as a foyer, it is worthwhile to sacrifice some of the standee space and make it look like foyer space by having a high wall instead of the usual 4-foot standee rail.

Depth Considerations

The vestibule really has only one important function, to provide wall space for attraction displays. There has been a tendency to have this space as deep as 15 feet or more, but less depth—say about 7 feet—is more desirable, inasmuch as a vestibule very deep "puts the show," so to speak, too far away.

Additionally, since the walls of this area should be finished with the more durable exterior materials, the minimization of the depth makes it possible to have a proper finish without unwarranted cost.

These approach areas will be further discussed in following columns.

Locating Lounge and Toilet Rooms

FROM time to time inquiries refer to the problem of the proper placing of the men's and women's toilet rooms. Where most of the seating capacity is on one floor, it is preferable to have these rooms on the main floor. In any case, the women's room should always be on the level accommodating the bulk of the seating capacity.

Even if the space that can be alloted to a women's room is small, requiring a very compact arrangement, it is preferable to use such space on the main floor rather than more commodious area in an upper or lower level. Not only is stair climbing to a women's room objectionable, but it is inadvisable to isolate such a room.

Some Space Usually Available

The space normally devoted to a stairway to reach rest rooms can be a valuable part of main floor space for a lounge or toilet room. There is hardly an instance where a plan could not, by careful study, be arranged to conserve enough space for lounges and toilet rooms on the main seating level. Even the sacrifice of a few seats in capacity is worthwhile if it will help make possible proper placement of the lounges.

Men's and women's room entrance doors should be placed at least 10 feet apart. The entrances should be from areas where the least amount of traffic to and from seats exists. Yet the entrance to the women's room should be where it is under the eye of the staff.

Sign Requirements

Restroom signs should be on the doors as well as above the doors. On the doors, the sign may be painted lettering, whereas above the doors an illuminated sign is needed for distant reading. There are, of course, many interesting ways of providing such signs, decoratively and also subtly.

Proper lounge and toilet room arrangements are exceedingly important in the motion picture theatre. Lack of such accommodations becomes an indication to the patron of the lack of regard that the management has for the patron's comfort and sense of well-being. —B. S.

EFFECT OF CARPETING

A SUBSTANTIAL percentage of the total sound absorption in the average theatre auditorium is made up of woven fabrics. These materials are thought of primarily in terms of their decorative value, yet they all contribute in some measure to the acoustical characteristics of an auditorium.

The total, or combined, absorption at different frequencies, of such materials used, may not be sufficient to produce the best acoustical conditions, and commercial absorbing materials may also be required.

Each one of the various woven materials, such as carpet, seat coverings, and possibly wall hangings or flat wall coverings, performs a definite acoustical function.

Variations in Absorption

Let us consider carpet, for example, one of the first types of materials known to absorb sound. Carpet, when used for the aisles and standing space, contributes about one-tenth of the necessary sound absorption for the average auditorium.

As is true of many materials, carpet varies in its sound absorbing efficiency with quality, thickness and method of installation; that is, whether or not it is installed with a suitable cushion underneath it. In a thickness of ¼-inch or less, and without cushioning, carpet will absorb only about 15% of the sound energy striking its surface. A heavy pile carpet ½-inch to ¾-inch in thickness, with a ½-inch cushion underneath, may absorb as much as 50% at the first sound incidence.

In general, carpet alone has its greatest absorption at the high frequencies, but when it is used in combination with a carpet cushion its low frequency absorption is materially increased.

Other Acoustic Values

Two other factors with respect to the use of carpet in the aisles and standing space should not be overlooked. These are:

(1) Its value as a noise reducing agent;

(2) The effect it has upon the elimination of objectionable first reflections which frequently originate at aisle areas.

A medium to heavyweight carpet, with cushion, reduces impact noise caused by footfalls, practically to inaudibility.

With respect to first reflections, it has been found from actual experience that aisle areas which are uncarpeted or covered only with rubber runners, sometimes contribute to inferior acoustical conditions at points toward the rear of the auditorium.

CARPET Selection & maintenance

Foyer and lounge floors, and stairways, are always conspicuous—keep them well groomed.

Effective Uses for Patent-Back Carpet

¶ How broadloom may be readily applied to the purposes of specialized design in theatres

By NORMAN PATTERSON

ONE OF THE MOST interesting developments in woven floor coverings applicable to theatres is the so-called patent-back carpet. Made up according to individual design preferences and floor shape, of sections of broadloom carpeting, it is notably versatile.

Process, or patent-back, broadloom carpeting employs broadloom woven in the regular broadloom manner; through the addition of a composition of either latex or pyroxylin which impregnates the bottom of the weave, each pile tuft becomes permanently locked in the backing. This method permits the carpet to be cut in any direction without raveling.

When any two straight edges of this material are butted together closely, the pile meshes so that a seam is scarcely discernible, while the seam itself lays flat.

How Sections Are Joined

Process-back carpeting is joined without sewing by applying a specially treated tape to the composition-treated back of the material at the point of junction. The cement used in attaching the tape to the carpet is waterproof (manufacturers of such carpets say that the resulting seam is extraordinarily strong). Because of these characteristics, process-back carpeting can provide a tailor-made job for any directional scheme or odd floor shape, at moderate cost. Pieces of any size or shape can be permanently joined to give the appearance of a single carpet presented as a designed special unit for the particular area in which it is placed. This fabric can be supplied in any length and width and is sold in 9-inch multiples of breadth. Different mills produce patent-back flooring fabrics in widths ranging from 54 inches to 9 feet, and in additional widths to make the room size are attached by means of the cemented tape on the back without any waste to speak of. This procedure is practical for areas that are irregular or odd-shaped, since pieces trimmed from one section can be reused for cutouts and insets in other places with real economy in gross yardage for the space in the theatre that is to be covered.

Pattern Possibilities

Available in a wide range of colors, plain or striated, and in several different qualities, there are no restrictions as to size, shape and combinations of colors. With respect to qualities of design, it is to be noted, of course, that we are here dealing with broadloom, and not woven pattern. The delicate, complex detail and subtlety of configuration and coloration so important to the effect of a Velvet, a Wilton, an Axminster, or a Chenille, are naturally absent. Patent-back carpet must be applied within its logical limitations, but it has specific uses in the theatre, along the lines illustrated in the accompanying photographs of actual theatre installations.

In Figure 1, we have a short, narrow foyer in which a small-figured woven design would be indicated. Using broadloom sections in a patent-back carpet, a light-colored field was formed to create the feeling of spaciousness, and contrasting a dark border provided individuality by absorbing within itself all the minor cutouts, such as the door sills and posts. With a minimum use of additional fabric, a cleverly cut out leaf and stem design serves both as a decoration and a directional guide to the stairs and auditorium entrances.

In Figure 2 we have an excellent example of the possibility of setting off specialized space within a foyer. At one corner, the simple insertion of two different-colored broad stripes, and the quarter section of a circle, resulted in a little secluded "lounge" effect, without interfering with the general foyer characteristics.

Directional Effects

The stairway in Figure 3, leading to the balcony, has been treated with a threefold purpose: First, to break up the plane surfaces of the steps with an eye to visual aid in ascending and descending. Second, the stripes serve as traffic guides and separators. Third, as a decoration in itself, to relieve the monotony of a plain single-color carpet.

In Figure 4 is shown mezzanine area in which the wall design and ceiling striping are reflected in the floor treatment with harmonizing effect, then at the same time the floor pattern serves to define clearly the landing areas of the steps leading up to the balcony and down to the ground floor.

An idea of the flexibility in decorative possibilities of process-back carpeting is given in Figure 5. The fabric not only covers the floor, it also becomes an integrated part of this powder room. The curved lounge seating arrangement, the circular mirror on the wall, the rounded console table, and even the luminaire, find an interesting balance in the differently colored discs inserted into the background. Although additional yardage and labor are involved in a floor layout of this type, it was apparently justified here so that the floor treatment would be in keeping with the other furnishings in the room.

As shown in the accompanying protographs the design figures are formed by cutting and inserting different colored fabrics into the ground carpeting. Since, as far as yardage is concerned, there are no minimum quantity requirements the savings in cost through reduction in carpet waste helps to pay for the highly individualized and decorative effects received in return. You can spend as much as you like on some very special intricate design but in most cases you can get a custom tailored effect which is most suited to your theatre at little or no more cost over that of regular patterned carpeting.

It is well to remember that in a patent-back installation, new decorative features may be added at any later date, or the old section can be taken out and a new one inserted into the carpet providing it is not too worn generally. Burns, stains, wear and damage spots can, of course, be replaced easily by cutting out only the portion to be repaired and replacing with new fabric in the same color and quality. Otherwise, process-back carpeting receives the same type of maintenance which you would give any other carpeting, such as Velvet or Wilton.

TWO PATTERNS ADDED TO THEATRE LINE

■ Two new modern patterns in the contract carpet line of the Charles P. Cochrane Company, Bridgeport, Pa., one of "modernistic" classification, the other a modernization of traditional leaf motives. These are among a number in a new group in which French and Georgian figurations are emphasized, in blendings of turquoise, gold and brown; sea green and midnight blue, coral and black. The leaf pattern illustrated above is stocked in turquoise, gold and brown; in the other pattern as stocked, the figures are carried out in green, orange, gold and green on a blue ground. Both are Wiltons.

EXACT ACOUSTIC SCIENCE TO CALL ON; AND CARPET STOCKS TO CHOOSE FROM

CONTINUING the good work of investigating methods of bringing the theatre into closer working co-ordination with the studio, the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences has formed a committee to direct studies of acoustical conditions in theatres. When sound came, there was naturally quite a stir about acoustics (the word itself had been kicking around for a long time, but most of us in this business just left it in the dictionary—thank goodness that was one thing we didn't have to worry about; and then—); our auditoriums, pretty though we thought them, were in most cases not much good now. They had echoes, the wrong reverberation factor, et cetera. It was kind of discouraging at first.

But we were an ingenious lot. We soon developed a couple of rules-of-thumb—little tricks of the trade—to take care of those new-fangled sound waves. Nothing to it, after all! Slap this stuff all over the walls, or that stuff all over the ceiling, or something else all over the rear wall, most any old way, and there you were. . . . Now, when we are well into the second decade of the "talkies" (there's a word we've got rid of, anyway), the producers' body of experts finds conditions calling for their attention.

And they are right. The auditorium is not just a room with eye-appeal and seats. It is part of the motion picture mechanism, the gears of which start turning at the studio. Light, acoustics, vision, comfort—these are auditorium problems, and all-important ones. Rules-of-thumb, stock plans simply are not practicable.

It was, we are happy to find out, to the failure of some architects, as well as many theatre operators, to give due consideration to acoustics in their planning that the press release announcing the Academy studies referred in this statement:

"At the present time there is a great lack of knowledge on the entire subject of motion picture theatre acoustics. . . ."

This of course is so palpably untrue that it could not have been intended to mean what it seems to say, coming from an organization as well informed as the Research Council. The demonstrable fact is, there is an exceedingly competent science of acoustics right now, and there has been for quite some time. It is extremely likely, indeed, that the Council's acoustics committee will only be using in their studies the body of knowledge and the technique of that science. We quote from an editorial statement in the August, 1939, issue of the Architectural Forum:

"Within comparatively recent years, and especially since the advent of the sound movie, architectural acoustics has ceased to be a matter of holding one's breath and hoping for the best and has become an exact science. . . ."

That science is available to theatre operators and architects as well as motion picture technologists.

All we have to do is to use it.

The other day a fellow who was remodeling a theatre made the remark: "I've got the job just about done, but I can't find a carpet I like. Why don't the carpet people get up some really good patterns for theatres?" . . . Well, of all things! Either this chap is suffering from general maladjustment to his environment (as the psychiatrists say) or he didn't give much time to looking.

The fact is (seems we're going in for facts today), the carpet manufacturers have been building up such a mass of patterns for every application that they're about in the same boat as the music composers, who can't write two measures without using a tune of somebody else sometime, somewhere (ah, there's a hit title for you—sometime, somewhere!—but, alas, it has been used before).

No, there's a carpet for every kind of theatre treatment—more than one—in the stock of designs available right now. If there is anything needing rectification in connection with carpet selection for theatres, it is the tendency to give the matter too little attention. The right pattern is there. Take the time to find it.

And we want to get this in: The American Seating Company has now got out a booklet that is just jammed full of information about auditorium seating—how it is manufactured, what tests are applied, materials used, and so on. We think it can supply valuable background to many theatre people. And doubtless it can be had for the asking.

—George Schutz.

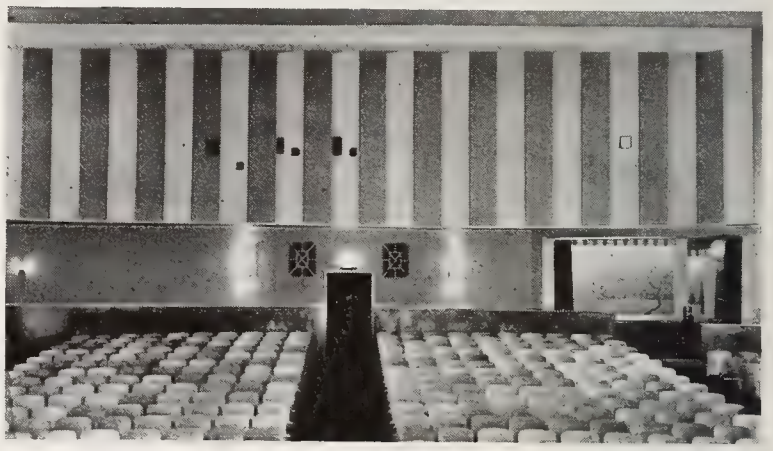
FOR VISION DECORATION AND SELLING

"... light is a first tool of showmanship."



¶ The transformation pictured is that of the Paramount's Marion theatre, Marion, Ohio. Redesigned by Charles C. Burton, Paramount architect and engineer, the total job cost $12,000, the lighting $1,100.

Making Light Play A Leading Role in Low-Cost Remodeling

■ The new lobby, below, is lighted by four Ruby Lamp ceiling fixtures, each with a 100-watt incandescent lamp within a 5-inch ground glass cylinder mounting three sand-blasted glass rings. The largest of these has a diameter of 16 inches. Metal portions of the fixture are finished in cadmium. The recessed light source above the concession stand is an Alumilite striplight. Walls are in rose-colored Johns-Manville flexboard.

■ Old Marion exterior, and the new, with Artkraft red and blue trimmed marquee and silhouette-letter attraction boards. Eight 100-watt incandescents, in Westinghouse fresnel reflectors, are used in the soffit.

Use of Roundel Reflectors to Cut Illumination Costs

DEVELOPMENTS of the past two years in both lighting equipment and the methods of using light in the theatre, have tended to focus attention on illumination as a decorative medium. The fact that these developments have also brought about dramatic new economies in light costs, while not overlooked, too often has received secondary attention.

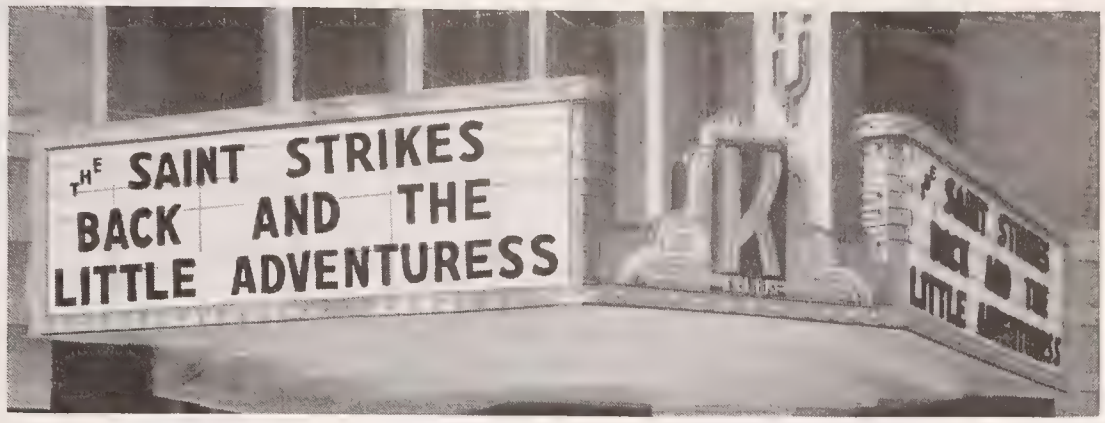
The combined benefits of superior illumination and lower costs have been achieved with many types of lighting, incandescent and fluorescent, and in almost all cases the new illuminating possibilities have been as important economically as in lighting effect and decoration. For example, the fluorescent lamp has attracted interest principally in its revolutionary characteristics as the first efficient source of colored light; its reduced current consumption per lumen is quite as striking.



Similarly the roundel type of reflector-and-lens for incandescent bulbs, affords not only a distinctively new lighting effect, but great saving in both current and first costs.

This reflector consists essentially of three parts (it is illustrated in two sizes, assembled and dismantled). One is a reflector which screws into any standard incandescent socket. The second is a candelabra-type bulb that screws into the reflector, and the third a multi-lens roundel.

Current costs for equivalent light are enormously reduced by the accurate, slip-proof optical arrangements. The efficiency realized is such that the end-on effectiveness of a 7-watt candelabra bulb mounted in one of these units is equal to that of a 25-watt colored bulb in an ordinary socket, while a 10-watt candelabra lamp duplicates the illumination provided by an exposed 40-watt lamp of the same color. Current consumption, in other words, is reduced 75 per cent.

The multi-lens roundel covers are made in a great variety of colors, and in addition to outdoor uses the fixture is also adaptable to some other parts of the theatre, such as stair wells, low-ceiling corridors, and similar locations, where it may serve effectively to provide supplementary illumination in conjunction with other light sources, or to provide general medium illumination without other assistance.

Outdoors it is used in the soffit to rejuvenate an old sign, for example, particularly if the sign is given a modern appearance by adapting it to flush-mounting.

SEATING the auditorium

"... no theatre can be better than its seating."

A New Chair in Low-Price Group

A NEW MODEL auditorium chair to meet the demands of the limited budget has been added to the line of the American Seating Company. Given the classification name of "Avion," this chair departs from the regular line in several features, one of them the construction of the standards. These are of steel, instead of cast iron. End standards are stamped from single sheets of steel, and the stampings are formed to provide double-walled construction, completely closed along the inner side.

Springs are of the no-sag, or spring-arch construction similar to that used in the same manufacturer's "Bodiform" chair, and also like the latter, upholstery fabrics are attached by the groove method, employing neither wood nor tacks. Foamed latex cushions can be obtained if desired.

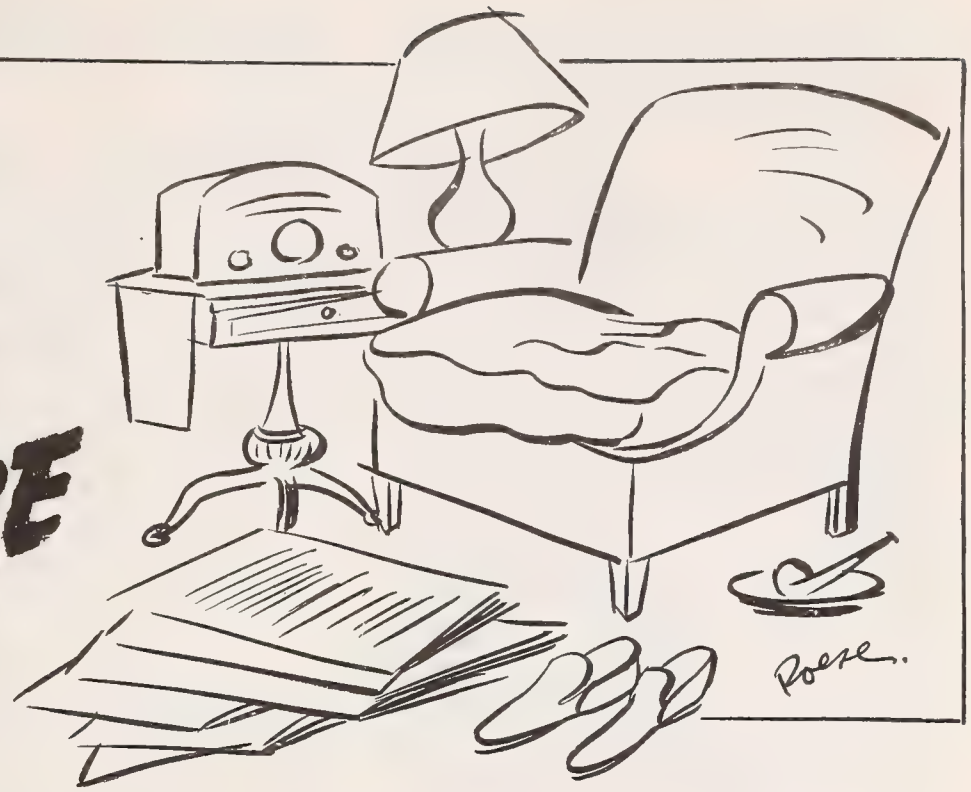
This model also provides a choice of spring, padded or plywood back panels, plain or metal-edged, and the pitch of both the seat and backs may be adapted directly to the specific gradient of the floor slope.

Removable Chair Plan for Television

OF INTEREST now perhaps only as a curiosity, yet indicating thought already being given arrangements for television in the theatre, is a scheme for installing readily removable auditorium seats presented in a recent issue of the Ideal Kinema, a leading London publication devoted to the physical theatre. The drawing shown accompanied a description of the arrangement which essentially consists in the anchoring of certain chairs in the rear or central bank of main floor seating where the television projectors are set up for television.

Devised by George Coles, architectural editor of the Ideal Kinema, and a prominent British theatre architect, the plan calls for metal "rails" placed on the floor 2 feet, 10 inches on centers. Welded into them are bolts at the same back-to-back dimensions as the chairs, and according to Mr. Coles' description, the seat boards, which have, as a rule, two seats in line, are then threaded over the bolts and fixed with butterfly nuts and washers.

New Standard with Adjustable Light



AVAILABLE in various fittings according to preferences and budget, the chair illustrated with padded back and spring-edge seat represents a new model of the Peabody Seating Company. This model is in the regular line and may be obtained with steel back panel, self-lifting seat and closed standards.

The design of the end standard includes provision for ready placement of the aisle light according to height indicated by the aisle and auditorium lighting conditions.

Air Movement Control in The Theatre Ventilating System

¶ The second article on air-motion in a series of "plain talks" on what we are after in air-conditioning

IN CONSIDERING air-motion specifically as one of the three factors in the control of Effective Temperature, the preceding article (issue of July 22) approached this quality of the air from the point of view laid down in the beginning of this series—that of the body's response to atmospheric conditions. We can now discuss air-motion more directly with respect to the part it plays in our schemes to bring about true comfort conditions in the theatre.

Air-Motion Effect

To understand the importance of Effective Temperature, it must be borne in mind that the body has three ways of controlling its internal temperature level through the action of the skin in response to air-heat, air-moisture and air-motion. It should be further understood that these three factors are more or less interchangeable. Suppose you had a 78° temperature, 50% relative humidity, and still air (absolutely no air-motion). On the Revised Effective Temperataure Index this would be a 78° Effective Temperature. You could still maintain the same 78° E. T. with an 80° air-heat (dry-bulb, or ordinary, thermometer) temperature provided you dropped the humidity to 34%, or increased air-motion to 50 feet per minute. At 150 fpm. the Effective Temperature would have dropped to 75°. Why? Because all three functions of body control have been increased by the activity of the air, resulting in a greater heat loss from the body.

It is here assumed that the moving air is at the same temperature level as the still air. If this moving air comes directly from a duct outlet, it may be 3° or 4° degrees cooler. In this case you would have to add this to the already 3° Effective Temperature drop, thus resulting in a 6° to 7° Effective Temperature drop in that particular current.

Here is the very nub of the principal public complaint. You may show at one location a 78° dry-bulb (air-heat) temperature, and 50% relative humidity, and argue that this would be considered perfect for the season. At the same time fugitive currents of air at 6° to 7° degrees Effective Temperature lower than those shown on the instrument are playing around on the heads of shoulders of your patrons. This is due to incorrect mixing and distribution of incoming air.

A few years ago this might have been excused for lack of suitable equipment. Today, with the use of improved outlets, the air supply can be mixed and distributed without turbulence at the desired Effective Temperature.

A half truth is some times more dangerous than a lie. Because air-movement is known to have a cooling effect on the body, it has been used as a substitute for lack of control of temperature (air-heat) and humidity (air-moisture). If it is used, as in the case of a common electric fan, to stir up air at room temperatutre, air-motion has its place. Even then it was found necessary to develop the oscillating fan to provide the off-and-on movement, not so liable to cause annoyance and physical troubles. There is only one way to ensure satisfactory conditions and that is to control all air-movement at head level (breathing zone) to provide air-motion of less than 50 feet per minute.

There are many different kinds of meters on the market to indicate air-motion but they all require expert handling if satisfactory results are to be gained. Perfection is not expected at this stage. The desire is to acquaint the manager with the rudiments that he should master in arriving at Effective Temperature levels for his theatre. There are simple means of knowing fairly accurately how air is distributed around the theatre. When the theatre is empty, turn on the full air distribution. A lighted candle carried around to all the seating areas will show by the action of the flame any undue air-motion. Better still, a simple device for appraising air-motion may be made by fastening 1-inch strip, 18 inches long, of some sheer material, such as voile or georgette cloths used for women's dresses, to the center of the handle of a crooked-handled cane. When held aloft, the dangling, free end of this strip should never swing through an area wider than 3 inches, nor touch the shaft of the cane when the shaft is held away from the source of the air-motion.

It has been said by one of the leading engineers in theatre air-conditioning that if all air-movement were reduced to less than 50 feet per minute, and an Effective Temperature of 78° were maintained throughout July and August in those sections of the United States having official temperatures of from 80° to 90° (see Effective Temperature Map in these columns in the June 24th issue), 95% of all present complaints would be eliminated in that area. This would include the majority of the theatres in this country.

Aspirating Outlets

The newer types of ceiling outlet use the true aspiration principle. They mingle the incoming colder air with the higher temperature room air before releasing the total mixture in a twisting action that soon spends its velocity at the desired Effective Temperature level (breathing zone). This principle is absolutely correct. No matter with what force you shoot a stream of cold air into air of higher temperature, it will drop because of its greater weight, unless raised to near room temperature before its force is spent.

The theatre auditorium should be an easier problem, in some respects, than stores, restaurants, etc., which characteristically have lower height, because of the greater upper space in which to mix the incoming cooler air with the higher temperature room air, before it comes in contact with the people.

On the other hand, there are few places where people are packed in so closely as in the theatre. This causes a great upward surge of body heat and moisture released from the audience. At what point this upward flow of depleted warm, moist air from the audience comes in contact with the cooler, drier fresh air, determines the comfort of the audience.

In theatres with old type outlets, where satisfactory distribution is difficult and it

Determination of Air Conditions By One Instrument

REFERENCE HAS been made recently in these columns, in discussions of instruments of practical value in the operation of theatre air-conditioning—that is, instruments in addition to those directly involved in automatic control—to a special type of thermometer providing direct reading of Effective Temperature, eliminating the necessity of calculation from dry-bulb and wet-bulb readings. Inquiries have resulted as to just how this thermometer, called the Bailey-Parsons "Therhumiter," is used, and perhaps the most informative way of dealing with its application to comfort air-conditioning is to relate it to methods which have been discussed in the current series of "talks" on air-conditioning fundamentals.

The Therhumiter may be considered a thermometer which combines in one calibrated tube (not greatly unlike, in appearance, the tube of any regular thermometer) indication of the degrees of air-heat (dry-bulb, or regular, thermometer) and of the amount of air-mosture (wet-bulb)—plus the effect of air-motion. As the articles in the series referred to have pointed out, it is the relationship of air-heat, air-moisture and air-motion which is represented by the term Effective Temperature. The single calibrated tube which essentially constitutes the Therhumiter, indicates in a single reading this relationship of the three key qualities of the air—that is, it gives a direct reading of Effective Temperature.

The physical character of the Therhumiter has been previously described. Suffice it to point out here that it has a center-tube—that giving the Effective Temperature reading—and to the right of this, a regular thermometer (giving degrees of air-heat, or of temperature as we ordinarily use the word) is placed at a precise height in relation to the center tube. By comparing the degree of Effective Temperature as in-

Comfort Zone of Composite Effective Temperature and Psychrometric Chart

Representation of "Comfort Zone" Section of the Therhumiter

(See accompanying text)

NOTE: Arrows indicate lines representing Effective Temperatures probably suitable on an average to the United States for the four seasons of the year.

dicated by the center tube, with the degree of air-heat temperature indicated by the right-hand tube, the Relative Humidity at any moment can be readily ascertained for all practical purposes (a simple formula for this calculation is engraved on the scale).

It will be recalled that in the series of articles cited above, in both text and on a temperature and relative humidity map of the United States, certain Effective Temperatures for the various climatic sections of the country were recommended for July and August. On an accompanying chart, reproducing the so-called comfort zone of a composite Effective Temperature and Psychrometric Chart, certain Effective Temperatures are indicated for the various periods of the year (without reference here to any particular section of the country). Let us see what these mean in terms of the usual dry-bulb and wet-bulb readings.

Finding Effective Temperature

You will notice on the left wet-bulb temperatures referring to lines running obliquely up to the right, and on the right are the dry-bulb temperatures referring to lines running obliquely up to the left. The heavy cross lines (horizontal) represent Effective Temperature equivalents made up of the combination of wet- and dry-bulb temperatures.

To find any Effective Temperature, you must trace the dry-bulb temperature obliquely up to the left of the chart, until you meet the wet-bulb temperature; where these two lines meet, find the nearest horizontal line, which will indicate the Effective Temperature.

To find the relative humidity, note the vertical line nearest the intersection of the dry-bulb and wet-bulb temperature lines; the percentage of relative humidity is shown at the bottom for each vertical line.

If you have a direct reading humidity indicator, note the intersection of the dry-bulb temperature with the vertical relative humidity line; the Effective Temperature will be indicated by the crossline nearest this intersection.

All Factors Combined

Now the function of the Therhumiter can be readily understood: It eliminates such calculations and references to a chart. It makes these calculations automatically, and you read the Effective Temperature directly. Its center column of red spirits is a combination of wet- and dry-bulb thermometers on a single stem and gives direct reading of the amount of air-heat, air-moisture and air-motion, in the single value wanted, that of Effective Temperature. From this value, and also by the determination of the Relative Humidity by comparison with the blue spirits regular thermometer at the right, one knows what adjustments to make in the operation of the air-conditioning equipment to provide the desired Effective Temperature, or one at least as close to that ideal as the equipment is capable of providing.

The Guiding Idea Of Liability Law

owner liable in heavy damages, the higher court reversed this verdict, saying:

"The circumstances of the fall and injury are indeed unfortunate, but we cannot conceive of a state of facts or basis in law for a recovery. . . . It was the duty of the plaintiff (injured patron) to adduce sufficient proof as to all other necessary elements of a prima facie case."

Patron Carelessness

Obviously, a careless and negligent patron never is entitled to recover damages for an injury sustained in a theatre (if all persons who sustain injuries in theatres could recover damages from theatre owners, it might ultimately be that the business of operating theatres would be more profitable to injured patrons than to theatre owners!).

For illustration, in Heckel v. Standard Gateway Theatre, Inc. (281 N.W. 640), it was shown that a patron slipped on a balcony stairway and fell down the stairs. She sued for damages. The testimony proved that the stairway on which the injuries were sustained was only partially covered with carpet, there being a space approximately 8 inches wide on each side of the stairway exposed to the concrete. The patron proved that when she put her right foot down on a step, her heel got caught on the rug; she testified that she could not see because the lights were dim. The jury in the lower court listened to this testimony and held the theatre owner liable for heavy damages. However, the higher court reviewed all of the testimony and held the theatre owner not liable, saying:

"We have carefully examined the evidence both in the case and the record and we fail to find any evidence which sustains the finding that the stairway was not as free from danger as the nature of the place would reasonably permit. . . . It appears from the testimony that thousands of people had gone up and down the stairway both before and after the accident with the carpet in the same condition as it was on the night of the accident and no one had discovered any defect or sustained any injury."

The important question involved, in all suits against theatre owners for damages, is whether the theatre owner used "ordinary care" to prevent the injury. In other words, the sole and only question for the court to decide is whether the theatre owner used that degree of care used by other prudent and experienced theatre operators.

This means simply that if all theatre owners in the United States paid no attention at all to the safety of patrons (because they were not required to do so), then no theatre owner would be liable in damages for an ordinary injury. However, the fact that the majority of theatre owners do actually use care to prevent injuries (at least partly because they must), increases the legal care that has to be exercised.

Certainly this is actual law, because many higher courts have said that "ordinary care" is that degree of care used by the average and prudent theatre owner under the identical circumstances of the injury.

In Hubbard et ux. v. Embassy Theatre Corporation (82 Pac. [2d] 155), the court quoted:

" 'What would be reasonable care under one set of facts, might not be reasonable care under another set of facts, but the difference would not be in the degree of care to be used, but rather in the amount.

In Worcester v. Theatrical Enterprises Corporation (82 Pac. [2d] 68), the court said:

"While the appellant (theatre owner) was required to exercise only ordinary care in protecting the respondent (patron) from such an injury as this while she was proceeding along the passageway thus provided, that duty was not performed if such an occurrence as this should have been reasonably anticipated by the appellant."

What Price Projection Inefficiency?

●Discussing the basis of true operating economy, and presenting power cost data on two more carbon trims, in the second article of a group

By HENRY D. BEHR

WE SOMETIMES are surprised to note a company operating profitably in spite of apparently adverse conditions. If we were permitted to look behind the scenes, we probably would find that this success was due to the fact that they functioned with a high degree of efficiency and economy.

In a manufacturing industry, standards and costs may be predetermined and then held to the lowest point consistent with prevailing good practice. A theatre manager is not in the happy position of being able to do this as readily, because of the uncertain nature of his business which depends on weather conditions, type of attraction, etc. He is not able, like a factory manager, to decide when and where to cut down on the various expenses. A theatre manager looking over his operating costs can do nothing sensational or epoch-making to reduce expenses; however, some measure of economy may be achieved by operating with greater efficiency and getting the utmost for every dollar spent. This ultimately translates itself into greater profits for the theatre.

Each Part a Cost Item

Each item that goes into the production of the picture on the screen must be studied. It is presumed that the theatre manager knows the degree of efficiency of his operating personnel—but judging the efficiency of his operating equipment is another story, one on which we will endeavor to throw some light.

Let us pay the projection room a visit. We see the projector mechanisms grinding away (quietly or otherwise), the film traveling through, the sound equipment reproducing music and speech. Finally, our attention is drawn to the arc lamps that furnish life and illumination to the selling medium — the screen. We must admit that this basic element is frequently obscured by the consideration of other pressing and yet not quite as important items which the theatre manager must provide for the comfort and amusement of his patrons; however, we cannot emphasize too strongly the importance of proper screen illumination. Patrons refuse to visit certain theatres because viewing the picture strains their eyes or results in a headache. They are aware of the discomfort, but not of its cause. We know it is due to insufficient screen illumination—the fault of the projection lighting, or of the screen itself, sometimes both.

What causes light deterioration on the screen? Surely when the light producing equipment was first installed, it gave satisfactory results or it would not have been accepted. However, machinery that is called up day after day, and night after night, for many regular hours of performance, must ultimately show the result of wear and tear. Here is where we should emulate the successful industrialists who quickly scrap worn or obsolete equipment when it becomes too expensive to operate. This policy should be adopted by theatre owners, who surely must realize that good screen illumination and projection are extremely important. Poor projection quality annoys and eliminates otherwise loyal patrons. Unquestionably, the theatre owner who operates his theatre with modern equipment and accessories, properly maintained, is ahead dollars and cents in the long run. All that this great industry has to sell is light!

Minimum Inefficiency

It may be expecting too much for anyone to maintain records covering each piece of major equipment, together with a chronological history from installation date, detailing maintenance and upkeep expenses. Under such an ideal procedure, when expenses reach a certain accelerated rate and an excessive amount, the equipment is proven more of a liability than an asset. It should, without hesitation, then be discarded and replaced. In the absence of such an ideal checkup system or adequate record, inspections should be made at frequent intervals. Net operating results in the last analysis are more or less dependent on the attention given to so-called minor details.

The projection room and its equipment components, operating almost every minute that the theatre is open, is what may be called the consuming part of the plant. Waste and inefficiency in other departments are not as noticeable because their operating hours are not as long or regular—equipment such as fans, pumps, compressors, etc.

The average projectionist has a log book of some sort. When arc lamps are first installed, he decides upon and records the amperage for a particular carbon trim that gives the best screen results. From the day fallen to such a low state that he "gets wise" to it with a jolt.

One cannot help being impressed with the great pains taken by the processing laboratories to turn out prints of uniform good quality. These efforts are sometimes in vain in those projection rooms which are equipped with obsolete, antiquated arc equipment, which cannot produce satisfactory picture results. In other theatres,

Note:—Two more trims are analyzed to emphasize the fact that an inefficiency due to any cause, results in increased expenditures. In computing monthly KWH's, allowance has been made for average inefficiency in source of arc current. Where power company has demand charge based on load, monthly energy figures will be much greater. All computations based on 300 hours operation per month. When theatre monthly hours differ from this, energy and carbon excess expenditures will be proportional. When KWH rate is other than 3c, 4c or 5c, simply prorate above energy costs to actual rate. Above figures do not include excess due to striking arc, etc. Example: 600 minutes daily operation, and total time burning arc prior to each changeover is 60 minutes. This means that you increase above figures by 10%.

of installation, there begins a deterioration of the many links that contribute to the production of original standard screen light intensity required for the particular theatre. The drop in efficiency is so gradual that even the most competent person on the job, day after day and night after night, does not realize it, until the picture quality has with more modern arc equipment, the management often appears not altogether aware of the importance of small details which cannot be overlooked if the projection plant is to operate efficiently and economically.

When a theatre manager or projectionist realizes that neglect of one small detail in the projection plant will cost his theatre as much as $690 in one year if 13.6 mm.-7/16″ trim is in use, and $290 when 7 mm.-6 mm. trim is used, it is something to receive consideration. These figures represent excess cost of carbons and electric current consumed during a one-year period when arc current is above average minimum current rating of the particular carbon trim. If these expenditures would bring about better picture quality, they would indeed be worthwhile, but they contribute nothing to a better picture and only represent a needless waste of money.

In addition to tables presented in the July 22nd issue of BETTER THEATRES, two more tables are given here namely, for 9mm.-5/16″, and 7mm.-6mm. trims, showing the increase in expenditures when it is necessary to increase arc current due to deterioration and neglect of some operating detail. These tables will be referred to in the development of material in future articles.

Projection and Sound System for Smaller Theatres

A COMPLETE new projection and sound system designed to provide high-quality performance in restricted budget theatres having capacities of from 200-800 seats, has been brought out by the International Projector Corporation. Components of the new low-cost system include a model Simplex SI projector, an LL-3 pedestal, Simplex "Low" lamp, and Simplex Type E sound equipment. The system can be purchased as a single installation, or any of its components can be obtained separately.

The Projector Mechanism

The new projector (Model SI) incorporates many of the newer improvements, including front and rear shutters, fire shutter safety trip, semi-centralized lubrication, aperture cooling unit and sprocket strippers of the non-wrap-around type. For cost reduction purposes, some customary expensive finishes have been omitted. The shutter adjustment has been made wholly manual and cannot be re-set while the mechanism is running, while the gear train and the framing device have been substantially simplified.

Construction is based on the "unit" principle of design, major parts assemblies being attached to an auxiliary casting, with which they form a single unit, that unit in turn being mounted in the mechanism casting. This method of design was used to "Hunting type" gears are used in the gear train of the new mechanism. This type of gear has an uneven number of teeth, so that as the gear revolves the same teeth do not constantly mesh together; a given tooth in one gear meshes, in the course of several revolutions, with every tooth on the mating gear. Gears need not be marked for an exact tooth mesh when they are removed temporarily, and need not be put back in mesh in any particular way. They are merely slipped back on their shafts regardless of which tooth meshes with which.

The SI mechanism is gear-driven throughout, but the drive has been simplified and incorporates fewer parts than any gear train previously used in Simplex professional projectors.

Shutter shaft, upper sprocket assembly and intermittent drive assembly constitute an integral unit, all of the operating parts of which are enclosed in an oil-tight case and operate in an oil bath. The intermittent movement is, with dimensional modifications, of the same design as that used in other models of Simplex equipment. It is completely enclosed and operates in an oil bath.

Framing knobs project from either side of the mechanism. In framing, the intermittent assembly and the upper drive unit are moved forward or backward while the gate and the film trap remain stationary, thus the picture is brought into frame by slightly changing the length of the lower loop.

For accurate alignment of the mechanism with any type of soundhead currently available, two bosses are provided on the main frame, by means of which the lower sprocket pad roller assembly can be mounted in either of two positions as required. The gate and film trap are of a simplified design employed in a previous Simplex model.

Oiling is semi-centralized, and both the upper oil chamber and the intermittent oil chamber are equipped with glass windows through which the level or lubricant can be seen. Separate points for individual lubrication are those that need only occasional attention. As a further precaution, bearings of special composition are used throughout; they are essentially self-lubricating, absorbing oil which is occasionally

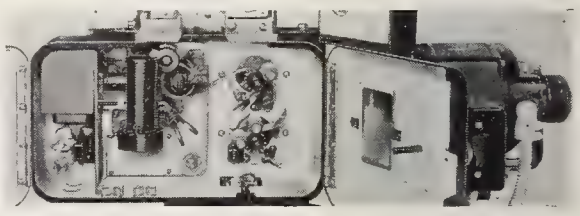
An air deflector of the type similar to that used on the Simplex E-7 is provided, and there is an aperture cooling unit of new design which minimizes spillage of light at the aperture itself. The dimensions and therefore the heat of the beam are progressively reduced before the aperture is reached.

The fire shutter safety trip, like that of the E-7, is operated automatically by any major increase in the size of the upper loop.



To facilitate threading, a reflector is mounted on the fire shutter to catch the light of a small framing lamp and project it forward through the aperture.

The interior of the operating side is finished in white.

The Lamp

The Simplex "Low" lamp is designed to utilize arc current up to 30 amperes. The elliptical reflector is 11⅜ inches in diameter.

The arc motor is of the double field type, working without a relay, speeding up, slowing down, stopping, or reversing its direction of rotation according to the amperage of the arc, which completes its path through one of the two motor field circuits. The motor has permanently lubricated ball bearings and applies its mechanical power through a friction clutch. The width of the arc gap is automatically held constant by this motor.

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

TELEVISION APPARATUS AS NOW AVAILABLE FOR THEATRE USE

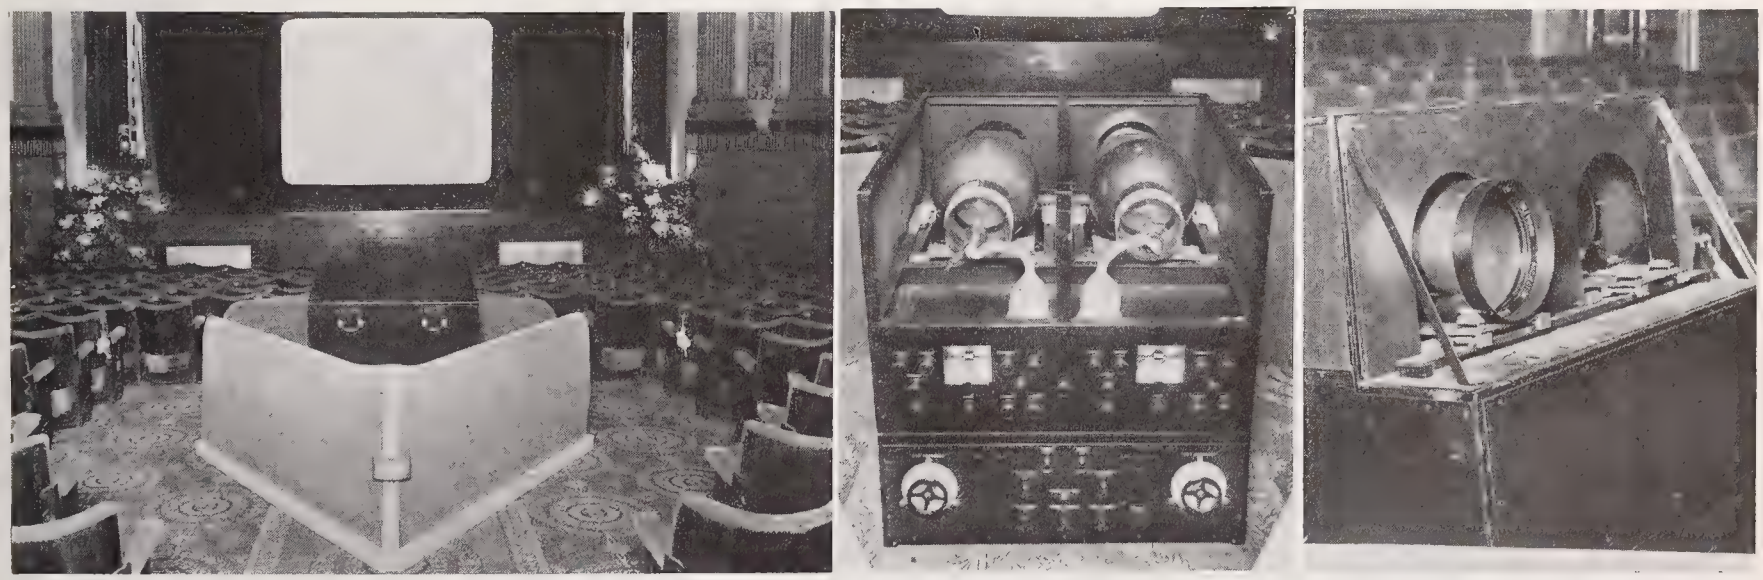
I GOT MYSELF a demonstration of television the other day, and I duly make a report of the experience, had by many before me, but perhaps by relatively few of my readers. The room was entirely dark, there being no light save that from the televised projection lens. Under this condition I am free to say that the screen image, which measured 12 x 9 feet, appeared adequately illuminated, the term adequately being understood to mean that all details of the picture were quite satisfactorily visible. The projection distance was 27 feet. Engineers of the Baird Television Corporation, which had arranged the demonstration, said reasonable auditorium illumination would not materially decrease visibility of the televised picture. This, of course, I cannot either affirm or question, not as yet having witnessed projection under that condition.

The definition of the picture varied widely; some of the scenes were acceptably sharp, whereas others were rather "fuzzy" —and there I received a surprise. I had assumed that lack of definition in the televised picture would be straining to the eye, yet after a full hour of showing my eyes, which are quite sensitive to lack of sharpness in a screen image, were perfectly comfortable.

Another item worthy of mention is that the close-up—of a singer, for example—imparted greater naturalness than does our motion picture. That, of course, might not be the conclusion of everyone. At any rate, the demonstration has very thoroughly convinced me that television is a coming feature in the motion picture theatre; though by that I do not mean it seems likely ever to displace the regular motion picture, but rather to add to the motion picture theatre program as added special attraction every now and then.

Now for things the average man is interested in.

First of all, it is not intended that the television projector shall be located in the projection room. In fact, its projection distance is limited (at present) to approximately 50 feet, at which projection distance a picture 20 x 15 feet is projected. The setup now used in London is shown in an accompanying photograph, a section of seats being removed from the center of the main floor. In the projector housing are two complete projectors, with facilities for switching from one to the other instantly. The projectionist sits at the left-hand rear corner of the projector, and he handles both the illumination and the sound volume. In the accompanying view of the rear of the projector, with the upper part of the cover removed, we may note at the left the controller for the left-hand projection equipment; there is a similar controller for the other one at the right.



No information was available as to the approximate cost of installation of these projectors in theatres. The catho-visor tubes in the projectors herein described operate at 50,000 volts. There is no possibility of any injury to the projectionist as all high tension circuits are protected with castings which are electrically interlocked. The high tension rectifiers supplying the 50,000 volts are mounted in a separate room and protected by a heavy wire screen; the door therefore is likewise electrically interlocked with the casings, assuring automatic cut-off of all power if opened.

I was assured by the engineers that there would be no insurmountable difficulty facing the projectionist through the advent of television, but, said they, it is wise that these men learn everything they can regarding it at the earliest possible time.

I would, however, warn all so interested to be very sure that reliable services of instruction be used. Unquestionably there will be attempts by more or less irresponsible parties to disseminate information authoritatively in books and otherwise, whereas at this time even the television engineers themselves are very cautious about making statements. Television is still under development.

A WAY OF KEEPING CARBONS READY FOR USE

J. R. PRATER, projectionist of the Congress Theatre in Palouse, Wash., has sent in an excellent drawing and description of a carbon storage rack he has devised. Where local conditions admit of its installation, it seems entirely practical. It is intended to hold from two to three days' run of whole carbons, both positive and negative, also such stubs as may be safely used for runs of varying length. All are stored on top of one lamphouse, the right one by preference, one rack serving both projectors. Assuming both positive and negative slots (hereinafter described) to be kept full by adding a carbon each time one is removed for installation in the lamp,

Television equipment as installed in the Marble Arch Pavilion in London, and rear (open) and front view of the projectors themselves. (See accompanying article.)

when it comes time to use the lower one, it is thoroughly dried out and as warm as may be comfortably handled without gloves—in other words, in perfect condition for use. The stubs are contained in an auxiliary rack arranged as shown. Brother Prater describes the rack as follows:

"There are lamphouses set too high to admit of its practicability. Because the shape of lamphouses and the angle at which they set vary so widely, this rack could not be manufactured and sold in the usual way. The projectionist must make it himself, but surely employers cannot but appreciate the interest shown in the work of projection by men who construct such things, especially since this rack serves to prevent waste of stubs.

"Tools required for construction are pliers, hammer, screwdriver, tin snips, and a small hand drill. The idea is to construct hood AAA of stovepipe metal, E being the supporting legs designed to rest upon, in this case, the lamphouse siderods. E may be trimmed in such manner that the rack as a whole will set approximately level. The front end of my rack butts against the lamphouse vent and is closed to prevent carbons from working out. Lines X represent the bottom of two upright channels formed by the walls of hood AAA, and a metal divider is represented by the dotted lines. One slot is for positive and one for negative, the latter being of course a bit less wide than the former. Negatives D and positives C are shown in place, resting one on top of the other so that as the lower one is pulled out the whole stack drops down and another carbon is laid in on top, the top of rack AAA being open.

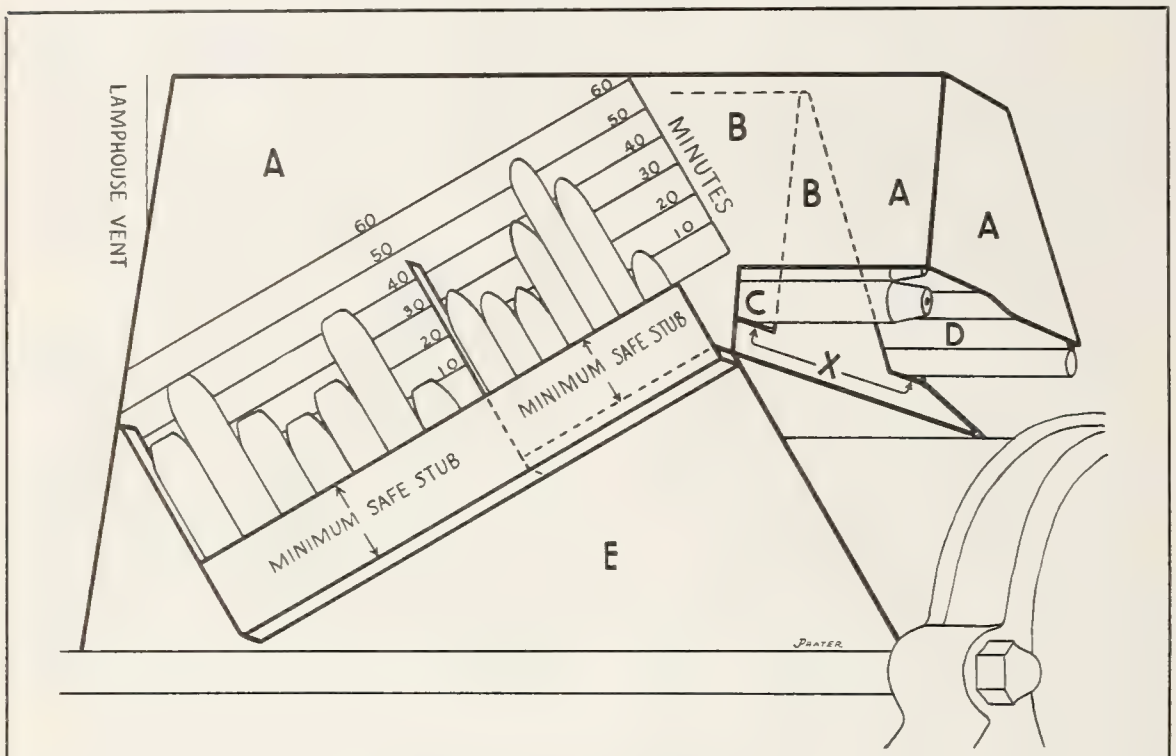
"As to the stub rack, its construction would seem to require no description, except to say that the box in which the stubs are held should have a depth equal to the shortest length to which negative and positive may be burned.

"However, some argument on designing the minute measurement scale seems advisable, or even necessary, as follows:

"The stubs are kept warm and dry, but not too hot to handle with bare hands. I use only one set of carbon savers, burning all stubs in the left-hand lamp, which also means that all fully used stubs come from that lamp, so that a single waste carbon receptacle mounted under the left-hand lamp simplifies convenient disposal of waste stubs.

"My rack has room for seven stubs of each polarity, therefore safe burning time of 14 stubs is seen at a glance with less effort than is required to measure one stub. In the very nature of things this will result in closer culling of stubs, hence in less carbon waste. Also, if trims burn out unevenly, this plan provides means for re-mating them with greater economy, burning those that are left single with a full-length carbon of opposite polarity. It is surprising how many projectionists throw away enough of one or the other to run another reel because a trim does not come out even.

"In my own case, both positive and negative burn at the same rate, but if they did not, a separate scale may be marked for each. Here the negatives may safely be burned to an eighth of an inch shorter stub than the positives, which is provided for by the spacer (indicated by dotted lines at bottom of the negative trough). In case separate scales are necessary no such spacer is required, the scale being started that much lower.



"Another suggestion: In all horizontal trim lamps with non-rotating positive, the crater burns slightly above center. Being careful to install positive stubs with the crater 'right side up' saves a bit of carbon that otherwise would be wasted.

"Naturally, the exact arrangement of the rack as shown in the drawing would not be suitable for all local conditions. As stated, some lamphouses may be so high that a rack on their top would be inconvenient; however, it will always be possible to work out a suitable application of the main principle, and such application will not only result in an appreciable saving in carbon, but also provide carbons thoroughly dry.

"Even theatres where amperage is varied frequently, may apply this system by making scales to fit each amperage used. Make them on bits of sheet metal of size to fit into the trough, one for each amperage used, slipping the right one in back of all the stubs at once.

"A lot of work and trouble? As to that, it is no more for the projectionist than it is for the exhibitor to be compelled to pay for good carbon that without such a rack and scale would be thrown away; replacing needlessly scorched carbon holders; being compelled to shut down the show occasionally; or biting the finger nails through the last end of a reel while wondering if your guess was wrong.

"And since accuracy of results obtained by this or any other plan depends also upon ability to estimate the running time of reels, why not eliminate guess-work from that, too? A footage counter is not necessary to secure sufficient accuracy in results. Practically every present day feature has each foot of film plainly marked with numbers impressed upon the margin outside the sprocket holes. Check the footage number at the end of the actual picture of a good full reel, disregarding the tail piece, as it is not screen time and will always be approximately the same length. Subtract 90 from the total and wind up that much film on an empty reel. Slide a narrow strip of thin, stiff cardboard in beside the film roll and down to the reel hub. On it mark where the film roll comes to. Repeat this marking each 90 feet until the reel is full, but don't forget that color prints build up more rapidly than do black and whites. If one lays the gauge thus made on any reel, its film length may be estimated quite accurately."

DETERMINING PARALLEL CIRCUIT RESISTANCE

JOHN L. HOSKINS of Denver asks, "Will you advise as to best method of ascertaining exact resistance of three parallel circuits. What I really want is to know the relation of resistance, voltage and amperes in such circuits."

First, the total current flow is the sum of the flow through each parallel circuit. The voltage of each branch is the same as the voltage of the undivided circuit. The resistance may, however, be quite different in each such parallel circuit. If, for example, we have three parallel circuits charged at 120 volts, one of which has 5 ohms resistance, applying Ohm's law we divide 120 (volts) by 5 (ohms) and have, as result, 24 amperes flowing.

In other words, the current flow will be 0.20 of an ampere per volt. However, assuming the other two circuits to present, respectively, 10 and 15 ohms resistance, applying the same law in the same way, we find the current flow to be 0.10 and 0.15 ampere per volt; or, if we divide the voltage (120) across the combination by the total current flowing through the combination, we shall obtain the resistance of the combination as a whole. Or we may divide one volt by the total flow per volt through all combined circuits and find (1÷0.3667) the total resistance to be 2.73 ohms.

Summing up, you may readily measure the voltage impressed, in volts, and the amperage flow through each circuit, and as above indicated, figure out the exact resistance of each circuit.

New Simplex System

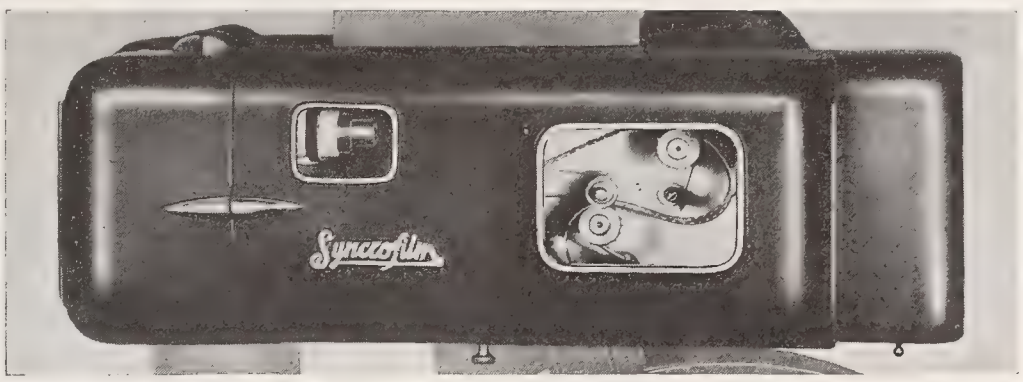
tray, ammeter and carbon length indicator are standard equipment. The dowser can be operated from either side of the housing; all other operating controls are at rear.

The Pedestal

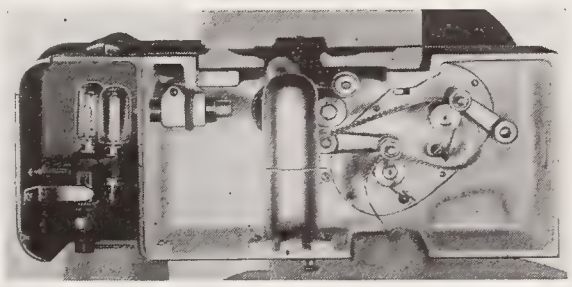
Finished in black, crackled enamel to match the finish of the new projector and lamp, the pedestal (model LL-3) has been developed not only as part of the new equipment, but also to be used independently to replace the old three-point and five-point pedestals still in use in many limited-budget houses, with a support of solid, four-sided construction. Cost has been reduced, in part, by elimination of complex lateral adjustments used in more expensive models of such bases. Inasmuch as the smaller theatre seldom, if ever, has occasion for lateral projector adjustment (except at the time of original installation) a relatively simple mounting plate, equipped with locking arrangements to hold it in the lateral position originally determined upon, is employed. Projection angle adjustment is controlled by a built-in hand-wheel and locknut device. Allen headless screws in each corner of the base facilitate leveling to compensate for floor irregularities.

A removable, latched door gives access to the interior of the pedestal, where wiring may be located with advantages of complete shielding. The pedestal has receptacles for ready connection of trouble lamp, soldering iron, etc., and carries a 100-ampere arc switch and box accessible from either side.



The Sound Equipment

Type E sound equipment, designed for theatres up to 800 seats or 100,000 cubic feet, completes the system. The sound system amplifier can deliver ten watts to the loudspeakers at 1% harmonic distortion, and utilizes two 6L6 tubes in the output stage. It includes an inverse feedback circuit and provisions for adjusting frequency response to suit auditorium acoustics. Noise level is 35 decibels below maximum sound output. The amplifier cabinet contains an 8-inch monitor speaker and a separate, single-stage monitor amplifier to permit adjustment of monitor volume without compensatory changes in screen volume.



High- and low-frequency screen speakers are of the permanent magnet type.

Soundheads are the same as those used in larger Simplex installations.

Here's an important fact to remember—Hollywood is now producing finer sound than ever before—because movie fans demand good sound. To properly reproduce it—and build up your business—install with Rotary Stabilizer plus Shock-Proof Drive —available at low cost to theatres of every size!

LET'S LOOK AT FACTS. You can show the finest pictures in the world—but you'll have empty seats in your theatre if the sound is poor. Because nowadays movie fans know good sound from bad—and patronize the theatre where listening is as much fun as looking.

Hollywood knows this and that's why Hollywood puts such excellent sound on its films. But how about you—are you letting an outmoded sound system hurt your takes?

It will pay you to find out about the new RCA Photophone Magic Voice of the Screen. For here's the equipment built for true reproduction of modern movie sound. It's the tonic your box office needs. And its low cost will surprise you, just as its many new features will delight you. Full details from your RCA Photophone representative.

Only the New Magic Voice of the screen offers all these features!

This splendid new equipment gives you full assurance of constant film speed by adding the amazing new Shock-Proof Drive to the famous Rotary Stabilizer! Besides this great feature, the new Magic Voice brings you new styling, new protection, new convenience, new added reserve power and many other outstanding proofs that it's the best value you've ever seen! Ask your RCA Photophone representative for complete information.
RCA Photophone's service organization has a low cost theatre service plan in which you'll be interested.

10,000 Wait in Line To See Wizard of Oz

Fans Circle Block Standing Four Abreast

Thousands of women and children, with a few men sprinkled among them today surrounded the block in which the Capitol Theater is located, waiting in line to see the Wizard of Oz on its opening day.

The line began to form before 8 A. M. and when 6,000 marched into the theater, when the doors opened at 8:45, there still remained a line in which there were 4,000 movie fans, police estimated, and 20,000 by the estimate of the theater's press agent.

The line, which 100 police controlled, began at the box office; extended north to 51st St., east to Eighh Ave., souh to 50th St. and west to Broadway.

For most of its length people were standing four abreast. Broadway showmen who happened by stared in amazement. They commented that the Wizard was the biggest hit since Snow White and might turn out to be even a greater draw.

OH BOY!

Warner Bros. are happy to announce that after setting a new first week record at the N. Y. Strand, is currently grossing only slightly less than first week business, smashing all second week marks by a wide margin; and that in its first out-of-town engagements – Washington, Atlantic City and Bridgeport – – it is far ahead of "Dodge City" and "Dark Victory", the top grossers of last season.

"THE OLD MAID"

'Stanley' Breaks Marks On Moveover Here—

20th-Fox 'Stanley and Livingstone' yesterday did a house record breaking opening day's business for company's pictures in moveover to Fox Wilshire and United Artists theatres. At Fox Wilshire take was $1,411, bettering 'Alexander's Ragtime Band' by $90 and 'Jesse James' by $830. At the United Artists day's take was $854, which is $77 better than 'Alexander's' and $476 above 'James.'

THREE HORNS

A WEEK after the summary disapproval of the organized motion picture industry's proposed code of trade practises by Mr. Thurman Arnold, Administration "trust buster," with such bitter words as "illegal" and "prosecutions," the situation had cleared up just enough to reveal a state of bewilderment among conferees, counsellors and the general executive minds.

The question of "where do we go from here?" was being met with so many answers there was no answer.

It appeared, however, that three eventuations or procedures were in sight, a three horned dilemma.

1—A consent decree might be sought.
2—Trial on the issues of the federal suit might be faced.
3—Postponements might be multiplied with hope of delay for a chance that the suit might be disposed of under a possibly less militant administration elected in 1940—or even possibly after Mr. Arnold possibly should be promoted to elsewhere.

There has been a certain naivete in the submission of a code draft to Mr. Arnold, who before and since has indicated, in all manner of documents, from publicity releases to formal bills of complaint, that the Government's demand is substantially for a radical reconstruction of the pattern of the industry and its internal controls. No "code" will do that. Submission of the code draft has achieved merely a more spectacular reiteration of program and policy.

IN a contribution to The Public Opinion Quarterly, published at Princeton University, Mr. Max Forester, variously experienced with "Tide," the "March of Time," screen version, and a student of the documentary picture, chooses for his title "The Coming Revolution in Films." In a discussion of much substantial fact and sound theory, Mr. Forester insists on seeing revolution when he presents only evidence of evolution, an evolution in which documentary pictures in the service of causes depart from entertainment formulae. Hollywood has been doing nothing in the direction of Mr. Forester's objectives entirely because that has not been and will not be Hollywood's job.

WOULD "TAKE OVER"

ONE is not to be surprised that the Canadian screen is to be found beset with all of the special pressures that are to be observed, continuously, in the United States. It seems that there, as here, there are vociferating persons who want the motion picture to tend to everything.

For example, here are a few lines from a speech made by Colonel Drew, Opposition Leader in the Ontario legislature, before the recent convention of Famous Players Canadian:

"The movie industry should voluntarily mirror more the national life of Canada and her place within the Empire. Otherwise the Government might step in and take over control of the industry as a propaganda medium. Canada, like any other country, cannot ignore the great potentialities of the movies in molding public opinion. . . ."

Two sets of facts might be brought to the attention of Colonel Drew: First, Canada, through its own government film department, was the first country in the world to engage in making pictures to sell itself on the screen. That began more than twenty years ago. Second, as examples of countries which have anticipated his program to "step in and take over control of the industry as a propaganda medium," he can look at Russia, Germany and Japan.

SINCE the imitative tendencies of the production community are again conspicuously in evidence, it is of interest to quote from a letter from Mr. Dave Epstein, just to hand, in which he chances to quote in turn Mr. Edward Small in an observation that: "No cycle has yet been started by sheer novelty—always the picture which initiates a cycle is a picture of quality, high quality, high enough to be considered a bargain by the typical fifty-five-cents-a-seat customers of the typical first-run theatres. One could start production tomorrow on a picture three years 'out of style' and if it has simple heart appeal it will rival any product of a current popular 'style'."

Cycles and styles have nothing to commend them save their convenience to multiple efforts of mass production pattern. The curse of the imitative process is not removed, either, by piling on "production values," meaning elaboration and costs. Hollywood's cycles result, more commonly, from the making of too many pictures by too few picture makers.

Just now we seem in a fair way to get a great flow of consequences of the discovery of whimsy as demonstrated by "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Most likely it will be discovered, in time, and expensively, that it was not whimsy but emotional content which sold "Snow White."

YESTERDAY & TOMORROW

EARLY the katydids have come churring their nightly message of the nearing end of summer in the valley of the Silvermine. Where the cool damp mist of the twilight fills dips in the lane it is heavy with the resinous perfume of golden rod. Two hundred times this cycle of season has swept across these friendly acres since they became a home. Over the peace of the scene is the benediction of the honest intent of the generations of those who piled the stone of the weathering walls, toiled in these fields. Inside at the touch of a button comes a surge of light from a hurrying dynamo. It is Now, again. At the turn of a dial and the staccato voices of a world bickering, threatening, snarling on the brink of war come pounding, screaming in half a dozen tongues, wheedling, arguing, threatening. When one turns off the radio, only the katydids can be heard. The singing ones are males, nine to every female. It is a war of propaganda. Only one can win. Eight sing and die. But there will always be plenty of katydids—and the golden rod will bloom again every year.

—Terry Ramsaye

This Week

Theatres Reopen

Seventy-eight theatres in the United States have reopened or plan to reopen within the next few weeks following the usual summer closings. Many exhibitors have taken advantage of the temporary shut down to renovate their theatres and install new equipment. The motion picture industry's Golden Jubilee is another factor encouraging theatre owners to open their doors earlier this season than they have in past.

Full details on theatres that have or will reopen, including a list of the states, cities and towns in which the theatres are located, will be found on page 14.

Hollywood on Air

The mass of news in the motion picture industry each week, and even each day, anent suits, legislation, labor fights, arbitration agreements, clearance practices, trade practice codes, threats of governmental regulation, and the like, may have obscured one of the big issues of last year. Nevertheless the debate over star appearances on radio programs came to life this week with the disclosure by the three major radio networks of their Fall programs. No fewer than 17 of these will emanate from Hollywood; and there may be more later.

A complete list, and the observation that use of stars this year on the radio does not seem to be declining, is on page 15.

Aid and Succor

Establishment of a new United States Department of Commerce division to be known as the Industrial Economics Division to aid industries to solve their problems along lines experimentally being tried out in motion picture, oil and fertilizer industries was announced Wednesday by the Department's Secretary, Harry L. Hopkins, under funds provided by Congress shortly before it adjourned last month.

Specialists of various fields of commerce and industry will serve in the division, will be responsible for the bringing of improvements in various lines and will report only to Secretary Hopkins.

The conferences being held sporadically between the department and film leaders will not come under the new division because the three department officials, Nathan D. Golden, Ernest A. Tupper and Dr. Willard L. Thorpe, who are in charge of the film work are so far along with their activity that they will shortly begin the development of Commerce Department proposals for dealing with major film problems. Rejection of the majors' trade practice code by the Department of Justice last week is not likely to have any effect on the Department of Commerce's conversation with film leaders on "The broad problems of the industry." No new meetings between the Commerce Department and the film leaders are set until after Labor Day.

In the Courts

While the organized industry's trade practice code was stopped this week at the hands of the Department of Justice because of its non-conformity with the Government's pending New York anti-trust suit, that suit and other pending trust actions against the majors were receiving additional attention in the courts.

Federal Judge Edward Conger last Thursday signed a formal order denying the application of United Artists for a further bill of particulars in the Government's anti-trust suit. The order directed the corporation to file its answer by August 28th; UA being the only major defendant that has not filed its answer as yet.

The Griffith theatre interests, in a plea in Federal Court in Oklahoma City last Friday, declared that the injunction sought by the Government in its anti-trust suit, "if granted, will wreck" their business. The assertion was made in a memorandum which the four theatre chains, operating about 290 theatres in three states, including Oklahoma, filed in court in support of their motion to force the Government to detail and amplify its charges.

The four Griffith companies are Griffith Amusement Company, Consolidated Theatres, Inc., R. E. Griffith Theatres, Inc., and the Westex Theatres, Inc.

Virtually all of the individual and corporate defendants in the Government anti-trust suit against the Schine Circuit and major distributors, filed August 7th, have been served in New York during the past 10 days. Defendants in the anti-trust suit against the Crescent Amusement Company, filed in Nashville, August 11th, have not up to now been served with the bill of complaint.

Hearings in the Ford Theatre's anti-trust action against Balaban and Katz and major distributors were scheduled to come up Friday, to which day they were postponed last Thursday.

The circumstances attending the demise of the code are reviewed in a story which appears on page 24.

War in the West

On the coast this week, the producers went before the National Labor Relations Board to deny that they had "coerced" the members of the Screen Writers' Guild; an assistant U. S. attorney general began a probe of labor activities amid cries that he was aiding the CIO, against the American Federation of Labor affiliates; and a Hollywood Superior Court Judge acquitted four officers of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees of contempt of court, and also a Los Angeles labor leader, but found guilty, and fined, three other International Alliance leaders.

Developments in the West Coast labor situation are reported on page 21.

One Big Union

The plan, long discussed, to set up one big union of actors approached enactment near the weekend as a merger resolution calling for the welding of the 11 actors' unions making up the Associated Actors and Artistes of America into a single organization was presented to the annual convention of the American Federation of Radio Artists, one of the 11 units, as it opened its session in Chicago. The basic idea in merging all of the unions affiliated with the "4 A's" would bring "a united front against any common enemy," declared Emily Holt, secretary of the Federation of Radio Artists, who explained that one office for all would replace the 11 different offices now maintained and that the paying of multiple dues by many performers who work in various theatrical fields would be eliminated.

As the jurisdictional fight between the Associated Actors and Artistes of America and the American Federation of Labor, and its affiliated International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees looked at mid-week, it appeared that nothing short of concession by the Four A's, Mr. Whitehead, secretary of the American Federation of Actors, or George E. Browne, president of the IATSE, would save the entertainment industry from long and costly war.

Plays and Cash

Motion picture companies, during the 1938-39 season, paid a total of $760,000 for 14 legitimate stage plays, or an average of $54,285 per play, according to the Dramatists' Guild of the Authors' League of America. These figures are for plays which lasted three weeks or longer on Broadway; as unproduced plays or those which did not last for a three week run may be sold independently of the Guild.

The season was above average in the number of plays bought, although the average price paid was somewhat lower, according to the Guild. During the 1937-38 season, 12 plays were purchased for a total of $700,000; an average price of $58,333.

Pointing out that the present minimum basic agreement, which went into effect in March, 1936, has not restricted the purchase of film rights, the Guild said that its greatest year was 1936-37, the first season in which the pact was operative. In that year, $1,750,000 was paid for 17 plays, an average of more than $100,000 each.

Negotiations for modification of the new pact between the Guild and the film companies, which would return Hollywood backing to stage plays, have been postponed until after Labor Day. Major obstacles in the present proposed pact are the Guild Council's demand for a $15,000 pre-production rights payment; and the film companies demand to be able to withdraw a legitimate play's star for work in the film version of the play.

Warner Offers Code of Its Own To Exhibitors for New Season

Gradwell L. Sears, president of Vitagraph, distributors of Warner-First National Pictures announced Wednesday night "in an endeavor to clarify the company's position and dispel the widespread confusion and divergence of opinion now existing in the industry" that the policy of his company in its contractual relations with exhibitors would include:

1. A 20 per cent cancellation clause under conditions similar to those proposed in the late lamented trade practice code will be allowed.
2. Exhibitors will be allowed to eliminate features locally offensive on religious, moral or racial grounds.
3. Top bracket pictures shall be played on preferred playing time.
4. Warner Brothers will license a run designated by them of any of its features to any exhibitor of good reputation whose theatre operates under a policy which will not substantially reduce the company's revenue from any other run provided such exhibitor and Warner Brothers can agree upon a number of features to be licensed. . . .
5. Warner Brothers will continue to license its pictures to regular customers who prove to be satisfactory.
6. Exhibitors will not be required to license short subjects, trailers or reissues as a condition of licensing features.
7. Recording charges will not be made in connection with the licensing of features.
8. Test exhibitions of pictures in order to establish fair price bracket allocation will be held and Warner Brothers will allocate features to particular price brackets not later than 14 days after the national release date to first run exhibitors in test cities and to all others on giving suitable notice of availability.
9. Warner Brothers will not coerce or intimidate any exhibitor to license its pictures by threatening to build or otherwise acquire a theatre in that exhibitor's competitive territory.
10. Warner Brothers will give to each customer the option to arbitrate all claims and controversies.
11. Clearance is an absolute necessity but the company will continue its policy of negotiating proper clearance with each customer.

All provisions of the policy statement will apply to the 1939-40 season on contracts made subsequent to January 1, 1939.

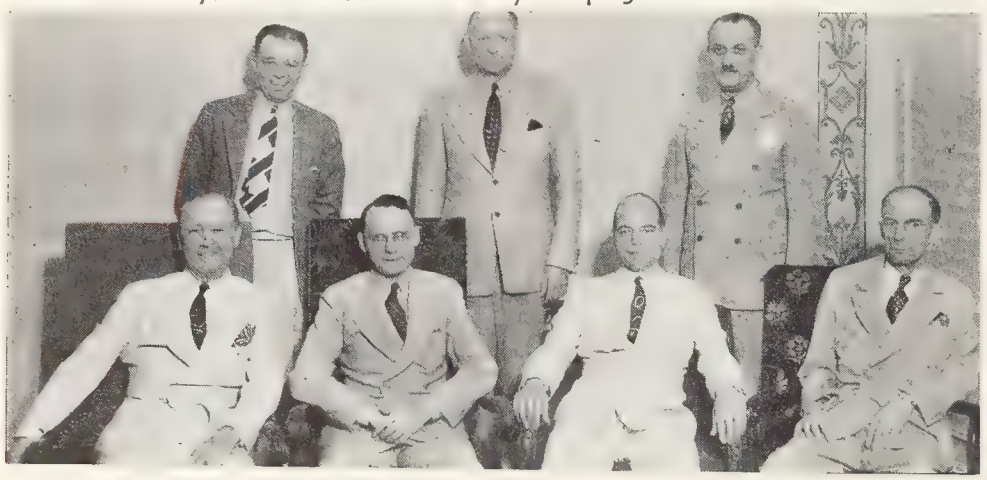
War!

All British theatres are included in the official governmental blackout instructions issued Wednesday evening during the European crisis. Exhibitors, like all others, were told that it was compulsory to extinguish all exterior lighting on emergency orders. London theatres blacked-out voluntarily even before the official decree.

The Film Board of Trade is overwhelmed with national emergency work and as a result is unable to move in the direction of the amendments promised, notably the alteration of the multiple quota clauses.

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the Kinematograph Renters Society War Office Committee was in meeting Thursday to consider the practicability and the procedure for establishing camps for the militia.

Spanish Films



Julio Elias, for five years distributor in Spain for Educational Pictures, on Monday signed a five-year contract with E. W. Hammons, president of Grand National, to distribute the company's product in Spain and also to produce a feature in Spanish for Grand National. The feature will be put into production as soon as a permit is obtained from the Franco Government, Mr. Elias said, and probably will be Rafael de Leon's "Un Vals en Sevilla," with music by Maestro Quiroga, one of Spain's outstanding composers. The film will be distributed by the company in the United States and all Spanish speaking countries besides Spain, Mr. Elias said.

Mr. Elias, who sailed Tuesday on the Vulcania for Spain, will establish headquarters in Barcelona.

THEATRE REOPENING SEASON STARTS WITH A RUSH, AIDED BY PRODUCT

Important New Films Available as 78 Houses Start Shows Following Dull Summer; Air Conditioning, Remodeling Finished

Seventy-eight theatres in 66 cities and towns and in 28 states have this week reopened or announced re-openings early in September following their usual summer closings. Many others reopened in recent days.

Many theatre owners and exhibitors took advantage of the early summer slack in business to install new air-conditioning units and have reopened earlier to profit by the patrons who, today, seek cool theatres for summer relief. Other exhibitors have reconditioned and renovated their houses and have added new seats, projection equipment, lobbies and marquees in preparation for the new show season.

New Product Available

Enough new season's product has been made available to exhibitors by the motion picture companies to influence many to open earlier this season than they have in the past. With such pictures as Columbia's "Blondie Takes a Vacation," MGM's "Lady of the Tropics," Paramount's "Man About Town" and "Our Leading Citizen," RKO's "Bachelor Mother" and "Career," Twentieth Century-Fox's "Frontier Marshall" and "Elsa Maxwell's Hotel for Women," Universal's "When Tomorrow Comes," First National's "Daughters Courageous" and Warner Brothers "Jaurez" and "Indianapolis Speedway" released during the summer and with "Golden Boy," "Wizard of Oz," "Beau Geste," "Fifth Avenue Girl," "Stanley and Livingstone," "Old Maid" and many others to be released now or early in September, theatremen have pictures with enough anticipated drawing power at the box-office and stars with name values that might be exploited to enjoy good business during the remainder of the summer and in the early fall.

Improvement in product, plus the availability of pre-released pictures in many spots, has sent box-office receipts up since the beginning of August, according to most distributors. Exhibitors ascribe much of the increased activity at the box-office not only to the quality of the pictures now being released, but to the fact that many of them have important drawing elements. This favorable turn in business is encouraging earlier openings of theatres that had closed for the summer.

Golden Jubilee a Factor

The campaign for the motion picture industry's Golden Jubilee is another factor in encouraging early openings. With the Jubilee to be celebrated October 1st to 7th many exhibitors have started local campaigns, with the aid of the press books sent out by the committee handling the event, and are enjoying the profits from these campaigns at no extra cost. Exhibitors are urged by the committee to conduct these local campaigns without the benefit of quizes, drives, contests or pledges and adhere strictly to publicity. Fan magazine writers and newspapers have been given full details of the campaign and the industry will sponsor a short wave broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System in six different languages. Press books containing information on how and when the exhibitor may get publicity in tying-up with banks, furniture dealers, clothiers, department stores and automobile dealers have been sent out.

Four First Runs Open in Pittsburgh

The number of first-run theatres doubled within a week, from four to eight in Pittsburgh, Penn. Close on the heels of the Fulton's reopening with "Second Fiddle" after two months shutdown, the Harris Amusement Co. announced that the Senator would be placed on a first-run policy, and moved "Hotel for Women" from their Alvin into the sister house. "News Is Made at Night" and "Mr. Wong in Chinatown" will follow the Elsa Maxwell show. The Senator will charge 25c and 40c for first-showings, like the Fulton and Warner, and 25c-35c-50c for hold-overs from the Alvin, as does the Warner on second weeks for pictures moved from the Stanley and Loew's Penn. Third first-runner will be the Barry, open after a 10-weeks layoff with "Assassins of Youth," while the Art Cinema at the same time switches from reissues and revivals to first-run foreign imports.

Opening of the Fulton, and transfer of Senator into first-run house again, give Fox and Universal downtown outlets after drought for summer. Fulton plays Universal and Fox, Harris houses split Fox crop, also book Republic, Monogram, Universal and Columbia.

Senator was opened in November, 1938, as first run theatre after $100,000 remodelling job of old Loew's Aldine, changed to second-run policy few months later, tried vaudeville occasionally, before the current plan to increase business.

Kansas City Tower Plans Stage Shows

Closed since late this spring, when Fox Midwest found the cost of big stage shows outweighed the gross, the Tower theatre in Kansas City, Mo., reopens this Friday under the management of Barney Joffee. The house will offer a combination of stage shows and first run pictures on a straight 25-cent policy.

Joffee and Bill Reinke operated the theatre successfully under this sort of policy from 1934 until, two years ago, they sold out to Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc. Fox Midwest operated it as a combination house two wears, but raised prices to 25-40c and occasionally charged 25-35-55c.

The stage productions will feature the Tower Novelty-Swing band, the Glamour Girls, a dance line, a master of ceremonies, and Novaline Payne and Milton Frank, specialty singers.

Bill Simpson, assistant manager of the Fox Esquire, Fox Midwest's first run next door to the Tower, will become Tower house manager. Frank Tracy is production manager, and Mary Graham Minor will work out dance routines for the Girls.

HOLLYWOOD AGAIN MAJOR SOURCE OF NAME TALENT FOR BROADCASTS

Networks Plan on 17 Programs from Production Center as New Show Season Nears; Star Names Remain Big Attraction

Radio this week embarked upon its new Fall "show season" two weeks ahead of the beginning of the motion picture industry's new year, which gets under way, officially, on Labor Day.

And radio, from an examination of the schedules it has already drawn up for the Fall—and they are pretty complete—will apparently continue to depend upon Hollywood as one of its major sources of talent.

17 Set from Hollywood

No fewer than 17 of the national network's major programs for 1939-40 will emanate from Hollywood; in order to permit the broadcasters to use Hollywood stars at the very scene of their work and life; and in order to make use of "big names."

More than these 17 programs may come from Hollywood; for an examination of the schedules reveals many programs which begin in New York or Chicago, and which later may be shifted to Hollywood, either because the talent appearing on the program may move there, or because the sponsor may change to the use of Hollywood talent.

The motion picture exhibitor, who for years has been complaining, individually, and in concert with his brethren in city, state and national organizations, against the use of big-name film stars on air waves in competition with the appearances of these same stars on the exhibitor's screens, and usually at the same hours, has not been heard from yet, this season, on the continued important position of film players as guest stars for radio.

Protests during the past two years, from exhibitors of prominence, and exhibitors occupying executive posts in organizations, come to assume the force of a major issue. There were speeches, and threats; and the trade papers carried much news about the "stars on the radio" question.

Concessions Made

The upshot seemed to be a concession last year by major company heads that their exhibitor accounts were right. Leading figures in Twentieth Century-Fox, MGM and Warners decided that it was unwise to encourage an industry which was in direct competition with their own customers; further, too, that it might be unwise to shorten the already brief life of popularity that a screen star enjoys, by making him familiar to the radio public as well as the motion picture public.

Then greater issues faced the motion picture industry; cumulatively sudden was the avalanche of suits, codes, exhibitor conventions, legislation, threats of governmental regulation, labor troubles, actors' squabbles.

"Stars on the radio" as an industry question was forgotten.

But now it is here again.

From a glance at the radio schedules, it can be seen that there are some programs which intend to make liberal and sustained use of Hollywood's personalities. Among these are the General Foods, Maxwell House Coffee, "Good News" program; the Lever Brothers Lux Radio Theatre, with Cecil B. De Mille as impressario and lure for other Hollywood names; the Lever Brothers' show, "Big Town"; the Pepsodent company's Hollywood program, which already has contracted for Judy Garland and Bob Hope; the Local Cooperative Sponsors' program, "Let's Go to Hollywood," making use of Warners Brothers' musicians and stars; Woodbury's "Hollywood Playhouse"; and the International Silver Company's "Silver Theatre."

Screen Still Chief Radio Star Source

The Columbia Broadcasting System leads the other two major chains, the National Broadcasting Company, and the Mutual network, in the number of broadcasts from the film capital, by about two to one.

One more headache to the exhibitor in Radio's new schedules may be seen in the announcement by the Mutual network that it has secured "exclusive" broadcasting rights to the World Series baseball games. "Exclusive" or not, the series has always drained the boxoffices of the East and Middle West. Fans at the game, or listening to the radio, are not people in the theatre.

Columbia Broadcasting System Raises Rates

The Columbia Broadcasting System last week raised its rates for advertising by some 7.5 per cent. This is the first general rate revision the company has made since 1936.

In making the change, attention was called to the growth of radio audiences, and the improvement in CBS facilities and power.

The new rate card is effective September 15, this year, for new contracts, and September 15, 1940, for present contracts.

In the announcement, the CBS is disclosed as comprising 117 stations in 116 cities. The new rate card lists a basic network as one comprising 26 cities. The old card had 25 cities.

NBC and Bell Telephone To Test Armstrong's System

The National Broadcasting Company and the Bell Telephone Laboratories will test the new system of broadcasting known as "frequency modulation," claimed to be free from static and stray signal noises of all kinds, as soon as permission is received from the Federal Communications Commission.

Major Edwin Armstrong, inventor of numerous radio circuits, holder of many radio patents, and a professor at Columbia University, is the inventor of the new system. He owns a station, W2XMN, at Alpine, New Jersey. Early, and still fluid, plans called for a chain of such stations, including the New York "high fidelity" station, WQXR. NBC, if the permission is granted, will construct a station in the Empire State Building; and the Bell Telephone Laboratories, at Whippany, New Jersey.

National Allied Expels Its New York State Unit

Long expected, long reported in the trade, but as persistently denied by the parties concerned, the expulsion of Max Cohen's New York Allied unit from Colonel Henry Albert Cole's National Allied States Association, finally occurred over the weekend, in the form of a vote by the national body's board of directors.

Dispute Over Code

Chief point of irritation which culminated in the move, was the disagreement of New York Allied with its parent over acceptance of the distributors' fair trade practice code. The national organization, at its Minneapolis convention, June 13, rejected the code in toto. Max Cohen, president of the New York Allied, had repeatedly favored its modified acceptance, and had declared it was preferable to governmental regulation, exemplified by the Neely Bill.

At the annual convention of the New York unit in May, in New York City, the dispute almost foamed over. Colonel Cole at the time was said to have insisted upon the local unit's adherence to national policy, under threat of penalties such as the one taken over the weekend; and so the local unit supported the national, at the time. However, many times since then, Mr. Cohen's opinions have not been in accord with those of Colonel Cole and of Abram F. Myers, general counsel to the national organization.

The National Allied's bulletin, in recording the expulsion, cited three causes:

1. Failure of the New York organization to discharge its obligation to support the National Association.
2. Acting contrary to the policies of the Allied States Association; and
3. Failure to curb attacks upon and criticism of National Allied and its policies by the president and counsel of the New York organization.

Relations "Severed"

The National Allied bulletin asserts that relations have been "severed," but adds that this action is tantamount to expulsion, and explains, thus:

"Due to the peculiar status of the New York organization, there was some difference of opinion as to whether the appropriate action should be to expel it or to deny its application for membership. While its application has never been formally accepted, the New York association nevertheless has been allowed representation at Board meetings, and the action of the Board takes the form of an expulsion under Article V, Section Two. The organization has clearly forfeited all rights to membership."

That the New York unit was never a member of the national body, was freely admitted this week by Max Cohen, who added a few revelations concerning moot points in the relations the national body had with distributors during negotiations for the trade practice code.

Mr. Cohen charged that, contrary to assertions of Allied leaders, the Minneapolis Allied convention had rejected the code before the distributors' spokesman had a chance to take the floor. Mr. Cohen said he was present at a board meeting the day before William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, and head of the distributors' negotiating committee, took the floor; and that the national body's directors had rejected the code at the time.

Mr. Cohen charged, further, that the national organization's negotiating committee had accepted the code in principle in Chicago last November, despite "denials" by Mr. Myers.

While admitting that his organization had never been a member of the national group, Mr. Cohen declared that it had contributed to legal fees, and that it loyally supported its large affiliate.

The only charges to be brought against the New York Allied are its desires to assure peace in the industry, Mr. Cohen intimated.

Merger Rumored

The severance of the New York Allied from the National, this week, brought renewed reports of an alliance between Mr. Cohen's organization and the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, headed by circuit operator Harry Brandt. The two men are known to be friendly; both have accepted the trade practice code, "in part"; both are against governmental legislation, unless necessary; both, from all statements, favor an organization which in policy would be between the insurgents of the National Allied and the so-called "complacency" of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Mr. Cohen this week issued a statement, in the form of a bulletin to member of his group.

This bulletin charges the National Allied with desiring to destroy its New York affiliate, and to substitute a "subservient" affiliate; charges that certain members of New York Allied are "in cahoots" with the national leadership; calls the expulsion just "another effort to draw a 'red herring' across the trail, so as to attempt to overshadow the important and constructive work being carried on by this unit."

"We are expelled because of a topheavy burden placed on us by National Allied, in a job that they failed miserably to complete," the bulletin says. "And, remember this, too—we are expelled from membership, when we were never accepted into the membership of National Allied."

CBS Sells Station; Acquires Another

Sale of the CBS Cincinnati station, WKRC, to the Cincinnati Times Star, was announced by the broadcasting chain last week. The sale is subject to FCC approval.

It becomes effective on September 24, at which time the CBS programs will begin to be broadcast from the newly affiliated CBS station in that city, WCKY.

Reason advanced for the sale of the old unit, and acquisition of a new one by the CBS was the need for more power, WCKY having 50,000 watts.

At present, CBS has 15 stations rated at 50,000 watts.

HOLLYWOOD ACTORS BACK STAGE COLLEAGUES IN WAR ON IATSE

Guild Pledges Support to Parent Body in East as Rejection of Compromise Brings Impasse; "Treason" Trial Is Begun

Declaring that it would refuse to allow its parent organization to be split in the current controversy with the American Federation of Labor, and that an "attack on one or more of the Four A's unions is an attack on all," the Screen Actors' Guild on Monday night, in Hollywood, pledged its full strength to the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent actors' union, in the fight the latter is waging against domination by George E. Browne's International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and against the support of the latter by the executive council of the America Federation of Labor.

Compromise Rejected

Labor Federation officials last week had turned down a modification of the "compromise decision" arrived at by it, in Atlantic City two weeks ago. The modification, by William Green, president of the national labor union, and Matthew Woll, vice-president of the same national body and a leader of a mediation committee, had eliminated Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the American Federation of Actors, as a factor in the proposed reinstatement of the actors' federation into the Four A's. The council, in turning down this modification insisted upon its original "compromise," which had been rejected by the Four A's last week, and which consisted of instruction to George Browne that he withdraw the charter he had issued to the AFA, previously expelled by the Four A's; a plea to all parties to be "reasonable"; a "suggestion" that the Four A's reinstate the Actors' Federation, and all of its officers, including Mr. Whitehead; and a "proposal" for the new election of officers within 90 days to the Federation, its affairs to be governed during that time by an impartial ten man board.

The Four A's last week rejected the labor federation's recommendations again, and prepared for a war in which possibly the entire entertainment industry would be affected. Its effectiveness in such a struggle, which would be waged within the industry against Mr. Browne's IATSE, whom the actors call "stagehands" and outside the industry against the American Federation of Labor, whom the actors call "out of sympathy" would depend upon the unity with which its 11 member unions faced the struggle.

The Screen Actors Guild, as well as Actors' Equity, the American Federation of Radio Artists, Chorus Equity, the American Guild of Musical Artists, and other Four A unions some time ago pledged their financial strength to assist in the formation of the Four A's "substitute" union for the AFA—the American Guild of Variety Artists, which is now said to have a membership of about 2,000.

It now is up to them to pledge their strength in possible strike action against the "stagehands' union," and in a withdrawal move from the labor federation.

Actors Pledge Support

The text of the actors' guild resolution, the form upon which all pledges of support for the Four A's from its component parts may be expected to be built, follows:

"Whereas, the long established and recognized purpose of the Actors International, the Four A's has been and now is to provide and guarantee honest, effective union representation for all organized actors; and

"Whereas, the right of the Four A's to represent all actors recently, on August 15, 1939, was affirmed by the American Federation of Labor Executive Council in a constitutional interpretation, which said 'This organization (Four A's) has jurisdiction over all performers in the amusement and entertainment world,' and

"Whereas, in spite of this statement from the A. F. of L., itself, efforts have been made and are being made to interfere with Four A's autonomy and to restore an unfit official, namely Ralph Whitehead, to a position of authority among organized variety actors; and

"Whereas, those responsible for such attempted encroachment upon the Four A's and upon honest unionism have threatened reprisals against one or more of the several actors unions comprising the Four A's; and

"Whereas, any attack or reprisal against one Four A Union is an attack on all Four A unions, representing all organized actors; and

"Whereas, the situation calls for militant unity of all actors in America;

"Now, Therefore, be it Resolved, that the Board of Directors of the Screen Actors Guild pledges its full strength, economic and otherwise, for any action which may become necessary, in support of and in cooperation with Actors Equity, American Guild of Variety Artists, American Federation of Radio Artists, American Guild of Musical Artists, and other Four A unions—individually and collectively—for the duration of a finish fight—and be it further

"Resolved, that in the interests of maximum strength through unity, the Screen Actors Guild will cooperate with other Four A unions, in developing a 'One Big Union' Four A plan, preserving group autonomy to the end, that performers, wherever they perform, shall be protected by an integrated, strong, single performer's union."

Treason Trial Begun

With her trial for "treason" to the acting profession occurring on Thursday in the New York offices of Actors' Equity, Sophie Tucker, became a possible casus belli for the long threatened conflict.

Even the Four A's threat to withdraw from the American Federation of Labor and to engage in immediate conflict with the "stagehands" seemed wordy, somewhat remote, and subject to further negotiation, along side of the possibilities arising from suspension of Miss Tucker by the Actors' Equity.

Her suspension would make Miss Tucker unable to appear in "Leave It To Me," scheduled to reopen in New York on September 4th. Other members of the cast, Equity members all, would walk out, if Miss Tucker tried to appear. But Miss Tucker would be supported by the stagehands. They would walk out.

All of which might lead to retaliation by Equity members against stagehands elsewhere; it might lead to retailiation against IATSE members in Hollywood, by members of the Screen Actors' Guild.

With most of the studio crafts workers and the nation's projectionists Alliance members, and with some 6,000 of the studio actors guild members, the consequences are easily seen.

That Miss Tucker would be supported by the "stagehands" seemed certain this week. James J. Brennan, sixth vice-president of the Alliance, intimated as much in New York this week.

He then said that his union did not contemplate further action; it would wait for retaliation, and then would strike again.

War Threatened

Miss Tucker's trial on Thursday by Actors' Equity, a trial to which she announced she would not go, because she did not have "faith" in the Equity council, was preceded this week and last by barrages of statements and counter-statements and declarations of readiness for action—meaning war in the union sense.

In the August issue of the Equity magazine, appearing this week, Miss Tucker was urged to resign, though her name was not mentioned. The editorial was met by Miss Tucker with a flat rejection. She did not intend to resign, she said; and she would not appear at the trial. She would have appeared at the trial, she intimated, if she had been allowed a lawyer; but this was even denied her, she said.

The trial had been set for Tuesday but Harry Richman, vice-president of the Actors Federation, requested the Equity Council to postpone it to Thursday.

The immediate cause for Miss Tucker's trial was her "treasonable" action in accepting a charter from Mr. Browne, president of the IATSE. Miss Tucker's union, the Actors' Federation, she, Mr. Ralph Whitehead, its executive secretary, were expelled from the Four A's the week of July 10th, after trial on that date for "mismanagement," "undemocratic control" and alleged misuse of union monies. The charges were mostly against the administration of Mr. Whitehead; and Miss Tucker, though in the forefront of all the battles which have occurred since, has been regarded, openly, by her fellow actors, as "misguided" in defending Mr. Whitehead. The Four A's trial board found the AFA guilty of all the charges, which were the result of an investigation which had been demanded, earlier this year, by Mr. Whitehead himself "to clear up these ugly rumors"; and on Friday of that week, revoked the actors' federation charter. It immediately issued one, with the same jurisdiction, to the newly formed American Guild of Variety Artists.

For about one week, the fate of the Actors' Federation was in doubt. Legally, its opponents claimed, it was out of the A. F. of L.

However, William Green, president of that

MANAGERS, TREASURERS STRIKE IN NEW YORK

The Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union, fast-growing organization of "front office" employees, confined for the present to the East, called a strike last Friday at 16 Nelson-Renne houses in Brooklyn and Long Island.

Last week, also, it called the Independent Theatre Owners Association "unfair". Its New York City strikes are against some of the houses owned by members of this organization.

The union's pact with the Five-Boro circuit was scheduled to be signed this week. Its applications before the State Labor Relations Board for certification as the bargaining agent for the Liberty Theatre and the Rugoff & Becker circuit were to be heard this Wednesday and September 6th, respectively.

national body, refused to concede this. In a telegram to J. W. Buzzell, secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, he declared that the actors' group was still in his organization, and shortly afterward, George E. Browne, president of the stagehands' union, gave Miss Tucker and Mr. Whitehead a charter for their orphaned union.

Thereupon ensued a protest from the Four A's, which culminated in a mass descent by its leading figures upon the Labor Federation's executive council meeting at Atlantic City two weeks ago. A "compromise decision," asking Mr. Browne to withdraw his charter to Miss Tucker's union, asking the Four A's to reinstate her union, and all its officers and deciding that an election be held within 90 days, of new officers for the actors union, was rejected last week by the Four A's, Mr. Whitehead being almost the sole issue.

Issues Statement

The Four A's last week issued a statement which publicly explains its reasons for past action, and for any action it may take in the industry against the IATSE, and for any it may take to withdraw from the American Federation of Labor. Said the statement, in part:

"The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor had to choose between honest unionism and dishonest unionism. They chose the latter.

"They had to choose between upholding an agreement approved by President William Green and Vice-President Matthew Woll which was satisfactory to the Four A's or repudiating their President and Vice-President. They chose the latter.

"They had to choose between acting constitutionally and in the best interests of labor, or acting unconstitutionally by denying the Four A's the right to govern itself, and thus do irreparable damage to the cause of labor. They chose the latter.

"Their action forces us to place before our membership the question of leaving the American Federation of Labor. We will present our membership with the full facts of this shameful betrayal in Atlantic City and it will be up to them to decide.

"The decision of the Executive Council would continue to foist on the actor Mr. Ralph Whitehead who had been found to be dishonest, and unworthy of holding a position of trust.

"If the Four A's were to agree to the reinstatement of Whitehead it would forfeit those principles of honesty and democracy in union government which its members insist that it uphold.

"As Executive Secretary of the American Federation of Actors he ran his organization through a dummy Council of paid employees and WPA workers whom he controlled. He ran his union undemocratically and without consulting his members. He was found guilty of gross failure to protect his members. He has been emphatically repudiated by almost half of his total membership who joined the American Guild of Variety Artists after the American Federation of Actors was expelled from the Four A's."

Verdict Called "Unjust"

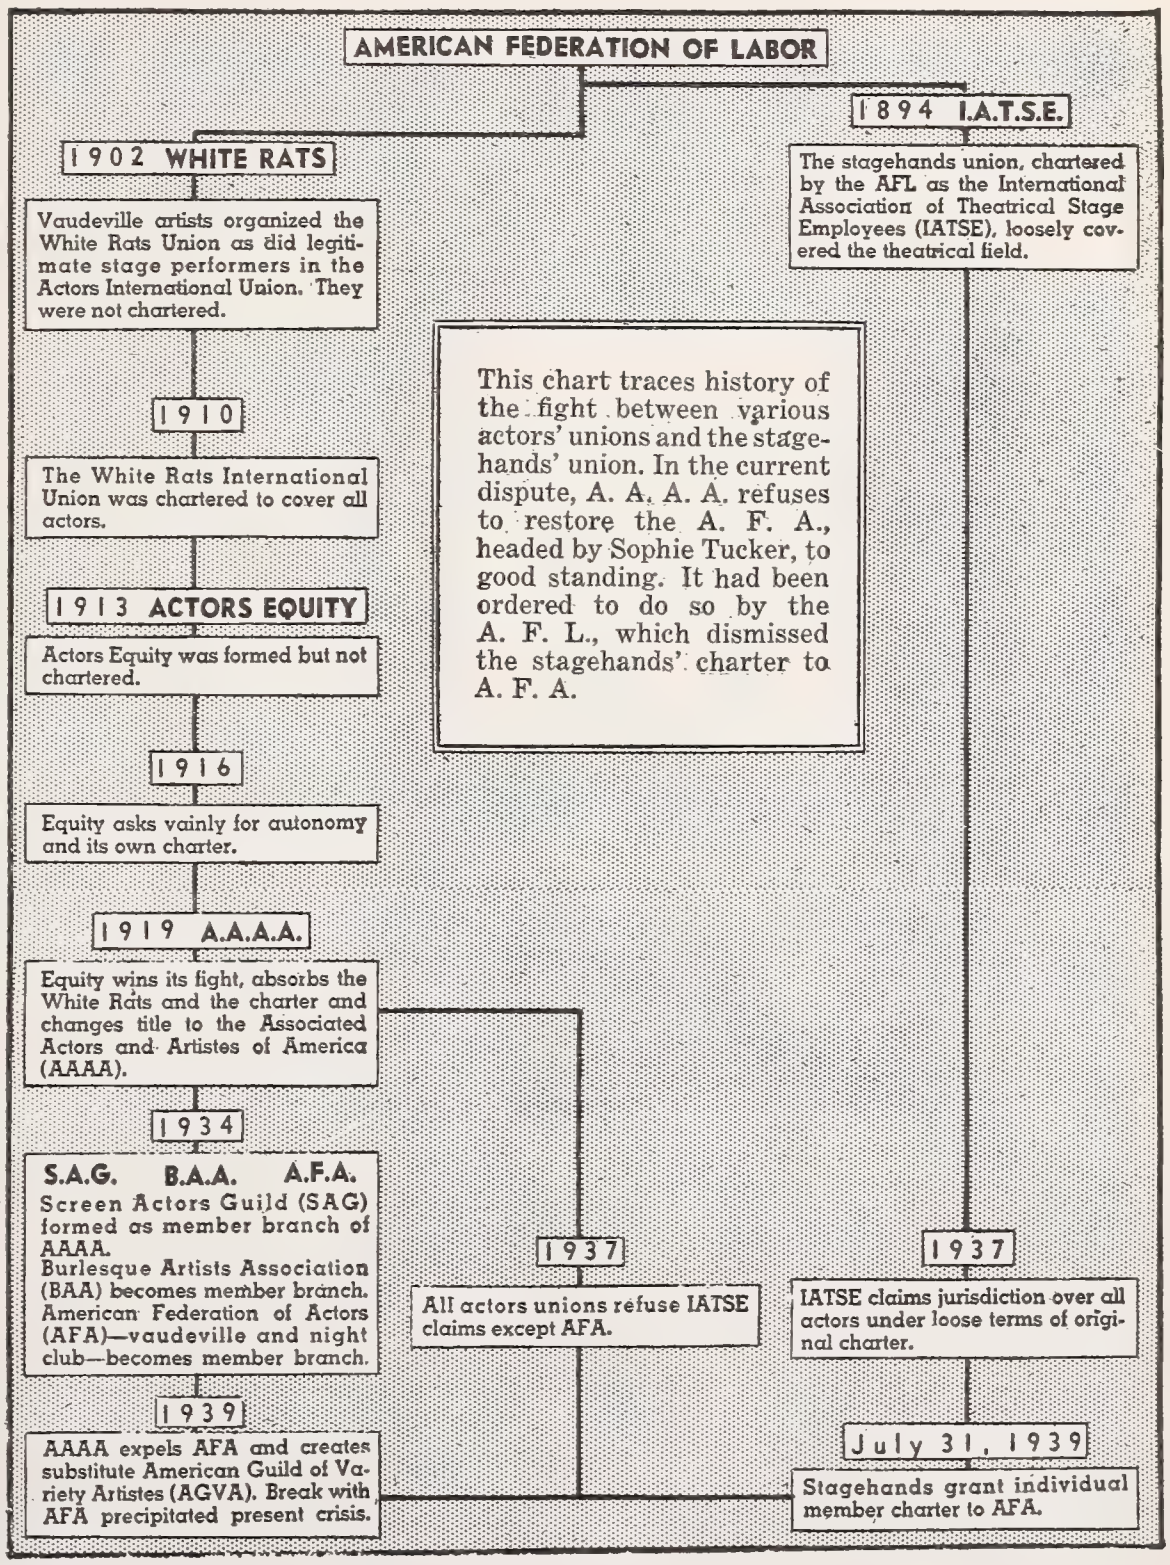
The parent actors' body statement concludes, thus:

"It is indeed ironic that when the Four A's for the first time in its 29 year association with the AFL comes to its parent body for a square deal it gets what is without question an unjust verdict.

"The Executive Council's action forces us to consider terminating our 29-year relationship with the American Federation of Labor. They have placed an individual above principle. In an attempt to whitewash this discredited individual the Council is willing to precipitate what will probably be the most disastrous war that has ever afflicted the amusement industry. The consequences will be on their heads. Thousands of people may well lose their employment and millions of dollars be lost to the industry. A great many people may undergo great hardships.

"The Executive Council has chosen the side of dishonest unionism. Their action is dictatorial and unconstitutional. The Four A's cannot, with honor, submit to such a decision."

On Monday, it was reported that George Browne was being importuned by executives of the American Federation of Labor, and even, it was additionally reported, by those of the motion picture industry, to withdraw the charter he gave to Miss Tucker's union—in order to avoid the coming "war"; and this course, a voluntary abegnation by Mr. Browne, whose prestige would not thereby suffer, was thought the only way out.



Mr. Whitehead, the focal point of all the controversy, only this week declared that he was beginning an "intensive drive" of organization under the IATSE charter.

He added that the drive would at present be only under the fields in which his actors' federation had been formerly chartered by the AAAA.

However, the IATSE charter to Mr. Whitehead's union provides for jurisdiction over all actors, regardless of type of work. This, as well as the "stagehand's" angle, and Mr. Whitehead, has been a sore point in the Four A's dispute with Mr. Browne's worker's union and the national labor federation. The Four A's has always maintained, among its organizations, an individuality borne of the type of work the individual units were engaged in. The wide scope of the IATSE charter to Mr. Whitehead's and Miss Tucker's expelled group was seen as an effort to invade, eventually and particularly, the Screen Actors' Guild field.

Steering Committee Named

The Four A's international board this week appointed a steering committee "to meet any eventuality that may arise." On the committee are Paul Dulzell, Equity executive secretary; Florence Marston, Screen Actors Guild eastern representative; Leo Fischer, executive secretary of American Guild of Musical Artists; Emily Holt, executive secretary of American Federation of Radio Artists, and Maida Reade, A. G. V. A. executive secretary. Frank Gillmore, 4-A president; Paul N. Turner, 4-A counsel, and Henry Jaffe, associate counsel, will serve ex-officio. George Heller, assisting A.F.R.A. executive secretary, will serve in Mrs. Holt's absence.

The board instructed all its branches not to take any action without the committee's approval.

Among the many suggestions for peace bandied about in New York last week, was that by Burns Mantle, noted drama critic for the New York Daily News, who had this to say:

"If the two sides hold persistently to the issue, and if Mr. Whitehead hasn't the good sense, in the cause of unionism to which he says he is devoted, to eliminate himself from the controversy, then such a war threatens as will disrupt the stage and all its jobs—actors' and stagehands' jobs alike—for weeks, and it may be months, to come.

"In this instance, it would be awfully wise, it seems to me, if the broad-minded Mr. Browne would give the suffering Mr. Whitehead a job in the stagehands' union, for which I am sure he is perfectly suited, and thus let everybody associated with the theatre get back to his job and a reasonable peace of mind."

Green Hopes for Peace

Some hope was seen in the declaration by William Green that the "situation remains the same as before we started these discussions," that "the American Federation of Actors has no American Federation of Labor standing" and that "the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees will give up the AFA definitely."

If Mr. Green was quoted correctly, the only apparent conclusion was that, whether or not Mr. Whitehead stood fast, the hope of peace at mid-week depended upon Mr. Browne, head of the IATSE, not "standing fast," but rather doing as Mr. Green is reported to have said he would do; give up the AFA.

Whether he would do so, at mid-week was still a question.

When questioned previously, Mr. Browne, always close-mouthed, had merely stubbornly reiterated the desire not to desert Mr. Whitehead and his union.

Last week, he is reported to have assigned as the reason for still keeping the AFA charter, the fear that the actors' federation would be taken over by John L. Lewis' Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Last summer, at the Cleveland convention of the "stagehands," Mr. Browne, while ostensibly not envisioning the present situation, and therefore not mentioning the American Federation of Actors or any other specific actors' group, was more definite in his desires.

At that time, he envisioned the whole industry, actors included, apparently, under the control of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

Keith Companies Show $830,000 Net

B. F. Keith Corporation and subsidiary companies show a net profit of $830,360.13 after all charges for the 52 weeks ended July 1st, as follows:

Both of the above statements are in part estimated and subject to audit and adjustment at the end of the calendar year.

"Harvest" Protest Letter

Despite a protest letter from the French Embassy at New York, through its counsellor, M. Garreau Dombasle, on New York State's censorship ban of the picture "Harvest" from exhibition in the state, the picture is not likely to be screened by Board of Regents members until September.

French Cinema Center, Inc., distributor of "Harvest," said this week that James Shelley Hamilton, Review Secretary of the National Board of Review, has notified the company that the board has unanimously voted "Harvest" an "Exceptional Photoplay."

Set Films for Flynn

Warner Brothers have scheduled two new films for Errol Flynn on their Fall production program. The films are Rafael Sabatini's "The Sea Hawk," which will be first and "Nevada," an original story by Robert Buckner, author of "Dodge City." Michael Curtiz will direct both films, which will be made in color. Flynn recently completed "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" with Bette Davis.

Push Italian Pictures Here

Esperia Film Distributing Company has contracted with ENIC, the Italian governmental monopoly for films, to distribute approximately 50 Italian-made films in this country during the coming year.

Dr. Francesco Macaluso, director of the company, which is to be a New York corporation, with offices at 1650 Broadway, New York City, returned to New York last week from Italy with announcement of the new plans.

The company will reopen the Squire Theatre, at Eighth Avenue and 44th Street, as a "show-window." The house will probably begin operation on September 15th, and its new name will be Cinecitta.

Dr. Macaluso estimates the market for Italian films at about 200 theatres, nationally. He thinks this number will increase.

Also being handled, besides the approximately 50 features from Italy, is the Luce Newsreel, issues of which will arrive here at 15-day intervals.

Appended is a list of the product Esperia has available.

"Eravamo Sette Sorelle," "Lotte Nell 'Ombra," "Sotto La Croce del Sud," "Per Uomini Soli," "Vivere," "Il Corsaro Nero." The titles listed above belong to last year's product.

New product is "Guiseppe Verdi," "Il Signor Max," "Scipione de Africano," "Aria del Continente," "La Mazurca di Papa'," "Une Moglie in Pericolo," "Napoli D'Altri Tempi," "Condottieri," "Squadrone Bianco," "Belle o Brutte Si Sposan Tutte," "Ho Perduto Mio Marito," "Voglio Vivere con Litizia," "Re Di Denari," "I Fratelli Castiglione," "Retrosecena," "Un Ballo Al Castello," "Grande Magazzini," "Mille Lire Al Mese."

Warners Again Change Philadelphia Policy

Warner again will shift policies in most of their Phildelphia theatres starting August 25th. Stage shows will return to the Earle from the Fox, leaving the latter on a straight film policy.

The Capitol, for years a grind house with a daily change, will become a first run house, using the product which formerly went to the Earle. Keith's will reopen as a third run, with frequent changes. The Stanton, Karlton and Palace will continue their second run policies. When the Aldine reopens, it will continue to be a United Artists house as before.

Reduce Chicago Fees

Jack Kirsch, head of Allied of Illinois, disclosed this week in Chicago, that the city's license fees for theatres had been reduced in several instances at the request of his organization. Retroactive from July 1st to December 31st, license fees for theatres seating a maximum of 250 have been reduced from $250 to $200. Theatres seating a maximum of 750, reduced from $325 to $275. More than 75 Chicago theatres are affected by the reductions.

FEDERAL AGENT PROBES HOLLYWOOD; COURT FINES THREE LABOR LEADERS

Justice Department Gathers Data on Labor Activities, Income Tax Law Violations for Early Presentation to Grand Jury

Among the varied labor cases on the coast, before the National Labor Relations Board, and in process of settlement with the producers, the most noteworthy this week appears to be the hearing before the NLRB on the charges by the Screen Writers' Guild that the producers used coercion and otherwise unfairly treated them.

Federal Probe Started

There is also the Federal probe of the crafts workers' unions, income tax payments, and the organization of Twentieth Century Fox from the Fox Film Corporation. This probe is being made the basis for charges that the government is aiding the CIO, which through its affiliated United Studio Technicians' Guild, is endeavoring to invade and discredit, the present domination of crafts workers by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

On the stand before the NLRB last week in Hollywood, Jack L. Warner, Sol Wurtzel, and E. J. Mannix denied that the Wagner Labor Act had been violated by the producers in their dealing with the Writers' Guild.

The hearing opened last Thursday before Trial Examiner J. J. Fitzpatrick. The producers moved unsuccessfully to dismiss the complaints.

Mr. Warner, the first witness, denied having urged the writers, by letter, to quit the Guild. He denied that the writers were "employees" in the Wagner Act sense; they are "creators," he said. Mr. Mannix and Mr. Wurtzel concurred.

He said he opposed the two and three year contracts which the Guild desired. The length of contract had been a main reason for the breakdown in negotiations between the producers and writers, which resulted in re-filing of charges with the NLRB against the producers. The writers are opposed to long term contracts, feeling that fixed contracts are unfair because of shifting conditions.

Negotiating for Year

The negotiations had been going on since early this year, following recognition by the producers of the Guild.

Last Friday, B. B. Kahane, vice-president of Columbia Pictures, and formerly the president of RKO, asserted that producers did not want to deal with the Guild because that body wanted to monopolize all the writing man power and source material in the industry.

"In a meeting with Guild representatives I informed them that the producers were confused," Mr. Kahane said. "I said that the producers had no objection to the Guild, but that they opposed dictatorial powers. Why, even some of the representatives of the writers wanted to insist in the working conditions that the producers could not have the right to any script changes. We could not do this."

However, J. K. McGuinness testified that producers had tried to prevent the Guild members from affiliating with the Authors' League of America, a move which would help union unity and power in forcing producers to accede to demands.

Other witnesses last Friday were Sam Briskin, Pandro S. Berman, Bernard Hyman, and William Koenig. Witnesses this week were Daryll Zanuck, Louis B. Mayer, David Selznick, John Lee Mahin, Grover Jones and Dalton Trumbo.

In the Federal probe situation, special assistant attorney general Charles H. Carr proceeded this week with his interviewing of labor officials and producers, preparatory to a Federal Grand Jury impaneling in September.

However, three American Federation of Labor officials—J. W. Buzzell, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, A. H. Peterson, Southern California representative of the American Federation of Labor, and John Gatelee, international representative of the IATSE—made public this week a letter they had written to Attorney General Frank Murphy, in which they charged that his probe, which is reported to be mainly concerned with the payment of $100,000 by producers in 1937 to IATSE officer William Bioff, was furthering the coast campaign of the CIO against the A. F. of L.

The three men called upon Carr last week and offered him their cooperation. They were told by Mr. Murphy's assistant that "there is no foundation whatsoever to the charge that the Department is favoring the C.I.O."

The United Studio Technicians' Guild, the CIO affiliate which the labor officers meant in their mention of the CIO, this week was disclosed to have wired Mr. Murphy, welcoming the probe, and asking for an election by the NLRB soon, to determine the proper bargaining agent for Hollywood crafts workers.

Election Set

Apropos of this, it was announced this week that an agreement had been reached between Charles Katz, attorney for the Technicians' Guild, and Joseph Padway, attorney for the IATSE, for a bargaining agent election within 30 days.

The Guild has applied to the NLRB for certification; this, of course, depends upon an election.

Meanwhile, international unions which are signatories to the so called "basic agreements" with the studios, agreements which expired last March but which continue automatically until renewed, will hold a renewal meeting in Newark Friday with producers' labor representatives.

AUTHORS' LEAGUE SUPPORTS AAAA

Supporting the stand of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America in the current jurisdictional controversy is the Authors' League of America. In a letter to Frank Gillmore, Four A's president, Marc Connelly, president of the League, said:

"The Associated Actors and Artistes of America is the proper haven for the actors, the Authors' League for the authors, and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees for the stagehands. Through years of experience, each of them understands the needs of its own members. This experience obviously does not include the problems of the other groups."

Union Officers Sentenced in Cases Arising from Revolt of Local 37, but IATSE Leaders Win Dismissal with Warning

An outgrowth of the months of litigation on the coast between officers of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and the dissident members of the Studio Technicians Local 37, came to an end last week when a Hollywood Superior Court found three officers of the IATSE guilty of contempt of court, but freed four others and J. W. Buzzell, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council.

Court Order Held Violated

The charges grew out of the revocation of the Local 37 charter and its splitting into five different unions, by the international officers, after court and public fights, during which charges of racketeering were aired against the international officers and charges of "Communism" against the Local 37 leaders. The revocation and the setting up of the new unions was held to be in violation of a court order.

Superior Court Judge Henry Willis last week found guilty Alliance officers Zeal Fairbanks, Steve B. Newman, and Boyd Young. On Monday he fined Fairbanks, $150; Newman, $100, and Young, $50. Maximum penalty was $500 and five days in jail.

The cases against Mr. Buzzell, John Gatelee, Frank Stickling, Harold V. Smith, and Lew G. Blix were dismissed.

The court declared that George E. Browne, Alliance president, was mainly responsible for the violations alleged, and asserted:

"It is regrettable that Browne is not within the jurisdiction of this court."

At the court hearings, it was testified that plans to split up the local had been made before the interfactional fights developed. A. H. Anderson, Southern California representative of the American Federation of Labor, said that he and Mr. Buzzell had discussed the advisability of splitting up the local last year, because it was too large.

Others testifying were Thomas Goset, president of Local 727, one of the new units; Mr. Blix, and Harvey E. Garman, editor of the Los Angeles Citizen, a labor paper.

Connecticut Sentences

Edward G. Levy, New Haven lawyer, general counsel of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and also of the M.P.T.O. of Connecticut, received a one-year jail sentence Monday for his participation in a conspiracy to defraud the city of Waterbury, Conn., of more than $1,000,000 in the years 1930 through 1937. Mr. Levy had pleaded guilty at the outset of the trial and turned State's evidence. Terms ranging up to 15 years were imposed on others among the 20 defendants, including T. Frank Hayes, Mayor of Waterbury.

"WHAT TO DO?" PUZZLES MAJORS AFTER ARNOLD DENOUNCES CODE

Claims the "Fair Practice" Code Assumed the Legality of the Very Practices Which the Government Challenges

The week-end found the chieftains of the motion picture industry "in conference" as they have never been before.

Executive headquarters in New York had for consideration the problem of the next move to be made in the face of the dilemma laden situation created by a pungent official Washington denunciation of their efforts at a trade practice code, tediously evolved after many months as a move of placation and defense against the charges of the Government anti-trust suit.

The denunciation came—as was bulletined in MOTION PICTURE HERALD's last issue—by the same Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general in charge of the government's anti-trust program.

Mr. Arnold remarked that the "code" was irrelevant to the charges of the suit, that it was "illegal" and based on an illegal structure and that its adoption would be provocation for ne wsuits, and "prosecutions." He also restated his stand for divorcement of production-distribution from exhibition.

From the issuance of Mr. Arnold's rather open letter on the subject, the code makers have been conferring—and in some bewilderment.

"Rule by Ukase"

"The real question," one spokesman of the industry observed, "is whether or not American industry is to be ruled by ukase and dictatorships."

No agreed program was in sight in the conferences of leaders and lawyers. Also no organized plan had reached form sufficiently tangible for consideration.

The code died aborning, for it had been completed—in a fifth and "final" form, and was taken to Mr. Arnold's Department of Justice office at Washington for approval or suggestions, by five of the major's lawyers, only 12 days ago. Out of that submission came the code's end, for Mr. Arnold told each of the lawyers who had visited him—Austin C. Keough, for Paramount Pictures; Robert W. Perkins, for Warner Brothers Pictures; Richard E. Dwight, of Dwight, Harris, Hoegel and Caskey, for Twentieth Century-Fox; John Howley, of Donovan, Leisure, Newton and Lumbard, for RKO, and J. Robert Rubin, for Loew's, Inc.—that the "fair practice" code assumed the legality of the very trade practices which the United States Government challenges in its New York trust suit; that it fails to meet anti-trust objections in many ways, and, anyway, it would not remedy the conditions held by the U. S. to be in violation of the law because it would continue producer-control over exhibition, would not bring about divorcement of theatres by distributing companies.

And, in warning, he told the majors that adoption of the code would without question bring more anti-trust prosecutions against them, adding further, that any code must contain the reforms which the United States seeks in its pending New York suit—hinting, at a consent decree, perhaps?

In the very week of the code's demise, but just prior to Mr. Arnold's announcement Allied States Association—whose general-counsel-manager Abram F. Myers has had many a "pipeline" into the Department of Justice offices, from his nearby headquarters in the same city—stated to the trade press that a code acceptable to the United States which could be incorporated into a consent decree, would "clean the slate" (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, August 19th, page 25).

Purely coincidental, no doubt, was the fact that on the very Wednesday afternoon that Mr. Arnold wrote his letters of code rejection to the industry lawyers, Allied's Abram Myers was penning a note to the trade press stating that exhibitor reaction to Allied's suggestion for a consent decree to "clean the slate," had been "very encouraging," adding: "Several eastern organizations are sending it to their entire membership." Mr. Myers even disclosed where anyone interested could get the stencils of the mimeograph which he used to print the long statement—at the Mimeoform Service, 1320 F Street, N.W., Washington.

And with that, Mr. Myers, saying he was in need of a vacation, locked the doors of Allied's Washington headquarters and sailed away for a holiday cruise, to be gone until after Labor Day.

Majors "Stunned"

Thursday's thunderbolt from Mr. Arnold so stunned home office executives that nearly all remained "out" to the press all day. Those who would talk—but without identification, characterized the action as "calculated to further harass the industry in the hope that it will do what its (Justice Department's) national litigation program has failed to do—force us into an Arnold-dictated consent decree." (The majors have insisted all along that they would neither agree to Allied's insistency on a theatre divorcement clause in the code, or to a U. S. consent decree with a similar purpose).

The weekend was too close for the majors to discuss much in emergency session, but early Monday, the meetings started, with some talk of "salvaging" parts of the document arising at once and other lines indicating that it might be advisable to sit tight for a few weeks, or longer, and then try to persuade Mr. Arnold that some exhibitors do want the program.

Attempts were made over the weekend to meet with Mr. Arnold, but his absence from Washington precluded a contact which the film lawyers had expected, in the hope that the code could be effectuated legally for those exhibitors who desire it.

The possibility of industry leaders taking an appeal to Mr. Arnold's "boss," Attorney General Frank Murphy or to President Roosevelt, in the event Mr. Arnold refuses to alter his stand on the code, is still being entertained in some industry quarters. Most officials, however, are of the opinion that the chances of reviving the code hinge entirely on a change of front by Mr. Arnold and, about this, few are hopeful.

Few along Broadway appeared to believe that any basically altered code would be attempted, the majors having repeatedly stated openly, principally to Allied States, that they had "given all they could give" in the form as finally drafted. What, if any influence the Government's action might have in changing that decision, remains to be seen.

The fact remains that, as of today, no decision has been agreed to as to where the majors are going from here codewise.

Should Mr. Arnold's opinion stick, the only conceivable "out" by which the distributors could put the intended concessions into effect would be by contractual clauses, some lawyers believe.

Contractual Clause Proposed

That action, of course, would have to be taken by the companies individually. It could cover the essential concessions of the code, such as cancellations, the ban on shorts forcing, provision for preferred playdates and other clauses which the distributors themselves could govern contractually.

It is also possible that some form of arbitration could be set up, as now provided optionally in licensing contracts.

But arbitration of clearance and zoning and overbuying practices which have caused most of the exhibitors' complaints will not be legally possible under Mr. Arnold's interpretation because they involve a "third party."

A distributor and an exhibitor could agree on clearance and overbuying, but, lacking arbitration, the third exhibitor affected could refuse assent to the arrangement. Company lawyers feel that this is the core of the situation.

Code Buying Delayed

The motion picture's distribution and exhibition branches found themselves in a strange position this week, for many exhibitors have been delaying 1939-40 buying pending submission of the code, thus greatly delaying the distributors' selling season. Exhibitors in countless instances had been expecting the concessions of the code to play a part in their new product buying—cancellation was to be greater, paying of score charges altered, forcing of short subject sales eliminated, etc.

The only official word from the majors in answer to Mr. Arnold, did not come until Friday when a lone 60-word statement was issued by the negotiating committee, through William F. Rodgers, MGM sales manager, who, as chairman, worked longest and hardest on the drafting. He said: "The committee that worked on the code has not lost one single bit of faith in it. They believe thoroughly that it can be of tremendous value to the industry and will tend to solve a great many of the difficulties which have arisen. We still hope to persuade the Government that the code should be put into effect."

Speaking on his own, Mr. Rodgers said he was greatly disappointed by the Government's action but added that he believed the work done on the code during the past 14 months was not entirely wasted, even though the industry is forced by Mr. Arnold's pronouncement to forego a code of fair trade practices.

"I know that thousands of small exhibitors throughout the country want this code," Mr. Rodgers said. "I also know that those exhibitors are aware that the distributors were and are sincere in attempting to improve industry conditions and relations. Our meetings with them convinced them of our sincerity and also brought them to the realization that distributors, too, have their problems. Those things will count for something."

With Will H. Hays, MPPDA president, hurriedly arriving on the scene Monday morning from California, ten days before he was due, meetings started almost immediately at the Hays headquarters on 44th Street. Out of one of the sessions came the private opinion that "a dead issue" best describes the code.

Arnold's Reasons

Throwing into confusion all ideas of the major companies for an amicable solution of at least some of the motion picture industry's con-troveries, the Department of Justice holds the code to be merely an extension of the allegedly illegal combinations at which it is shooting in the New York antitrust suit.

The Department's position was a blighting blow to the hopes of those code proponents, who had anticipated that, at most, the Department would merely recommend some changes in the pact and were confident that the document, as a whole, would receive Government approval, or that it would not be disapproved.

Silent During Negotiations

Mr. Arnold's letter to the lawyers broke the silence which the Department had consistently maintained during the code negotiations despite repeated efforts by the distributors to secure some expression of attitude, to put into only thinly-veiled words the belief which has been privately expressed by Department officials heretofore that the proposed agreement was merely an effort to stymie the Government prosecution without making any reforms.

Pointing out that the code is based upon the present organization of the industry, which the Government contends is illegal, the letter charged the companies with ignoring entirely the Government's position as outlined in the New York suit, contended that the code, far from being voluntary, would be forced upon independent exhibitors.

Timed for Newspapers

The Arnold letter was made public by the Department in Washington at approximately the same hour as the addressees received it in New York, apparently with a view to newspaper publication and consequent enlightenment of exhibitors throughout the country.

Designed to serve as notice that the Department was prepared to expend every effort to secure a reconstitution of the film industry, the letter was as follows:

"On behalf of certain major motion picture companies who are defendants in the case of United States v. Paramount Pictures, Inc., et al., you submitted to the Department of Justice a draft of a trade practice code and asked for an expression of the Department's views.

"The code assumes that the present organization of the motion picture industry is legal and that divestiture of exhibition and distribution is unnecessary. It therefore completely ignores the position taken by the Government in the pending litigation against the major companies. It also ignores the repeated statements of prosecution policy with respect to the moving picture industry made by the department.

"The proposed code is, in effect, an elaborate set of trade practice provisions superimposed upon a combination of producers, distributors and exhibitors which the Department contends is an illegal and unreasonable restraint of trade. While the code appears to be voluntary the practical effect of its adoption under existing conditions might be to compel independents to comply in order to survive.

"In addition to the illegality of the code in failing to provide for divestiture of production and distribution from exhibition, various specific provisions of the code are directly challenged by the Government in the pending litigation against the major companies.

"Economic Effects" Cited

"The Department therefore reaffirms the position which it has consistently taken since proceedings against the motion picture companies were commenced, to wit, that divestiture of distributors and producers from the exhibition branch of the industry must be obtained.

"The economic effects of the present illegal combinations were set out by the Department in its release of July 20, 1938, as follows:

"1. Independently owned theatres are being driven out of business because of the onerous and discriminatory conditions not only on the rental of films but with respect to other trade practices. At the present rate at which independently-owned theatres are being driven to financial failure, it will only be a question of a short time before there are no independents left in the field.

"2. New competitors who attempt to enter the field of motion picture exhibition find it almost impossible to secure film for exhibition on any reasonable and non-discriminatory basis. The result is that there is practically no effective new competition.

"3. Those independently owned theatres that have managed to date to survive are compelled, in order to get pictures, to operate under terms which leave them very little free-

U. S. Film Industry Policy Only Part of Bigger Program

TO put the issues between the Department of Justice in its anti-trust suit against the organized motion picture industry's major concerns into clear perspective in relation to the Administration program, MOTION PICTURE HERALD has asked for a Washington viewpoint from Francis L. Burt, who has been these many years the HERALD'S correspondent at the national capital and notable for his unbiased detachment. Mr. Burt's response appears in the ensuing article.—THE EDITOR.

by FRANCIS L. BURT
Washington Correspondent

The motion picture monopoly cases may be of first importance to the motion picture industry but they are little more than run-of-mine routine to the young, enthusiastic trust-busters of the Department of Justice.

If the film prosecutions have had more publicity than those in other industries, it is due, in part, to the fact that motion picture news is given "big play" in the press and, in part, to the tactics of the industry.

Oversuited in Spades

In number of cases brought, the campaign against the building industry will be broader; in importance to the national welfare, the building industry, fertilizer, milk and medical association cases probably rank ahead of films; in the cost of monopoly to the country, the building industry readily comes first.

Cases brought against the motion picture industry may reach a dozen; suits against the building trades will probably be double that number.

Of far more importance than dealing with the screen is the campaign against monopoly in the building trades, through which Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold hopes to reduce the cost of homes by anywhere up to 40 per cent.

So, in cold fact, the motion picture attack isn't the most engrossing matter to the Government, but it has received publicity far beyond its worth through a combination of circumstances.

Because motion pictures are a subject of interest to practically every literate person in the United States and because motion pictures therefore have more news value to the daily papers than, say, fertilizer, Department of Justice activities in that field get broad play.

But it is quite probable that less newspaper space would have been devoted to the film cases had not the distributors brought themselves repeatedly into the limelight with their efforts to delay the New York suit, their plans for a trade practice code, and their negotiations with the Department of Commerce—all of which made news.

On the other hand, cases against the oil and fertilizer industries were brought at the same time, without arousing much interest on the part of the general public.

Comparable only to the furor of the film cases is the department's planned attack on building materials, which will take form next month with anywhere from six to twenty grand jury presentations, the latter a figure of eminence the film industry cannot hope to attain. Because everybody lives in something, housing is a matter of general interest.

That the Department of Justice has brought several cases in the film industry also is due in part to the fact that it was easy to learn of complaints in that industry.

There are in Washington two men, representing independent interests, who have worn grooves in the street between their offices and the Department of Justice—one in the interest of oil and the other in the interest of motion pictures. Through these men, the Department has received literally hundreds of complaints, backed up by facts and figures sufficient at least to serve as the basis for investigations.

Myers Chief Plaintiff

Complaints against the film distributors have been pipelined chiefly through Abram F. Myers, Allied's general counsel, and it should not be overlooked that the Government's suits cover matters most complained of by the independent exhibitor group or that the Department's recent rejection of the distributors' code proposals was dom in the selection of film and in the management of their own business.

"4. Independent producers find it practically impossible to secure a satisfactory market for their film because of the domination by the major companies over the exhibition houses. These independent producers are up against an almost hopeless bargaining disadvantage in securing markets for their film in exhibition houses that are controlled by the major producers with whom the independent producers are trying to compete.

"5. New capital investment in the motion picture business is discouraged because of the great difficulty of competing on a fair basis with the major companies, either in production or exhibition, so long as the major companies control the principal markets for film.

"6. Theatre patrons in any given community are not given an opportunity to exercise choice as to the type of pictures they desire to see. Under present conditions it is impossible for community taste to find expression through a locally owned theatre free to bargain for the type of films its patrons wish. As matters now stand, each community is regimented into accepting the kind of pictures which will make the most profits on a nation-wide scale.

"7. There is no opportunity for new forms of artistic expression which are not approved by those in control of the major companies, even though there exist communities which would support them.

"These conditions in the opinion of the Department will not be remedied by the proposed code. It is based upon a structure of the industry which the Department expects to show is in clear and open violation of the Sherman Antitrust Law.

"Therefore, the Department in order to make its prosecution policy clear is compelled to announced that the adoption of the code dated August 10, 1939, by the motion picture industry can only lead to continued and perhaps additional prosecutions."

Exhibitor Leaders In Code Statements

Exhibitor leaders in the persons of Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA head and Harry Brandt, ITOA president, urged distributors over the weekend to ignore the views of the Department of Justice and to put the code into effect immediately. From the Allied side, there was a different reaction.

Mr. Kuykendall's statement follows:

"The action of the Department of Justice is no surprise to me. I have stated publicly many times that the Government would not approve the code. I have said many times that the distributors needed no signatures nor legal approval for the code. The fair trade practice program should be put into effect at once. No one was ever put in jail for doing right.

"The distributors should have put the code in operation long ago. Exhibitors everywhere were fast losing interest in it anyway because the distributors had procrastinated so long.

"I repeat," Kuykendall concludes, "that there is nothing to prevent the distributors from adopting fair trade practices."

Keep Code Fight Up—Brandt

Mr. Brandt's statement follows:

"Thurman Arnold has been ill-advised regarding the trade practice code and the needs of independent exhibitors. Divorcement of theatres is not important to the welfare of independent exhibitors. What is important is that the troubles that would be solved through the arbitration provisions of the code would mean a great deal to the success of independent theatre operation.

"I earnestly entreat the distributors to go ahead with the code and allow the exhibitors of the nation to take advantage of what it offers. If the code is not revived by the distributors, the exhibitors can place the blame on the shoulders of Abram F. Myers who has campaigned most actively for Government intervention rather than logical exhibitor relief.

"The Government suit will take at least two years to prosecute and there is doubt as to whether it will be prosecuted to a successful conclusion. The code on the other hand means immediate relief to the independent exhibitors who need that relief most urgently."

Cole, Myers Comment

From Dallas, Texas, Saturday, Colonel Cole, president of National Allied, declared:

"Certainly we're not going any further with the code since it has been ruled illegal. We've got into enough hot water over it without going any further.

"The report of the Allied code negotiating committee at Minneapolis listed four basic reasons for Allied's rejection of the code. Section Four of that report, which was referred to as 'the most important factor entering into our decision' stated that acceptance of the proposals would jeopardize prospects for additional relief, specifically referring to the Neely Bill and Government action through the courts. This present announcement by the Department of Justice completely justifies Allied's stand."

Abram F. Myers, Allied States general counsel, said: "The Code debacle is the logical outcome of a transparent attempt to tide over an emergency instead of making a serious effort to remedy industry abuses. I hope this will have a sobering effect on the real bosses of the industry and that they will now bring forth proposals which will command the confidence of the Government, the independent exhibitors and the public in general.

"Now, how about a code that will command the confidence and respect of the Government, the independent exhibitors and the public in general?"

U.S. Film Industry Policy Analyzed

based on the criticism which Allied had voiced that it would not remedy the conditions of which its members complained.

Furthermore, the alleged monopolists in the film industry are a small, compact group, operating on a nationwide basis. Once the basic facts are lined up, it is comparatively simple to bring, as the Department has done, a number of suits in different jurisdictions, all based on the same grounds.

Other industries are less easy to pin down. In milk, for instance, it is probable that every large city has its own little monopoly; the same is true of the already too frequently cited building trades.

So, naturally, motion pictures made a good target to shoot at, particularly as the politically wise Mr. Arnold knows that once he has succeeded in films it would be easy to bring other industries under control.

Accordingly, while the Department of Justice by no means minimizes its importance and, at the present time, would rather have a favorable court decision in the motion picture cases than in any other, the war on the film moguls is only one phase of the Administration's broad program.

Harassment Not in Plan

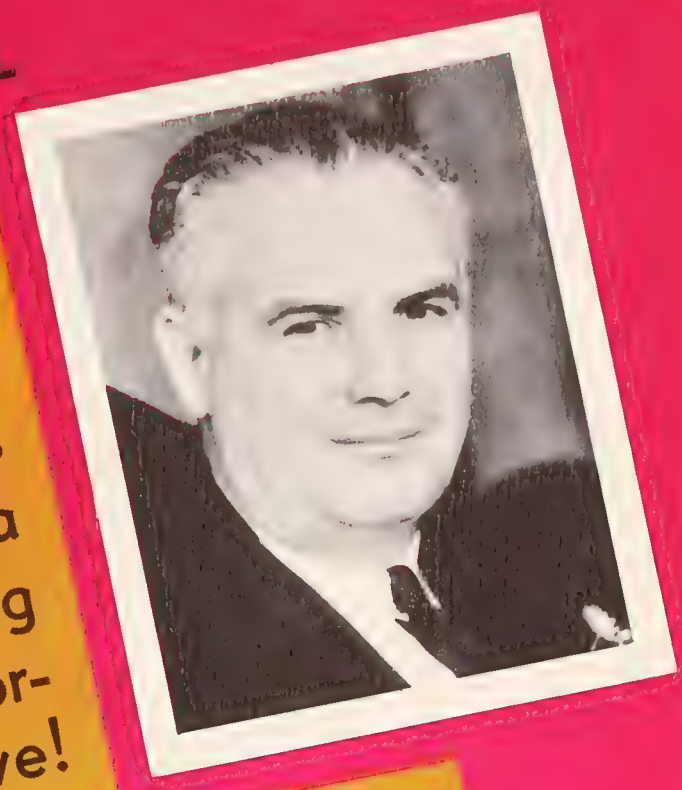
And while a great deal of talk has been occasioned by the union and tax cases which the Department is bringing, there is no desire on the part of the Government to harass the industry. In fact, those are not Justice Department "babies" and Mr. Arnold has nothing to do with them; they were first worked on by the Treasury Department and turned over to the Attorney General when prosecutions were indicated and do not come within the purview of the Anti-trust Division over which Mr. Arnold presides.

Similarly the Neely bill is not an Administration measure, but rather an independent effort to secure legislatively what the Government is attempting to secure through the courts.

Thurman Arnold, heading the Government's anti-trust law enforcement, is a young man with one eye on his present job and his other on the United States Supreme Court.

Politically wise—he served as mayor of his home town once and both he and the city survived—he has adopted the Administration's political viewpoint that all industry is its enemy, and is supported in that position by his boss, Attorney General Frank Murphy, who, incidentally, is considerably more blind to the political complexion of wrongdoers than was his predecessor, Homer Cummings.

To Mr. Arnold, industry is a checkerboard, and he centers his game against "black" men, wherever they may be, throwing his attack first against films, then oil, then some other industry in which there is what he has termed a "toll bridge" where consumers must pay tribute to monopoly.



"What has happened in this country is that a number of groups have gotten into control of what I have called economic toll bridges which enable them to impose charges on others who have to pass over them to buy or sell their goods," he has said. "These toll bridges are of many different kinds. Not all of them are illegal, but each of them gives the owner of the toll bridge the power to coerce and to tax others.

Would Establish Precedents

"Application of the various anti-trust acts today is not as clear as it should be. The reason is that they have never been enforced on a scale sufficient to clarify them by the process of judicial decisions covering a wide range of industries. A law like the Sherman Act obtains concrete meaning only when applied to concrete situations. Clarification of the law is inextricably bound up with the efficient prosecution of all cases, not a neglected few."

FIRST "STRAW" ON TELEVISION SHOWS PREFERENCE FOR LIGHT PROGRAMS

Broadcasters Turn Attention to Building Play Libraries for Program Use; British Viewers Tell Preferences in Poll

Television this week reported a number of "first"—its first "straw vote" on tastes in television, first sponsored television advertising films, first television from a fast moving train, first telecasting of a professional baseball game.

While the growing art is making progress of one kind or another, the telecasters continue to give more attention to the more serious business of building program sources and manufacturing cheaper-and-better sets for the public sale.

Play Library Started

Realizing that they cannot depend upon the motion picture industry's theatrical product for telecasts, National Broadcasting Company, principal telecaster in the U. S., to date, is starting to build up play material—dramas and musicals—for its daily shows.

In the set-building line, Farnsworth Television and Radio Company, brought dealers to New York this week to inspect new sets for public sale, its officials declaring that cheaper sets and better programs are the way to spur sales.

The first sizeable investigation by telecasters of the tastes of the public it is already serving and of those it expects to serve points to preferences for light entertainment, sporting events, "national ceremonies," plays and vaudeville from theatres, newsreels and cartoons—and against operettas, specially arranged musical productions, classical musical features. These are the results of a survey conducted in England by British telecasters among thousands of set owners there.

Classifying the votes into three categories—studio programs, outside broadcasts and films—the results were as follows:

Studio Productions

Drama	70
Full-length plays	83
Light entertainment	91
Musical features (solo or orchestra)	40
Ballet	25
Special musical productions	12
Operetta	26
Talks	74
Sports demonstrations	43
Other demonstrations	80

Outside Broadcasts

Sporting events	88
National ceremonies	89
Plays and vaudeville from theatres	93

Films

News reels	93
Cartoons	82
Short films	56
Feature Films
(a) English or American	65
(b) Continental	23

As television is still regarded in England, anyway, as "a dangerous rival" to the movie industry, the film companies have not given their full co-operation to the British producers of sight-broadcast, and for this reason the demand by many viewers for the revival of some of the old film successes cannot be fulfilled.

It was surprising to the BBC that short films ranked so high on the list as they were all more or less of an educational character or government propaganda.

There were innumerable requests for a "Children's Hour," and although much time cannot be devoted to this type of program at present, due to lack of studio accommodations, it has been decided to devote an occasional afternoon entirely to a young audience.

The musical features received the lowest rating, which was somewhat of a shock, say the telecast producers. They had not expected them to appeal to the majority, but such a low percentage was disappointing, and efforts are now being made to make these productions more suitable for television.

Then, too, there was a great demand for more plays. As there are very few plays being written for television, there will soon be a shortage of these programs, it is feared, for the present rate of consumption is five or six a week.

Viewers appeared to want more glamour, as well as more humor, and more pictures of the announcers. The announcers seem to have become very popular.

The "Firsts"

As the first commercial production organization to enter this field, Caravel Films, Inc., has started filming a series of three short subjects designed for transmission via television as a shopping aid to department store patrons. These films, being produced by Caravel for the American Television Corporaion, will inaugurate a series of televised film programs to be presented at Bloomingdale's New York department store for the purpose of promoting the sale of shoes, costume jewelry and dresses.

The first film, produced at Caravel's studios in Hempstead, L. I., under the direction of David Pincus, deals with the subject of shoes, and employs a cast of performers, to give graphic force to the product's salient features. It will be televised at Bloomingdale's for an indefinite period beginning this week. According to present plans the films will be presented in other leading department stores throughout the country.

A teletopic short subject called "Every Boy's Dream" was filmed last week on the New York Central's "Pacemaker," as the train made its usual run from New York to Chicago. The film, running about 10 minutes, will be televised September 22nd. Making the trip were Roy Meredith, camera man, and two models.

Professional baseball will be televised for the first time on Saturday, when the double header between the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Cincinnati Reds will be televised over NBC's station, W2XBS.

NBC's Plans

Max Gordon, consultant on plays for NBC, has lined up a number of plays and musicals for television programs beginning in the fall. He is continuing negotiations in Hollywood. This heralds NBC's plans to present more live talent shows from its studios and depend less on films in the future. In the three months that the network has been providing public television, it has determined that outdoor on-the-spot pick-ups are the most popular, with stage plays second in the viewers' appeal.

At present the programs are costing NBC about $2,000 a week, in addition to production and technical cost of about $5,000 weekly. NBC has a staff of 75 persons producing 10 hours of television a week while the British Broadcasting Company requires 450 persons to produce 21 hours weekly. The British staff includes a 20-piece orchestra.

Clarence W. Farrier, television coordinator for NBC, says that the network has a sufficient supply of foreign and independent companies' films to assure a feature a week indefinitely.

The impasse on a product supply from the major film companies continues, however, and there have been no recent negotiations between NBC and the Hays office television committee.

Farnsworth Meeting

Predictions that television receiving sets will be selling in volume by Christmas, were made this week by radio dealers attending the meeting and display of the new Farnsworth radio, radio-phonograph and television sets at the Park Central Hotel in New York.

The feature of the exhibit was the new Farnsworth television receiving set, which incorporates developments of Philo T. Farnsworth, inventor of electronic television.

Ernest H. Vogel, vice-president in charge of operations for the company, said that within a year television programs will be emanating from 10 to 12 major points in the country. He also expressed the belief that the desired goal of the cheaper sets may also be achieved within a year and the combination should bring about a sharp spurt in sales. The company plans to inaugurate an extensive advertising program Labor Day week.

Television Network

The first television network in America, it is understood, will start operating in the fall when RCA's Empire State Building station and General Electric's Schenectady station are linked. Engineers have been working on the plan and the first link of the expected network will probably be set by November.

General Electric is expected to feed outdoor programs to the New York station, with NBC talent expected to feed General Electric with live talent and film shows.

John E. Otterson's Radio Wire Television

OTTERSON UNIT LEASES SPACE

Plans for expanding the facilities of the Radio Wire Television Corporation of America were announced this week when the company leased two floors in 250 West 57th Street, New York. The company, formed recently by the merger of interests in radio, television and wire broadcasting, will have 15,000 square feet for executive headquarters for the parent concern and its subsidiaries.

The two floors formerly housed Electrical Research Products, Inc., which was at one time headed by John E. Otterson, president of the new corporation. Mr. Otterson was also, at one time, president of Paramount.

Mr. Otterson said the company planned to open branches in major cities and expected to increase the number of its employees from 600 to 2,000 by the end of the year.

SEASON PROSPECTS IN CHICAGO FOUND BRIGHT

Independents Hopeful for Decision in Trust Suit Before They Make New Film Deals

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH in Chicago

Prospects for a busy season loom brightly in Chicago as theatre business starts on the upgrade in both Loop and neighborhood houses. The reopening of two Loop first-run theatres, the RKO-Palace and the Balaban & Katz United Artists, started the upward trend in the Loop. Both houses had been dark throughout the summer due to a shortage of suitable product. With the new season's product in the offing and a number of excellent pictures of this vear's release on hand both houses are ready for a busy fall and winter.

Deals for film for their Loop theatres have been completed by B&K for 1939-'40 with all but a few independent companies whose product will be spot booked as usual.

Neighborhoods' Business

Neighborhood theatres report business improving at the present time and look for a good fall. Product deals for the coming season's product which is usually released in the independent theatres about December 1st, are being delayed as usual. This holding back in buying is customary in Chicago where the independents usually wait until the last possible minute to sign up deals. This year they are expected to delay their buying even longer than before. The reason for this is the effect any decisions of lawsuits now pending, regarding local film problems, may have on the local clearance setup.

Two important legal controversies are now before the federal courts here. One is a suit filed by the Government against the major companies and Balaban & Katz, charging violation of a Consent Decree handed down here in 1932. Trial of this suit will continue September 5th, before Edgar Eldredge, master in chancery. The other suit is one filed by 89 independent exhibitors against the same parties as the Government suit. This suit comes up for hearing before Federal Judge James Wilkerson late in September. Several other suits are also pending but the aforementioned are the most important.

Independent exhibitors are hopeful that the Government suit will be decided by the time they have to make new film deals. They expect a victory that will bring about a change in the clearance system here.

May Seek Council Action

In an attempt to stop double features in Chicago it is learned that the independent exhibitors will try to get the city council to pass an ordinance prohibiting the showing of duals here. Jack Kirsch, Allied leader, said that it was not unlikely that the independents would ask that some ruling be made by the city aldermen that would stop duals. Kirsch said that 95 per cent of the independent theatremen are in favor of going to a single feature policy. The B&K circuit is the only group that desires doubles it is reported but as they are, so to speak, in the driver's seat, chances for them changing their policy, unless forced to, is remote indeed.

The latest report along film row regarding new legal entanglements is that Jones, Linick and Schaeffer, operators of the Oriental theatre and others, will start suit against the major companies in an attempt to get better product for this theatre. At present the Oriental is in direct competition with the B & K State-Lake. Both houses show "B" product and offer stage shows at a top price of 55 cents. The State-Lake has first choice of the "B" product it is said and the Oriental to compete offers double features and oft times plays "A" product in "C" week of release. Aaron Jones, Sr., is reported holding off legal action until the exact stand the film companies will take regarding product, is known.

Operators Union Pact

The immediate problem before Chicago film men is a new agreement with the operators union. Negotiations for a new contract are to get underway within a week or ten days. Both the operators and the theatremen are non-commital regarding the demands they will make when the new contract is discussed. Insiders feel that the agreement will be similar to the one now in force as conditions are much the same as when the present deal was signed.

License fees for the smaller theatres have been reduced for the July 1st-December 31st period, according to Mr. Kirsch, who was responsible for the reduction. Hereafter theatres seating a maximum of 350 will pay only $175 instead of $200 and theatres seating 750 maximum, will pay $275 instead of the $350 asked previously. This reduction affects theatres in the 25c admission class of which there are about 75 in this territory.

WALKER PRAISES RECENT PICTURES

Frank C. Walker, president of Comerford Theatres, Inc., in a letter to the managers of the 140 theatres comprising the Comerford circuit writes:

"The reviewing committee of the home office has just finished previewing a number of motion pictures which have recently been completed in the studios. These pictures are to be shown in your theatres at an early date.

"It is the consensus of opinion of the board that Hollywood has again demonstrated its ability to improve its standards each year. We are all most enthusiastic about the fine productions that are coming to us."

Preferences Given In Television Poll

Corporation of America may possibly form a second television network, using a form of wired radio.

RCA engineers, following a long period of experimentation in the company's Camden, N. J., laboratories, are reported to have developed a projector-iconoscope machine by means of which 16 mm. films can be utilized for television programs.

Editor & Publisher, newspaper trade journal, is presenting a series of articles analyzing the possible effect of television upon newspaper advertising, the present status of television as regards possible number of station, licenses issued or applied for; reception area; future cost of receiving sets, etc. In addition the articles tell the probable cost of equipping a one kilowatt television station, yearly cost of operation, and probable sale price per hour of television time.

Engineers' Institute

Television Engineers' Institute of America is being organized as a national, technical organization to embrace both television and facsimile. Offices will be maintained in New York, Hollywood and Washington. George H. Seward, president of the Hollywood Television Society, is the organizer of the new group. Local sections will be authorized in any state or locality where the active, fellowman honorary membership exceed 20. Membership applications include a pledge of allegianec to the United States.

WOR Seeks License

Station WOR has applied to the Federal Communications Commission for permission to construct a television station in New York City. The station is to be located atop a skyscraper and will operate in the 84 to 90 megacycle band with a 1,000 watt transmitter. If granted, WOR will have the third television station in that city. The policy, according to Alfred J. McCosker, president, will emphasize educational telecasts and spot news coverage. Films will be used if available.

Radio Electronic Television Corporation has been formed at Dover, Del., to engage in the business of communications by wire. The company listed a capital of $2,000,000 par $1. The incorporators are Edward Hughes, Vincent W. Westrup and H. A. Gaffor of New York City.

Ian C. Javal, commercial director of the Baird Television Corporation, sailed for England last week on business in connection with new developments. He will return to New York in late fall. The large screen television theatre built in the offices of the company at 1600 Broadway for demonstration purposes continues in operation in charge of the British engineers who came to this country four months ago with Mr. Javal.

An early advance in television projection in theatres is forecast from London by Captain A. G. D. West of Baird Television, who says that very soon it will be possible to project television images to the theatre's screen from the projection booth, eliminating the necessity for a special staff to operate equipment located in the body of the theatre.

Baird television installations in GB theatres in England will approximate 50 by the end of 1940. The estimate is based on the assumption that the British Broadcasting Company will erect transmitters in Manchester and Birmingham.

Set Bolton Week

The Managers of the Golden State Theatre Circuit (East Bay Division), Oakland, Cal., have set aside the final week of a 13 week Handicap Drive as the David J. Bolton week. Mr. Bolton is division manager.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

TIME was when motion picture producers of the day received some pretty tall stories from persons in the islands who tried to get free transportation to Hollywood and a job in the movies as a "genius" in acting, writing, and even directing. After persistent discouragement over long years, Hollywood now is pretty free of those pests. But radio isn't, and it deserves them right.

Over at Columbia Broadcasting headquarters, they heard from a man in Davenport, Iowa, who related he was in a hurry one Saturday night to get the cows milked and go to town to a dance. He was going great guns at his milking task on the last cow, he wrote, when the beast turned her head toward him, focused reproachful bovine eyes and said: "Easy, there, pardner. That dance can wait."

The man wrote Gabriel Heatter that he'd be glad to come to New York with "Adeleine," the cow, to appear on "We, the People" one of these Tuesday nights. He was sure he could get Adeleine to talk again.

The lure of free transportation to New York to appear on the air inspires tall stories from all over the country. One of the tallest tales to come in recently under the guise of sober fact was from a man in Salina, Kansas. About a year ago, when his elderly uncle died, the man expected to fall heir to a fortune. Under probate, however, the fortune failed to materialize and the correspondent inherited only the pair of pants which his uncle had worn every Sunday for the last 20 years.

The other day, wrote the Salina man, he decided to wear the pants to church, where he was to meet his wife after her Sunday school class. The plants fit very well and the man felt they added to his appearance as he walked down the street. After walking two blocks, however, he said he found that he couldn't turn the corner to the church. The pants refused to budge that way.

Instead, they walked him in the opposite direction, down an alley and through the back entrance to a saloon. There, one trouser leg lifted his right leg up to the rail and could not be moved from this position until the man had drunk five glasses of whiskey neat. Careful inquiry, the man wrote, revealed the fact that for 20 years each Sunday, his uncle had come to this same bar and had never more and never less than five drinks.

It's a curious thing, but plenty of people who write say they have been awakened in the middle of the night by well known historical figures who just walked into the room for a heart-to-heart chat and then walked out again.

A young lady out in Carmel, California, says she was troubled at first by a series of nocturnal calls by Henry VIII.

"I couldn't help remembering," she wrote, "what happened to all those wives."

But historians will be glad to know that Henry has changed a lot since he died. The young person in Carmel finds him a kindly, lonely old man with an interest in rock gardening.

The authorities out eastern Washington way have requested Robert C. Lee to kindly close his theatres at Kettle Falls and at Ichelium and to keep them closed for the next three years on account of their wanting to flood those places with the backwater from Coulee Dam.

South Carolina has a law forbidding any person from going to church with a revolver in his pocket. But apparently it's okay to carry a "gat" to your favorite movie.

A very long and very detailed explanation of all of the stunts put on to exploit "The Wizard of Oz" for its opening in New York, as reported by the Loew office to the press, goes over Jordan's Bank and crosses the bar to the Stygian Shore for the closing remark: "No movie stunt since Valentino's funeral has caused such intense excitement among the movie fans in New York."

Resolutions protesting against pictures depicting a Union soldier as a thief, a libertine and a marauder were adopted by five organizations affiliated with the Ohio G. A. R. in convention in Columbus, and Hollywood producers were asked to interview Union veterans in order that "the screen will show truthful and not false history." The protests charged that "Gone with the Wind" showed Scarlett O'Hara killing a Union soldier on the stairway of her home. Reason for the protest: Two veterans attending the convention declared they "had never heard of such an incident," although they had marched with Sherman to the sea.

That Burrelle Press Clipping Bureau, which reads 5,000 magazines and newspapers every day from which they clip items ordered, at a nickel a clip, for Paramount, RKO and other film companies and film stars, and others, is going to do the same with radio, listening to the nation's radio stations 24 hours a day to hear what the air waves are saying about you and you and you, for a nickel a listen.

And now that Mr. Thurman Wesley Arnold, the 48-year-old Yale law professor lawyer for Uncle Sam seems to be really serious in saying a word or two, or three on how the big film companies should conduct their motion picture relations with exhibitors and the public, the company heads might look into that little book Mr. Arnold wrote a few years back, entitled "The Folklore of Capitalism."

Mr. Arnold in serving in the Attorney General's office on trust prosecutions of "big business," is really on a leave of absence from Yale University. But there seems to be no immediate prospect of his returning to Yale for a while.

He appears to have liked law in the rough down through many years, even acting as Judge Advocate General of the National Guard of his native cowboy-riding country of Wyoming. In the World War, he was a first lieutenant in the Field Artillery.

MRS. Edna Morss Allin Elliott, who mentioned two comparative strangers, a New York Roxy Theatre floor manager and a Music Hall dancer in her will, left an estate valued at $409,680, when she died September 23, 1938, an accounting filed in Surrogates Court this week revealed.

The former Roxy employe, William J. Reilly, received $141,439 as his bequest, and the dancer, Mrs. Rosalie Spatcher Kniskern, was left stocks, bonds and jewelry valued at $55,784.

Mrs. Elliott, a widow, was 70 when she died.

Reilly, who is 41, was doorman at the Roxy when he first noticed the little old lady who used to stand in line to get into the theatre. He frequently moved her to the front of the line, and Mrs. Elliott remembered this when it came time to make her will.

At the Music Hall Mrs. Elliott became acquainted with Miss Spatcher, one of the dancers, who frequently invited her backstage and introduced her to the other performers.

Charles W. Griswold, managing the little Garden theatre out in Paterson, N. J., sat in his office the other afternoon with a faraway look in his eyes and brooded to newspaper men over what it probably had cost him for failing to practice what he preached—courtesy.

Seems that when the widow Elliott, who left $141,000 to Bill Reilly for his courtesies to her while he served as an usher at New York's Roxy theatre, started to visit the house, Mr. Griswold was house manager. She never missed a change of program, and after each performance sought out Griswold to engage in long and tedious conversation over the quality of the show. Mr. Griswold finally assigned Usher Reilly to care for Mrs. Elliott, ducked her himself whenever he saw her approach.

The other day, in order to have himself identified so he could get his inheritance, Mr. Reilly, the former usher, had Mr. Griswold, his former boss, sign an affidavit in Surrogate's Court swearing that he knew Mrs. Elliott when he managed the Roxy, and "rather than have her seek me out and engage me in tiresome conversation, I had Reilly watch for her and engage her in conversation."

Out there in dry Kansas they were praying for rain the other day, as usual, and T. H. Slothowers, exhibitor, like all good natives, joined the others for the good effect it would have on the crops and thus on business. When it finally did rain, it rained so hard that the seats in Mr. Slothowers' new Sandra theatre were submerged to the hilt.

The result of the fright which Orson Welles gave half the Jersey countryside when, in a play broadcast on that Sunday evening, he shouted into a radio microphone that men and machines had invaded the earth from Mars and were killing thousands at a clip, apparently was no detriment to the press book copy writer of Columbia Pictures who, setting down exploitation stunts for "Coast Guard," advised exhibitors to rush to the air with a spot announcement telling: "Flood Swamps New England! Coast Guard rushes aid!" and another, "Cyclone hits Southern states" and a third, "Ship cracks up on iceberg!"—the idea, of course, being to tie in the title of the film and the showing later.

RKO and Loew's Open Campaigns For New Season

The motion picture's "Golden Jubilee" observance, due for September and October, got off to a good start this week, with RKO and Loew theatres participating even at this early date, and scores of independents and smaller circuits planning on a quick start. One of the most elaborate campaigns completed to date is that of the Schine Circuit for its 150 theatres in the east, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on August 19th, page 59. The Schines are going to sell the industry, first as an institution, secondly, for its pictures current.

RKO Circuit Lays Plans

A celebration within a celebration will mark RKO Theatres' observance of the 50th anniversary of motion pictures. Having adopted "RKO's Golden Jubilee Year of Hits" as expressive of the type of shows to be presented during the 1939-40 season, RKO Theatres have been bedecked with gay new banners, pennants, streamers and other festive trimmings bearing this inscription.

"May I congratulate you and Loew's Theatres on the opening of your 1940 greater motion picture season," wrote Governor John W. Bricker in a letter to Russell A. Bovim, manager of Loew's Ohio, Columbus, Ohio. "May I express to you at this season my appreciation of the important place that the motion picture industry holds in our life today. May your entertainment be the best and your attendance high," added the Governor.

The Ohio, which has been playing a double feature policy, is currently playing "The Wizard of Oz" on a single bill.

Loew-Poli's "New Movie Season" annual cavalcade will this year be in cooperation with Crosley cars in a widespread attention-getting event including 14 Loew New England houses, Harry F. Shaw, division manager and Lou Brown, publicity chief, announced at New Haven. Ten pastel-colored, specially-built cars will start from Boston, where the Governor will fire the opening shot on September 7th. Loew's State and Orpheum Theatres will participate in the parade, ballyhoo, new product.

The caravan will move to Worcester, Providence, Springfield, Hartford, Meriden and Waterbury, New Haven, Bridgeport, and finally the New York World's Fair, where it will have a windup party with Grover Whalen and officials of the Crosley company participating on September 16th. In each town, theatres and managers will participate, using every conceivable idea for press and merchant cooperation, decoration, and ballyhoo.

Each car will be filled with college girls, chosen from the schools of the state, and attired in collegiate costumes.

In Boston, activities will be handled by H. M. Addison, division manager, and Joseph DiPesa, publicity chief. The idea of giving the "new movie season" a sendoff with plenty of attention, was originated by Harry Shaw four years ago, and has each year been executed in novel manner.

This is the first season to include Boston and Providence houses. The 50th jubilee of motion pictures will also be incorporated.

The Omaha Variety Club has named Leo Doty, United Artists office manager, and Meyer Stern of Capitol Pictures as directors. They succeeded Roy Palmquist and Earle Perkins, transferred elsewhere.

BOOK REVIEW

APPLIED ACOUSTICS, by Harry F. Olson and Frank Massa. Second Edition. P. Blakiston's Son & Company Philadelphia. 478 pp. and Index. 6 x 8½ inches.

This is a revision of a work originally published in 1934, since when it has been an important reference book for engineers dealing with the problems of sound transmission systems.

Beginning with the derivation of the general equations for the propagation of sound in three dimensions, the revised text leads into an analysis of the electrical, mechanical and acoustical elements of sound systems and covers in detail the design, function and performance of the microphones and loudspeakers used today. An entirely new chapter has been added on horn type loudspeakers, in which the characteristics of horns are compared and practical considerations relative to their design are discussed.

The chapter on microphones has been extensively revised, while these elements of the sound system are dealt with concisely and clearly in other chapters devoted to architectural and physiological acoustics and to acoustical applications.

Considerable material pertaining to new developments make the present text a definitely improved reference work for contemporary sound engineering practice. Aside from its value to the engineer, the book should prove exceedingly helpful to the theatre manager or projectionist who desires to know more about the functioning of sound transmission and reproducing systems.

Sees New Product Better Than Ever

S. Charles Einfeld, publicity and advertising director for Warner Brothers, arrived in New York this week for a two weeks' visit at the home office. Mr. Einfeld said that Hollywood's 1939-'40 product from all studios will be superior to any other season in quality, promotional value and entertainment. He said that production at the Warner studio is farther ahead for the new season than it has ever been at this time of the year. Mr. Einfeld said that the studio has 20 completed features.

His visit to the home office is to complete campaigns on new season releases, including "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex," "On Your Toes," "Dust Be My Destiny" and "A Child Is Born." The first named picture will have an elaborate premiere in London, Mr. Einfeld said, and the film will be backed by a $250,000 national publicity and advertising campaign in the United States, as will "On Your Toes."

Mickey and Judy Take $3,000,000 'Oz' to Broadway

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer placed its $3,000,000 "The Wizard of Oz," on Broadway, last Thursday, along with personal appearances by their young Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland, the picture riding into the Capitol theatre after Metro had Mickey and Judy singing-and-swinging around New York for a week in advance. Judy appears in the picture, Mickey doesn't.

The combination, in its first week, ending Wednesday, grossed some $70,000, according to the Loew theatre department, with the Metro publicity department adding that the intake ran 167 per cent over normal for the house, adding that its "Oz" on the screen, with the juvenile singing-and-swinging artists on the stage, ran ahead of the film appearances of such earlier Metro productions as "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Anna Christie," "Flesh and the Devil" and other productions.

The build-up by Metro for the Capitol started with the round-up of hundreds of kids from the city's streets, gathered in contests at 70 Loew New York houses, to greet the Rooney-Garland pair on their arrival at Grand Central Station, taking all over to the swanky Waldorf Astoria Hotel for luncheon, where previously informed newspaper photographers and MGM newsreel cameramen turned their lenses on Mickey swinging with the boy guests and Judy doing likewise with the girls. At the height of all of the newspaper attention, in print and pictures, "Wizard of Oz" bowed in the next day at the Capitol.

The show sold at the rate of about 40,000 tickets a day, on the average, for the seven performances daily and nine on Saturday and Sunday.

The Metro-Goldwyn press department stated that in reports received from 25 of the first key city openings of the picture, it averaged 58 per cent above normal grosses, MGM citing the Palace, Indianapolis, business as 102 per cent over normal; the Chinese, Los Angeles, 85 per cent; State, Los Angeles, 49; Orpheum, Denver, 82; State, Norfolk, 73; Loew's, Louisville, 70; Loew's, Akron, 60; Valentine, Toledo, 57; Colonial, Reading, 57; Loew's, Rochester, 56; Midland, Kansas City, 64; Loew's, Dayton, 56; State, St. Louis, 41; Grand, Atlanta, 48; State, Houston, 41; Century, Baltimore, 46; Regent, Harrisburg, 42; State, Spokane, 75; Loew's, Wilmington, 74; Boyd, Philadelphia, 37; Loew's, Canton, 34; Palace, Albany, 35; State, Syracuse, 37; State, Memphis, 35, and Warfield, San Francisco, 38 per cent.

Lopert Returns to New York

I. E. Lopert, president of Pax Films, returned to New York this week from a five-week business and pleasure trip to Hollywood. He is preparing a national campaign on "The End of a Day," a French picture scheduled to have its American premiere at the Filmarte theatre, New York, September 11th.

"U" SENDS GLORIA BACK TO THE MINES A STAR

Home Town Brings Out the Cannon and Banners for Schoolgirl Who Made Good

Scranton, Pa., industrial city of anthracite mines and silk mills, home of Frank Walker's Comerford Circuit, largest in the state, was doing right at the weekend by its little Gloria Jean, who left there eight months ago the 11-year-old daughter of Herman Schoonover, local piano salesman, and went home Thursday as a Universal star, amid the blares of brass bands and the handshakes and horseshoes (flowered) of Mayor and city fathers. One hundred newspaper critics and editors of the trade and fan press rode from New York with her.

Arc Premiere

The occasion was Scranton's first "big-time," "big-ballyhoo," arc-lighted premiere a la Hollywood—and all for a Scranton marble-shootin' youngster who seems to have made the Hollywood grade in one jump—in Universal's new "The Underpup," her first film, in which she stars. A visit to New York last December, a voice audition—paid for by Scranton miners—and Universal producer Joe Pasternack signed her on the spot, another Deanna Durbin being in mind. Universal knows well what Deanna has meant to its ledger.

Scranton's Mayor Fred Huester sent Gloria Jean Schoonover's 26 classmates ('40) from the local Alexander Hamilton public school down to New York on Monday to greet her on arriving from Hollywood. Arriving at about the same time were some 50 newspapers critics from the middle west. They were joined by 50 more from the east and with Universal studio and home office officials, the party left Thursday morning in a special train for the Scranton reception and the picture's first public showing at the Comerford Strand.

The event marked Universal's first concentrated merchandising effort since the "New Universal," and was in line with the prevailing practice of drawing public attention to product from the inlands by ballyhoo openings to which radio and the press are invited.

The picture is reviewed on page 50.

Cannon and Parades

If Scranton's trading area of half-a-million were not aware that Gloria Jean returned home and attended the opening of her first screen appearance, it was not the fault of Universal's press agents, nor the Comerford Theatres.

There was plenty of the usual publicity form, and much more to support it.

Cannon boomed near the theatre to signal the arrival of Gloria.

Joe Pasternack made the trip from Hollywood to appear with Gloria.

Mayor Huester lined up the city's most prominent businessmen, miners, bankers and society heads to greet Gloria in a formal program prior to the opening.

An ice cream social for Gloria's playmates and Scranton children was attended by thousands at Western Fields, nearby.

"Hollywood setting" of lights and banners lined the streets.

Scranton's newspaper front pages were turned over to the event.

Fifteen thousand Scrantonians packed the railroad station for the train's arrival, attended by local bands.

Fireworks added to the ballyhoo, with factory and mine whistles adding to the din.

Miners constructed a "throne" made entirely of Scranton's native product, on which Gloria was crowned "Queen of Anthracite."

Thursday was proclaimed "Gloria Jean Day" by the Mayor.

Scranton saw its longest parade of floats.

Scranton's Philharmonic Orchestra played publicly the songs Gloria sang at the opening performance.

Graham McNamee was master of ceremonies.

BRITISH INSTITUTE ADDS CHAPLIN FILMS

With the addition of "The Perfect Lady", "The Rival Mashers", "Tango Tangles" and "The New Janitor", the British Film Institute now has in its National Library copies of 29 of the 34 comedies which Charles Chaplin made in the first two years of his film career.

Paramount Host to Orphans At Preview of "Star Maker"

Sixteen of the country's "most deserving" orphans were guests of Paramount at the Hollywood premiere, Monday night, of "The Star Maker." One of the children, who had been brought to the Coast on a special "dream" train, was stricken with appendicitis at Omaha.

The youngsters were brought to the Coast as guests of Linda Ware, fourteen-year-old orphan appearing in the film. Their activities included dinner at the Brown Derby, being the guests of Ray Milland and Patricia Morison, a view of the Paramount sound stages and a trip to Catalina Island, in addition to their attendance at the premier. The film was also previewed for the press Monday night in 40 cities.

"Cavell" Premiere Held At Toronto Exposition

"Nurse Edith Cavell," the first American-made motion picture to star Anna Neagle, which Herbert Wilcox produced for RKO Radio Pictures, had its world premiere at Toronto, Thursday, on the grounds of the Canadian National Exhibition, and under the combined auspices of the British Empire Section of the Toronto Board of Trade and the Motion Picture Industry. Miss Neagle and Mr. Wilcox were present.

Also scheduled to be present included Lord Tweedsmuir, governor-general of Canada and Lady Tweedsmuir; W. L. McKenzie King, prime minister of Canada; Albert Mathews, lieutenant-governor of Ontario and Mrs. Mathews; Mitchell Hepburn, prime minister of Ontario, and Mrs. Hepburn; the Mayor of Toronto nad Mrs. Day; George J. Draper, chief of police.

World's Fair Fetes Columbia's "Golden Boy"

On Wednesday, special events were arranged at the New York World's Fair in honor of William Holden, who has the title role in Columbia's "Golden Boy," which will be nationally released September 5th.

Holden, with Adolphe Menjou, who also has a starring role in "Golden Boy," will be welcomed by Fair officials in the rotunda of the Administration Building when they arrive at 11:45 a.m. At noon, the Columbia stars will be the Grand Marshals in a colorful children's parade. This will be followed by luncheon at the French Restaurant in the French Building, when Holden will be the guest of the lucky girl who won the ballot which has been held to pick the winner for this honor.

Columbia's young picture star will then make a tour of the grounds and later with Ben Bernie make an appearance in the Amusement Park. At 4 p.m. he will be presented with a scroll of the Coat of Arms of the Washington Family, by Mossmore Kendall, President General of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. Holden is a collateral descendant of George Washington.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Production Up

Production moved forward with more than recent assurance last week, 38 pictures facing the cameras as the period closed. Eight had been finished and taken to cutting rooms, but 11 took the stages to replace them.

Warners finished "20,000 Years in Sing Sing," the Warden Lawes story; "Lady Dick," which likewise has to do with crime, and "Philo Vance Returns," another in the same topical range. Columbia completed "Sundown in Helldorado," RKO Radio completed "Three Sons," Republic finished "Calling All Marines" and Universal brought in "Call a Messenger." Paramount wound up "Federal Offense."

Twentieth Century-Fox launched "The Simple Life" and Hal Roach got started on the much discussed "Of Mice and Men." Columbia started "The Man Trailer" and "Scandal Sheet," Warners commenced shooting on "State Cop," Republic gave the go signal on "Headline News" and "Missouri Raiders," while Paramount sent "Knights of the Range" and "Emergency Squad" into work. RKO-Radio started "The Marshal of Mesa City" and "Sued for Libel."

Name News

JACK CUMMINGS, producer of "Broadway Melody of 1940," has signed a new long term MGM contract.

MICHAEL HOGAN, British writer who came to Hollywood to do "Nurse Edith Cavell," and stayed on to write "Rebecca" for Selznick-International, has contracted to stay on and do "The Villa on the Hill" for Warners.

AL JOLSON, whose come-back in "Rose of Washington Square," is counted one of the season's more remarkable experiences, is to appear with Don Ameche and Nancy Kelly in the 20th Century-Fox production of "Day-Time Wife."

WILLIAM LEBARON, Paramount managing director in charge of production, has 9 pictures in production and 10 more ready for starting within 6 weeks.

GEORGE J. SCHAEFER, president of RKO-Radio, wound up a several weeks stay in Hollywood by announcing studio promotions. Joseph J. Nolan was appointed assistant to the president, after 18 years as assistant secretary of the company; Howard S. Benedict was appointed an associate producer, after 5 years in charge of studio publicity and advertising; Perry Lieber, 10 years in the department, succeeded Benedict; Bert Gilroy moved up from directing short subjects to producing features and Lou Brock was named head of the short subjects division.

LESLIE HOWARD, who served as associate director as well as star of Selznick-International's "Intermezzo," said, "Any capable actor or actress should be a valuable aide in the production of a picture. They understand story values and are familiar with the fundamentals of dramatic construction. . . . The player who associate produces has to be on the job day and night. He must be in on the preliminaries before filming is started and remain there for the editing afterward. The job might not appeal to some actors, but I believe the time will come when the majority of them will do it."

ED GRANSMAN, director of advertising for Producers Pictures, has completed arrangements for an extensive cooperative advertising campaign in which the American Gold Star Mothers and allied organizations will cooperate in behalf of "Gold Star Mothers," which will be released nationally on Armistice Day.

MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN will be seen opposite Robert Montgomery in MGM's "Busman's Honeymoon," to be produced by Victor Saville in England.

ROOSEVELT SAYS NO

After entertaining Resident Filipino Commissioner J. M. Elizalde at the Samuel Goldwyn studio, showing him a print of "The Real Glory" and discussing with him the Commissioner's objections to certain passages in the film, James Roosevelt, vice-president of the company, issued the following statement:

"Mr. Goldwyn has never produced a film designed to reflect upon the national honor of any country or race. In our considered opinion 'The Real Glory', instead of vilifying the Filipino people, glorifies them as a nation. The scenes to which objection has been made are historically accurate. We certainly do not intend to distort facts by performing a surgical operation on a picture that cost two million dollars to produce."

Pressmen who had attended Mr. Roosevelt's initial press conference, held on the morning after news of his having accepted the Goldwyn vice-presidency was made public, recalled that one persistent questioner had wanted to know what his stance would be on pictures "of controversial nature", to which he replied smilingly, "Mr. Goldwyn does't make controversial pictures."

On Wednesday Mr. Goldwyn cabled President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines that the objectionable scenes would be altered.

Judell Building

Ben Judell, president of Producers Pictures, has bought a site adjacent to Prescott, Arizona, for erection of a permanent western city to be used in making the western action pictures to be released on the company's 1939-40 program. Studio sound stages, western streets and all practical essentials of a producing setup are to be installed.

Additionally, the Prescott location will have an administration building and suitable living quarters for the production personnel, executives, players and technicians. These are being built under supervision of Peter Stewart from plans by the company's art director, Fred Preble.

Three series of westerns, each consisting of 8 pictures, will be produced at the Prescott location. The 13-year-old champion junior cowboy, Bobby Clark, will be seen as the central character of the Sagebrush Family series, the first of which, "The Sagebrush Family Goes West," is scheduled for release October 8. George Huston, singing star, will be featured in the "Tales of Billy the Kid" series, and Tim McCoy will be starred in the "frontier marshal" series.

Williams Schedules Two for Monogram

T. R. Williams, who recently became associated with Monogram as a producer, has scheduled two features of the group which he will make for the 1939-'40 season. The titles are "Heroes in Blue" and "Night Edition." Shooting is slated to start on the first production early in September.

Scott R. Dunlap, Monogram production head, was scheduled to leave Hollywood for New York Thursday to attend the regular board of directors meeting. He plans to remain in the east for several weeks after the meeting to discuss the new 1939-'40 schedule with W. Ray Johnston, president.

Set Production Deal

Jack Skirball and John Wildberg, who recently formed Knickerbocker Pictures, Inc., have closed a deal with Columbia whereby the latter will distribute three pictures to be made at Eastern Service Studios. First to go into production about October 1st will be "Angela Is 22," by Sinclair Lewis. The second will be "For All Our Lives," by Ursula Parrott. A third story by Peter Arno is being considered. The pictures will be budgeted at $400,000 each. Financing was arranged by Frank Speidel of Eastern Service.

Walter Wanger, head of the production company bearing his name, has been elected a member of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, of which Joseph M. Schenck is president.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

The Under-Pup

(Universal)

Folks, Meet Miss Gloria Jean

Showmen who can scan their screens for new stellar personalities as anxiously as does any astronomer inspect the heavens will experience a deal of delight when first they focus their house projection machines on the new and luminous personality of little Miss Gloria Jean. Although, at times, especially during certain song sequences, she will remind her audiences of a previous Pasternack prodigy, one Deanna Durbin, Gloria presents by way of her own distinct individuality a fresh, spontaneous charm, a light, lyrical and lilting vocal talent and a first rate flair for producing alternate and varied dramatic moods at variance with her years.

Gloria's screen sponsors have arranged for her debut party an assortment of entertainment moments that is well founded on sound, sensible and sure enjoyment ingredients, spiced with a touch of tears, and nutritively seasoned, as far as a healthy box office receipt chart is concerned, with gobs of youth, spirit and good, clean fun. Such a movie menu serving will leave the family trade guests with a well fed, satisfied feeling of having seen a picture cooked to their taste.

The curiously named and natured "Pip-Emma Binns" (Gloria) is winner of a free vacation at an exclusive girls' camp. The youngster, product of a zany middle-class family, begins to work her "other side of the track" influence on the club personnel. A couple, parents of one of the girls, is persuaded through the underhand plottings of "Pip-Emma" to forsake their divorce plans. The head-mistress is turned from a fussy old maid into a charming person, while her secretary and the camp's athletic director are directed onto the road of romance. That is all there is to the story but it is not so much what the plot is about that matters as how it is told. And in that distinction lies the entertainment distinction of "Pip-Emma" alias "The Under-Pup."

Nurse Edith Cavell

(RKO Radio)

Documentary Tragedy

Made-in-America by the British producer-director, Herbert Wilcox, assisted by a British production unit and starring the British favorite, Anna Neagle, this superbly appointed documentation of the case of Edith Cavell, British nurse executed by the German military in 1915, is an uncompromising indictment of the Germany of that date and of war in general. It is a glorification of the Britsh nurse and of her profession. It is outspokenly and specifically a documentary film, listing in prefatory subtitles the sources of its material, and if Britain and Germany were at war it would be a recruiting "documentary" of extraordinary quality and effectiveness. It is, rated on any basis, a demonstration of the power of the motion picture to tell a story.

In addition to Miss Neagle, who plays the title character with quiet power and cool charm, the film offers Edna May Oliver in a serious role she handles splendidly, May Robson in another, ZaSu Pitts, George Sanders, H. B. Warner and other players of unquestioned marquee significance. The screen play by Michael Hogan is a fine example of balanced effects and weighted dialogue. Merrill G. White served Mr. Wilcox proficiently as associate producer.

The picture opens with a brief preamble establishing the heroine as peacetime matron of a nursing home in Brussels but comes quickly to the German invasion in 1914 and marches steadily forward from that point, showing the ways and means by which the nurse and her associates smuggled 200 soldier refugees out of Belgium and into Holland, to her arrest, to the efforts of American authorities to intervene in her behalf, to her court martial, sentence and death.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood, to an audience composed principally of press and profession which manifested admiration.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Smart Comedy-Drama

Gregory LaCava's "Fifth Avenue Girl" is the kind of picture Rockefeller's Radio City Music Hall and John Smith's Hickory Hills Nickelodeon fill their benches with. It happens to be a dressed-up affair and to contain the smartest dialogue of the season, but it's solid entertainment of the family variety and as comprehensible to the cowboys who Saturday-night in Laramie as to the limousine trade. It's a better and cleaner comedy than the same Ginger Rogers' currently thriving "Bachelor Mother" and it probably ends forever and finally the speculation as to whether the lady was Fred Astaire's partner in all those dancing successes or vice versa.

Miss Rogers' is not the only name to entice the customers with, however, nor is her performance, fine as it is, more memorable than superbly balanced performances by distraught Walter Connolly, sophisticated Verree Teasdale, nettled Tim Holt and revolutionary James Ellison. Few casts ever assembled have done so well by their material, themselves and the exhibitor's box office.

Produced by the capable LaCava under Pandro S. Berman's princely auspices, Allan Scott's streamlined and glittering screen play sparkles from pick-up speech to tag line. It's as smart as The New Yorker is supposed to be and Time more often is, yet as broad and plain in appeal as a Saturday Evening Post serial. It tells the familiar story of the tired rich man who wins back his straying family by pretending to do some straying on his own, a story that's never had such a telling as this time.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood, to the unanimous satisfaction of press, profession and public.—W. R. W.

Crosby and a Career

The personality that is Bing Crosby always shines through whatever role he portrays. That holds true in this film although it is, within memory, the first time Crosby has undertaken a biographical role, portraying a living subject. stars and a rather famous vaudevillian to boot. The Edwards angle recedes under the pressure of Crosby's presence.

There is, to be sure, an added flavor in this Crosby film for audiences who remember when —a sort of nostalgia for the days when vaudeville was in its heyday and when the name of Proctor, portrayed here by Thurston Hall, awed the boys and girls of the footlights. The players include Louise Campbell, as "Mary," wife of "Larry Earl"; Ned Sparks, the unsmiling publicity man; Linda Ware, Laura Hope Crews, Janet Waldo and Walter Damrosch, playing himself and directing the Philharmonic Orchestra of Los Angeles.

It was produced by Charles R. Rogers and directed by Roy Del Ruth from a story by Arthur Caesar and William A. Pierce. Karl Struss was the photographer.

It is essentially a musical film combining both the old and the new in songs. "School Days," "Sunbonnet Sue," "If I Was a Millionaire," "In My Merry Oldsmobile," "I Can't Tell Why I Love You But I Do," and "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" vie with "Go Fly a Kite," "A Man and His Dream," "An Apple for the Teacher" and "Still the Bluebird Sings" in the newer order of things.

Edwards' specialty was training children. There are quite a number appearing in the film, outstanding of whom is Linda Ware, of pleasing personality and rare voice.

The rapid rise of the "Star Maker" is halted temporarily by a children's aid group but the scene shifts to radio where he starts to pioneer all over again. But that will have to remain for a sequel for the picture ends on that scene.

Reviewed at the Paramount theatre, New York, where at a preview showing the audience appeared to enjoy the performance of Crosby, the juveniles, Damrosch and the novel innovation, for a feature film, of the bouncing ball type of audience participation in the singing of "School Days."—PAUL C. MOONEY, JR.

The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes

Mystery Melodrama

The success of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" as brought to the screen by 20th Century-Fox has induced the studio to plan a series of "Sherlock Holmes" pictures, with Basil Rathbone in the role of the king of fictional detective and Nigel Bruce as "Dr. Watson." "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," taken from the William Gillette play, is the second in the series, and is the story of "Holmes'" tracking down a clever criminal who almost succeeds in making off with the Crown jewels from the Tower of London.

Outwitted by "Professor Moriarity," "Holmes" waits for him to strike again. "Moriarty" plots two murders, carries one out successfully, and succeeds in tangling "Holmes" in a series of clues while he turns to what he expects will be the greatest crime in history—the theft of the crown jewels. "Holmes" clears up the "red herring" crime in time to prevent the gem theft.

Behind Prison Gates

(Columbia)

Melodrama

Well remembered plots, like old familiar faces, are often the best bets for showman salesmanship. At least, both exhibitor and customer know what to expect from such a stylized setup. In this there are a couple of variations that shift the plot workings from the formulated jail theme grooves. The leading "pen" personality is a government man, doing a "stretch" incognito in the interest of justice. The concluding carnage is conveniently laid in a cemetery mausoleum, this being one of the most fortuitous examples in screen scribbing of fitting the place to the occasion or vice versa.

Brian Donlevy, usually pictured as being on the anti-social side of the law vs. crime imbroglios, and more recently the meanest menace that the Geste freres were forced to encounter in their latest version of Sahara suffering, performs the crusading duties of the intrepid G-Man. Jacqueline Wells is the girl in the case and has little to do except be the recipient of a sock on the jaw from the powerful fist of Donlevy and a chauffeur for his prison break. Paul Fix, Richard Fiske, George McKay and Dick Botiller are some of the gentlemen concerned in the big house doings. Charles Barton directed from an original screen play of Leslie T. White, which could serve as a glossary for underworld and penal jargon.

Donlevy gets his man after several prison breaks, a couple of rounds of fisticuffs and an almost fractured skull.

The mid-afternoon audience of fair proportions that witnessed the proceedings via the screen at the Broadway Globe Theatre seemed to be impressed by the "cops and robbers" complications.—J. F. C.

Charlie Chan at Treasure Island

Magicians and Death

Psychic research, magic tricks, murders and blackmail against a setting of the Golden Gate Exposition at San Francisco form the background for the latest in 20th Century-Fox's "Charlie Chan" series. Supporting Sidney Toler in the title role are Cesar Romero, Pauline Moore, Sen Yung, Douglas Fowley, June Gale, Douglas Dumbrille, Sally Blane, Billie Seward, Wally Vernon, Donald MacBride, Charles Halton, Trevor Bardette, Louis Jean Heydt.

The original story and the screenplay by John Larkin follow the pattern of the "Chan" series, and give an added fillip to the mystery by the injection of the legerdemain, a highly exploitable asset. Norman Foster directed and Edward Kaufman produced, under the guidance of executive producer Sol M. Wurtzer.

"Charlie Chan" sets out to probe the mysterious suicides of three persons, and traces their actions faintly to the activities of "Dr. Zodiac." After several attempts at his life, "Chan" brings all the suspects to a "house of magic" exhibit at the fair and unmasks the killer, using a mental telepathy act.

Irish Luck

(Monogram)

Comedy-Melodrama

This tightly wound little story about a bell hop with a yen for the detective industry is easily the best of the Frankie Darro series to date. Dick Purcell as the friendly officer and Mantan Moreland as the colored comic relief supplying the young star with sound support. Many a more pretentious picture has contained less all-purpose entertainment.

"Irish Luck" is the initial enterprise of Grant Withers as an associate producer and reflects a knowledge of screen values acquired in his years before the camera. It is nicely directed by Howard Bretherton from a screen play by Mary McCarthy based on a story by Charles Molyneix Brown.

Full Confession

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama

Something of a staple among highly speculative stories concerning the seal of the confessional is the one about the Catholic priest to whom a murderer confesses his guilt in the sanctuary of the confessional and thereafter defies the priest to violate his sacred vows even to save an innocent man from execution for the crime. This is a telling of that story with Victor McLaglen as the murderer and Joseph Calleia as the priest. It gets under way slowly, awkwardly, but generates considerable tension toward the end.

Robert Sisk produced the film for the Lee Marcus side of the RKO Radio schedule with Jerry Cady and Leo Birimski credited for screen play and story. Sally Eilers plays a romantic role adequately but the interest is held principally by Messrs. McLaglen and Calleia.

Exile Express

(Grand National)

Melodrama

"Exile Express" tells the story of a girl alien who desires to become a citizen of the United States. Her employer is a chemist who has concocted a powerful drug that would kill all plant life. An agent of a foreign government is interested in obtaining the formula. The doctor is slain and the girl, suspected of being implicated in the murder, is ordered to be deported. Her adventures on the train east, her escape and subsequent developments all come under the heading of melodrama with romance playing an important part.

The film never quite makes up its mind whether to attack the subject seriously or comically. It fluctuates from one mood to the other. Anna Sten, as the alien, is unbending in her dramatic portrayal except for one rather unusual scene when, to cover her identity, she goes into the now familiar routine of the jitterbug. The other players are more relaxed and approach their roles with less intensity so that there is a noticeable contrast.

The cast contains many notable character actors in support of Miss Sten and Alan Marshal, the newspaper reporter, who succeeds in clearing her of implication in the chemist's death. It includes Jerome Cowan, Jed Prouty, Walter Catlett, Stanley Fields, Irving Pichel, Harry Davenport, Addison Richards, Etienne Girardot and Vince Barnett. The film was produced for Grand National by Eugene Frenke and directed by Otis Garrett.

The film gets its title from the west coast train, whose passengers are all exiles bound for Ellis Island and deportation. "Steve," on the train to report the deportation of a noted criminal, meets "Nadine." When "Nadine" escapes from the train he follows her. "Steve" marries "Nadine," but she leaves him when she finds an article in the newspaper with his byline telling of her escape. He finds her with "Paul Brandt," a foreign agent, who unknown to "Nadine" is the murderer and the cause of her troubles. "Steve" exposes the agent, who is arrested. "Nadine" is freed.

Smuggled Cargo

(Republic)

Melodrama

The crops of the orange growers of California are occasionally threatened by freezing weather, although native sons of the state probably would deny it. Republic has taken that theme and built a melodrama around it. The film is essentially one of action rather than one concerned with the social question involved. However, it does delve into the mass psychology problem of an innocent man, accused of murder, and a mob storming prison doors intent on a hanging.

The original screen play is the work of Michael Jacoby and Earl Felton. The cast is headed by Barry MacKay and Rochelle Hudson and boasts of well known character actors in supporting roles including George Barbier, Ralph Morgan and Cliff Edwards. John H. Auer was both associate producer and director of the picture.

The Santa Eleana Orange Growers' Association faced with the prospect of frozen crops delegate "Gerry" to tap the emergency oil tank of the association in order to keep the smudge pots burning. When "Gerry" and his constant companion "Professor" reach the tank it is in flames. They seek oil from another grower, "Masterson," who is opposed to the association. When refused, "Gerry" takes the oil by force. En route back their car breaks down. They flag a passing car and when it stops force the occupants, "Franklin," a big eastern citrus buyer, and his daughter "Marian" out of the car and use it to haul the oil.

"Franklin," partly because of that incident, signs a contract with "Masterson," who is to deliver the oranges. The association turns down "Masterson's" offer for their oranges and he fulfills the contract by delivering contraband oranges to "Franklin." The association members, faced with ruin, blame "Gerry's" father, "Mr. Clayton," head of the association, for their predicament. "Clayton" accuses "Masterson" of dirty play and in a scuffle "Masterson" is killed by one of his own men. "Clayton" is accused of the murder and is about to be mobbed when "Franklin" arrives to clear "Clayton" of any conspiracy against the growers. The real murderer is caught and confesses.

Song of the Street

(Mayer-Burstyn)

"Dead End—Lower Depths"

American exhibition of this French importation should be able to draw some interested inspection from two sectors of this country's audiences. The resemblance of the foreign film to "Dead End" and "The Lower Depths" is promotional material that may stimulate customer curiosity from patrons with good memories and an inclination to draw comparisons from similar screen scenarios.

The present production is a mature and earnest attempt to treat the subject of adverse environment on the moulding of human character. Group acting, musical scoring and lighting effects offer considerable assistance in the matter of mood creation. The film suffers, however, from a conclusion that seems hurried and unexplicable.

"Jacques" is an unemployed youth of Paris, who rather than become a wage slave joins a band of street hoodlums in their petty pilferings. Branching out from minor snatchings, the gang robs a rich widow. The death of the victim results in "Jacques" being apprehended by the law. Faulty editing confuses the point of his penalty. It would seem that on the plea of his mother that she tailed in her duty to her son, the youth is set free and the finale finds him rehabilitated and on the road to being a law abiding citizen through the therapeutic treatment of menial labor.

Conspiracy

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama

This is a slam-bang little melodrama about an American radio operator who gets into a lot of trouble in a meticulously unidentified foreign country run by secret police who make no secret of their sinister designs. Just why they are so intent upon killing the young man and his associates remains a carefully guarded secret from the audience, however, at disastrous cost to the enterprise.

Allan Lane is handsomely proficient as the hero who never finds out what all the shooting is for and Linda Hayes, hiding behind a gutteral accent, satisfies the eye. Robert Barrat and Charley Foy have the other two principal roles.

Cliff Reid produced the picture with Lew Landers directing and both may have had in mind all the serials ever produced. The story gets so lost in midpicture that the preview audience began laughing at the villains, from which point on there was no hope.

The Fighting Gringo

(RKO-Radio)

Western

This riding-shooting demonstration is about par for the George O'Brien course. It is a story about a plot to steal a ranch and about the brawny son of the plains who makes it his business to see that right is done by the rightful and justice is meted out to the covetous. This time there is somewhat more riding than shooting, although plenty of that, and the location is the old West in the neighborhood of the Mexican border.

Lupita Tovar is the new young lady of the roving hero's heart in this adventure and William Royle is the sinister foreman of the rancho saved for her father. The story is an original by Oliver Drake, who also wrote the screen play, and Bert Gilroy produced the film with David Howard directing. There's a spot of fiesta dancing by way of interlude and to allow the plot to cool.

Mr. O'Brien gets the usual adequate opportunity to whip a dozen bad men at a time, but peace is finally achieved by sidearms.

Seeing Red

(Vitaphone)

Broadway Brevity

What picayune plot and setting there are in this round from the Broadway Brevities corner serve as a fortuitous peg on which to hang the mimicry talents of Red Skelton and a line of vaudeville and radio acts. Red is fired by his boss and he warns his ex-employer that he will haunt him. On a visit to a night club spot, the boss either has a case of double vision or a hangover for he begins to see Red all over the place in various disguises, such as a doorman, hat check boy, waiter and master of ceremonies. In the meantime, on the establishment's stage there is paraded a comic dance act in the person of Harris and Shore, a vocal contribution by the Merry Macs of radio fame, a tap dance routine from Louis Da Pron and a bag of clown antics by A. Robins. Mr. Skelton obliges with some witty remarks and a bit of impersonations covering the subjects of waiting room sitters, corn on the cob chewers and a portrait of a young lady dressing for the day. The last named piece of imitative business borders in spots on the side of vulgarity.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Conquering the Colorado

Adventure of a Newsreel Cameraman

There is little to this subject, at first glance, except that a gentleman by the name of "Buzz Holmstrom," a filling station operator from Coquille, Ore., gets into his home-built boat and makes his way eleven hundred miles down a river. But, when one learns that the watery course was the treacherous rapids of the Colorado River and that "Buzz," according to the introduction, is the only man known to have navigated this passage alone in a home made craft, then the subject becomes exciting and exceptional. Along the route, the intrepid oarsman is accompanied by a wise camera. The shots of the boat being propelled through the rapids at a dizzy rate of speed, past half submerged rocks and through sucking currents on the other side, offer the audience a picture that is one of one hundred per cent thrills.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Terry-Toon

A midget sized saga of the golden west, where men are men and women are downright glad of it, is stirred up in this cartoon burlesque version from the Terry-Toon field. "Belle," the good girl, is a chanteuse in a cow town beer garden and her popularity with the local boys wins her the unsolicited attention of "Bad Bill," the neighborhood's "bad guy." The "gal" is rescued by an unidentified but sterling specimen of western manhood and his Indian brave companion, "Dodo." With the fast pen point business of furious riding, gun play and fisticuffs, the kiddie trade, not too exacting, and the western fans may be able to find some amusement.—Running time, seven minutes.

Kennel Kings

(RKO Pathe)

Sportscope

There is enough canine pulchritude and royalty displayed in this "doggy" beauty contest to win the attention of any audience. The parade of the pups takes place at the swank Morris-Essex dog show, a period and place as famous in its line as the "Miss America" searches at Atlantic City. The contestants—the four legged ones, that is—range from the cute and minute Chihuahua specimens to the regal grandeur of the Great Dane. Excellent camera treatment compliments the innate regality of the contestants. Naturally, the material makes for a "natural" subject of the "pushover" variety for the canine inclined customer and interest for the rest of the gathering.—Running time, nine minutes.

Arabs with Dirty Fezzes

(Universal)

Lantz Cartune

The Lantz Cartune this time has an African locale. The little mouse, interest aroused by the sight of an old gun, asks his grandfather to tell him the story connected with it. He hears of the daring adventures his grandfather experienced as a boy in the foreign legion. While he is talking the events are shown on the screen until the gun is discharged by accident and the grandfather is shown fleeing to the hills.—Running time, seven minutes.

There Goes Rusty

(Columbia)

News World of Sport

Telling the story of the racing greyhound; its birth, upbringing, early and finished training, its entrance into racing; its participation in, and winning of, a race. Photography and narration are excellent. Locale is Miami, with climactic scene at Miami Beach Kennel Clubs.—running time, 10 minutes.

One Day Stand

Vitaphone Variety

A twenty-hour hour period from the time table diary of a traveling circus is reported competently and completely for the edification and education of big top fans from all ages, sexes and classes. The visit begins with the arrival of the circus train. Then come views of the carnival's unloading and preparatory steps for the erection of the tent. A colorful and reminiscent sequence depicts the circus parade down the town's main street, which will awaken in many an adult memory similar scenes for a long ago childhood. The climax of the period comes with the opening performance and an exciting display of some of the performers, especially the famed lion tamer, Clyde Beatty. The show closes and the circus folk, like the Arabs, fold their tents and noisily by way of a train steal away to the next spot for their one day stand.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Artie Shaw's Class in Swing

(Paramount)

Swing Music

Artie Shaw conducts a class in the art of producing swing music. Each section is brought before the audience and their function is described. To wind up the short and to show the results of each section Artie swings as "I Have Eyes," "Shoot the Licker to Me John Boy," "Nightmare" and "Hold Your Hat." Helen Forrest vocalizes for the orchestra. Credit should be given to Director Leslie Roush for his excellent handling of the film.—Running time, 10 minutes.

It's the Natural Thing to Do

(Paramount)

Popeye Cartoon

Olive Oyl decides to become a real lady in Paramount's latest Popeye cartoon. She persuades Popeye and Bluto turn over a new leaf and act like gentlemen. Through the course of an evening's tete-a-tete the three get very bored with the high toned actions of each other and revert to their favorite indoor sport of wrecking the house and themselves. Popeye, of course, has the opportunity to eat his spinach for extra strength.—Running time, 7 minutes.

4,000 Gifts of the Forest

(U. S. Forest Service)

Pageant of Pulp

A parade of the benefits of the woodlands to mankind is presented for the approval and education of Mr. and Mrs. John Public and their Public offspring in this pastoral pageantry of pulp under the pedagogical auspices of the United States Forest Service. Through the fanciful medium of a festival held under the allegorical personage of King Douglas the Fir, there comes a flotilla of floats dressed to depict the various blessings derived from the timberlands. The range of the "4,000 gifts" run from material for home construction to the manufacture of synethetic goods for milady's wardrobe. The concluding sequences offer some picturesque shots of wooded and watered countryside. Comparisons will inevitably be made between the present contribution and previous governmental film efforts, particularly the memorably pictorial "The River." It must be admitted that in this respect that the paen of praise sounded for the glories of the woods is not equal to the drama, picturesqueness, poetry and workmanlike construction of the water work. The project was shot under the direction of Carl Stearns Clancy, who also contributed the editorial script, in the region of Mt. Baker National Park. The footage is in Dufaycolor.

Screening of the subject is set for the World's Fair with the prospect of future exhibition in regular run theatres.—Running time, two reels.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Reopening Studios

A new production program in conjunction with General Film Distributors and Twentieth Century Productions has been announced by Gaumont-British-Gainsborough. The plan entails the reopening of the Gaumont Studios, Lime Grove, Shepherds Bush, as well as the continuation of production on the Gainsborough lot at Islington.

The first film to be distributed by General Film Distributors is the recently completed Crazy Gang comedy "Frozen Limits." Production is to commence at Shepherds Bush this month on a comedy starring Frank Formby, brother of George Formby, Moore Marriott and Graham Moffatt. Next on the roster at Shepherds Bush will be a new version of "Charley's Aunt," with a leading British radio comedian, Arthur Askey, in the title role.

Before this starts, however, Askey will go to work at Islington on a screen version of the radio feature "Band Waggon," one of the most successful programs to be broadcast by the B.B.C.

Gainsborough Production

Production otherwise will continue at Gainsborough Studios for Twentieth Century Productions. Currently in production there is "They Came by Night," from the play by Barre Lyndon, author of "Dr. Clitterhouse." Will Fyffe is starring with Harry Lachman directing. This will be followed by "Report on a Fugitive" with Margaret Lockwood and Michael Redgrave directed by Carol Reed, and later Will Fyffe will have the role of "Potato" Jones, famous English seaman who ran the Franco blockade in the Spanish Civil War.

"The Blue Lagoon," to be made in color, is scheduled for production at Islington by Twentieth Century Productions with Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe and Richard Greene, to be directed by Carol Reed. Also for color will be the screen version of Donn Byrne's "Hangman's House."

Title Problem Solved

Changing his mind a second time, Michael Balcon finally has decided to call the new Clive Brook film "Return to Yesterday" in preference to "Farewell to Yesterday" and its original stage title of "Goodness How Sad." Robert Stevenson is directing, and his wife, Anna Lee, has the feminine lead.

On the conclusion of his work on the film, director Robert Stevenson will go to Hollywood at the invitation of David Selznick, who has asked him to discuss two stories, one of which he will direct. He will stay there to make the film or return in the Spring. This does not mean, however, that he is cutting adrift from British films for he intends to make two films a year in England and his Hollywood commitments will be made with this qualification.

Stevenson is known to American audiences for his direction of "Nine Days a Queen," "King Solomon's Mines," "Owd Bob" and "The Ware Case."

Elizabeth Allan, British star with a certain Hollywood prestige, returns to screen work this month under the production aegis of Dan Birt, in a film adapted from Gertrude Jennings' play, "The Young Person in Pink," which is being directed by Adrian Brunel for distribution by Butcher's Film Service, who also are joint producers.

Miss Allan is also to play in a screen version of "Inquest," the Michael Barringer stage success which is to be placed in production shortly by Charter Film Productions for release by Grand National.

NEW PRODUCER HAS MARY CLARE

Hurley Productions, a new company, is producing for Grand National release, "Mrs. Pym of Scotland Yard," in which Mary Clare, the distinguished actress, portrays Mrs. Pym, the only woman detective in Scotland Yard.

The character, Mrs. Pym, who has been the central figure of a number of successful stories by Nigel Morland, was first suggested to the author by the late Edgar Wallace. In addition to Mary Clare the cast includes Edward Levy, Nigel Patrick, Janet Johnson and Anthony Ireland.

The film is being directed by Fred Elles at the Highbury Studios.

Warner Units

Taking advantage of the brief snatches of fine weather, Warner-First National has two units on location, one in Cumberland and the other in Wales, while at the studio David Macdonald continues work on "The Midas Touch."

The Cumberland unit is a work on sequences for a film tentatively titled "Doctor O'Dowd," adapted for the screen by Austin Melford and Eric Twist from a story by L. A. G. Strong. In this film, Producer Sam Sax brings to the screen a young Irish girl, Peggy Cummins. Many famous Lakeland beauty spots will be used as backgrounds for the film, which is being directed by Herbert Mason.

The Wales unit is filming a motor crash sequence, climax of "The Midas Touch," in which Harry K. Barnes is starring.

Ahead of Schedule

Five days ahead of schedule, Alexander Korda's "The Thief of Baghdad" concludes actual studio shooting at Denham this weekend.

Dr. Ludwig Berger, associate producer and director, will hand over the picture to William Cameron Menzies for the plenteous trick photography which is a feature of this color film. Dr. Berger, who has contracts in Paris, is due back there for work by August 17th, but he will return later to Denham to supervise the music and cutting on the film.

Weather of the kind peculiar to the English summer has interfered with Michael Powell's location work, and up to the time of writing only three days shooting has been concluded on exteriors.

Immediately "The Thief of Baghdad" is completed Korda plans to start production on another color production, "Manon Lescaut," in which Merle Oberon will star.

Itemized

Shooting has been concluded on the Irving Asher "Ten Days in Paris," made at the Denham Studios for Columbia release. Picnic sequences on the banks of the River Colne, which runs through the studio grounds, formed the material for the last day's shooting. The night shooting, interrupted by occasional thunder storms, was finished after sequences in which Rex Harrison, star, has a final midnight encounter with a gang of international spies.

Meanwhile Irving Asher is preparing his new production, "What Immortal Hand," which is due to start at Denham immediately.

Edward Ashley, young English actor whose work in "Spies in the Air" attracted considerable attention among the London critics, has been tested by Paramount, which has an option on him. He has left London for Hollywood.

"Dressed to Kill," directed by Roy William Neill for Warner-First National, has been retitled "His Brother's Keeper."

Location work, at the Royal Naval College Dartmouth, is now in full swing for Maurice Elvey's "Sons of the Sea," and four cameras will be engaged there for three weeks filming scenes in the Naval training center.

"Sons of the Sea" will be the first full-length picture to be filmed entirely in a British color process, namely, Dufaycolor.

This picture is the initial effort of a new production company—British Consolidated Pictures Ltd.—of which the directors are Maurice Elvey, K. C. Alexander and G. Aird Whyte. Grand National Pictures are to release the picture.

Dozens of Radio Song Plugs

In addition to the return of Bing Crosby himself to the Kraft Music Hall on July 20th to introduce the new hit songs in "THE STAR MAKER" to his huge audience of radio fans, Paramount has succeeded in giving both the new songs and the old-time favorites in the picture, the most extensive radio and disc plugging ever given picture song hits. "Go Fly a Kite" was fifth out of fifty radio song hits in number of plugs last week.

GUS EDWARDS Broadcast

Last Friday night, August 18th, over the Columbia network, millions of fans were pre-sold on Paramount's "THE STAR MAKER" by a glorious half-hour birthday celebration in honor of Gus Edwards, on whose life story the picture is based. The program starred Eddie Cantor, Jack Benny, Bob Burns and Linda Ware.

U. S. REPORTS ON FILM CONDITIONS IN BOHEMIA, MORAVIA, IRELAND, ICELAND

Nazis Push German and Italian Films into "Protectorate"; Irish Import 82 Per Cent of Product from America

The Nazis are "pushing" films of Germany and of Italy, its axis partner, into the "German Protectorate" of Bohemia and Moravia, as expected, and are pushing out of what was once Czechoslovakia the films of most other countries, principally those of Hollywood, also as expected. Consequently American participation is likely to be limited to the three companies now represented in Germany—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox.

The Irish in Eire import from America 82 per cent of the films shown there.

Eighty-five per cent of all films shown in Iceland are from Hollywood, five per cent from Germany, and the remaining ten from England, France and Denmark.

The police department has taken over the regulation of exhibition in Guatemala City.

These are the highlights of reports received this week by Nate Golden, chief of the Motion Picture Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, U. S. Department of Commerce, at Washington, from commercial attaches abroad. The Division has been unusually active of late in reporting on film conditions in foreign countries, many of which had been shut off from Hollywood because of the international situation.

Unsettled in Bohemia, Moravia

While the film situation in the Bohemian-Moravian "Protectorate" is as yet far from settled, it is possible to make some deductions as to the trend of affairs, according to the report from the U. S. Attche in Berlin, one of the first to reach America.

"The large and excellently equipped Barrandow studios of former Czechoslovakia are a welcome addition of which the German industry is prepared to take full advantage, especially in view of the notable shortage of studio space in Germany. They are already occupied with the production of German films and it may be assumed that the production of Czech films will be greatly reduced though a certain production may be maintained for the sake of propaganda," reports the Attache officer.

"The extension to the 'Protectorate' of the restrictions applying in Germany will cause a shortage of films for the former Czech market. This shortage will at least to some extent be met by the exhibition of German films previously banned in Czechoslovakia though at the same time Czech and foreign films, banned in Germany, which are already in the 'Protectorate,' have been withdrawn. It is at least possible that more American films will be shown in the 'Protectorate' than are permitted in Germany, though in general the ban on entry into Germany extends also to the 'Protectorate.' More Italian films will be shown as these are now being pushed according to the terms of the German-Italian film agreement.

"It is not yet definitely decided which American companies will be permitted to continue operating in the 'Protectorate' but it seems all together probable that American participation will be limited to the three companies now represented in Germany (MGM, Paramount, Fox).

"The registration fee imposed on all films imported into the former Czechoslovakia has been discontinued for German films. This registration fee amounted to 17,500 Czech crowns.

"Another change is that German films need no longer be put before the Prague censors. Foreign films must be passed by the Prague board as heretofore.

Motion picture films exposed, positive, are subject to a duty of 3d. (6 cents) per foot.

Reports on Films In Iceland

There are 10 motion picture theaters in Iceland, according to a report to Washington from the Commercial Attache at Copenhagen, Denmark. These are located in the following cities: Reykjavik 2, Vestmannaeyjar 2, Akureyri 1, Akranes 1, Hafnarfjördur 1, Keflavik 1, Isafjödur 1, and Siglufjördur 1.

American sound equipment is utilized only in the two theatres of Reykjavik. All the remaining theatres use Zeiss Ikon and Bofa sound equipment. With the exception of Reykjavik, two to four shows are given weekly, varying with activities of the fishing season.

American motion pictures during the past two years were shown to the extent of 85 per cent, German five per cent and the remainder English, French and Danish. There are no film exchanges in Iceland and all films are distributed through the Scandinavian branches. To import motion pictures in Iceland it is necessary that a special license be issued in each case by the Valuta and Import Commission.

Guatemala Regulations

According to the Commercial Attache at Guatemala City, the director general of the National Police has outlined to motion picture theatre owners and distributors the following regulations governing motion picture programs in Guatemala City.

(1). Programs are not to be altered in any way from those announced or advertised, and this refers not only to the pictures to be shown, but to the order in which they are shown, in the case of double features, etc. The fine for infringement of this regulation will be 100 quetzales.

(2) No theater owner may sell tickets beyond the actual seating capacity of the theater, nor may he permit persons to stand or place additional chairs in aisles or other vacant spaces in the theater. The fine for infringement of this rule shall be 50 quetzales.

(3) The hours for closing of performances at night are set at midnight, at the latest, on Monday, Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday, and at 11:45 P.M. on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. A fine of two quetzales for each minute beyond these fixed hours shall be imposed for infringement.

These regulations have been agreed to by theatre owners and distributors.

"The number of films to be produced in 1939 is 35, as compared with 41 in the preceding year. The total number of films to be shown this year will be greatly reduced, from 318 in 1938 to approximately 200 in the current year, the drop of from 180 to 70 American films being the chief reason. German films will naturally be almost double those of last year, an increase from 40 to 70," the report continues.

"The total number of films shown in Czechoslovakia last year amounted to 318; 54 per cent were American, 13 per cent domestic, seven per cent French, and the remaining 12 per cent English, Italian and Russian. Total production costs for the 41 Czech films were 30.5 million crowns. In spite of the political situation, which naturally also affected the motion picture business, a 33 per cent reduction in turnover, caused by the loss of the Sudetenland—the year was a better one than 1937. Liabilities show a decrease by 4,000,000 crowns, that is, 26.3 millions, compared to 30.5 millions at the end of 1937.

The Industry In Ireland

There are 200 sound-equipped motion picture houses (seating 120,000) in Ireland (Eire), formerly known as the Irish Free State. Five houses were constructed and opened during 1938 with a seating capacity of around 8,000. Theatre prices range from eight cents to 60 cents. Box office receipts are estimated to be in the neighborhood of £1,300,000 ($6,500,000), according to a report to Washington from the Consul at Dublin.

Of the 1,506 motion pictures imported last year, 82 per cent were American, 17 per cent British, and the remaining one per cent was made up of three German, one French, and an Irish film.

Imports of motion picture films exposed, positive, during 1938 amounted to 7,873,100 linear feet as against 8,241,500 in 1937.

Receipts from customs duties on motion picture films for the year ended March 21, 1938, amounted to £61,300 ($306,500).

All films going into the 26 counties of southern Ireland known as Eire are brought in under a film bonded house and a date is booked with the censor for viewing them and a fee of 10s. per reel paid for censorship. If a picture passes the censor a certificate is given and the film is then cleared from the bonded store, duty being paid. It is then ready for exhibition throughout Ireland. On the other hand, if the film is turned down by the censor, appeal may be made to a board of five on the payment of a deposit of £5, and if the film passes the Appeal Board without cuts the £5 is refunded, but if the film is cut by that Board, and passed on these cuts, the £5 is retained.

There are two production companies operating in Ireland. One is the Hibernian Film Company, located at Killarney, a privately-owned company which made only one film during 1938 entitled "Uncle Nick." The second company is also an entirely Irish one working in Dublin.

CLAIM FASTEST FILM SHIPMENT

Marking the fastest film shipment on record from Las Angeles to Australia, according to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and the first time a print has been shipped entirely by air between the two cities, the first print of "From the Ends of the Earth, A New Romance in Celluloid", institutional short subject, arrived in Sydney Thursday, 13 days after leaving the Culver City studio, to have its preview at the MGM Australian convention.

The print arrived in New York via TWA, proceeded to London on the Yankee Clipper and then proceeded by way of the Royal Dutch Air Lines to Sydney.

Nine Shows Now Set for Broadway Winter Season

Nine legitimate shows are scheduled for opening on Broadway in September to start the new season. Four are musicals, four straight dramas and one in a series of revivals. No addition to the 11 now playing will be made in August with the exception of the possible resumption on August 21st of "I Must Love Someone."

September's Musicals

The musicals set for September include George White's "Scandals"; Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," with music by Benny Goodman and the setting altered to New Orleans in the 19th century, to be produced by Erik Charell and Jean Rodney; "Buggy Ride," based on a book by Don Herold, to be produced by Lew Gensler and to star Joe Cook, and a new edition of "Houseboat on the Styx," with new music for the show which had a three months run 11 years ago, to be produced by Ned Jakobs.

Leonard Sillman plans to revive old favorites for two-week runs with a permanent acting company supplemented by guest stars. Other dramatic pieces include a dramatization of Adolph Hitler's "Mein Kampf," by Earle W. Waldron, to be produced by Mr. Waldron and S. M. Chartock; "These Are the Times," a story of the American Revolutionary War by Charles O'Neill, to be produced by Actors Repertory Company; "The Astonished Ostrich," a farce by Archie Menzies, to be produced by Ted Hammerstein and Martin S. Meyers, and "Skylark," a domestic comedy by Samuel Raphaelson, to be produced by John Golden and to star Gertrude Lawrence.

Several shows are tentatively planned for presentation in October, including a comedy by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart about a touring lecturer, the producer to be Sam H. Harris; "Ladies and Gentlemen," a court room comedy by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, to be produced by Gilbert Miller; "Too Many Girls," a college musical with book by George Marion, Jr., and songs by Rodgers and Hart, to be produced by George Abbott, and "John Henry," dramatized by Roark Bradford from his book of the same name. Music has been added by Jacques Wolfe.

Other Kaufmans Considered

Mr. Harris is considering three other Kaufman works. Mr. Miller will choose a selection from about 10 properties upon which he has options but will make a final decision after viewing the London product. The Theatre Guild will produce its usual six shows, but none is set yet. Playwrights Company expects to produce "Key Largo," by Maxwell Anderson; "Summer Night," by Sidney Howard; a musical by Anderson and Kurt Weill and an Elmer Rice play.

The George Abbott office has three more plays but has not decided on titles for them. They include a comedy by Gladys Hurlbut, a serious drama by Ayn Rand and another on the serious side. The Shuberts plan a new edition of "Hellzapoppin," a musical for Beatrice Lillie, and possibly one for Mae West. Katherine Cornell may revive Shakespeare's "Measure for Measure" for herself and with Maurice Evans in the male lead. The Group Theatre plans four plays, including an intimate revue and an original by Clifford Odets.

Brock Pemberton is considering a play dramatized by Colin Clements and Florence Ryerson from their novel, "This Awful Age." Mr. Gensler has four more besides "Buggy Ride." They are a play by Ernest Hemingway on the Spanish revolution; "Saturday Night," by Vicki Baum and Benjamin F. Gensler; a play by John Bayly based on an unpublished biography of Woodrow Wilson by Morris Zatz, and a musical by William F. Stucky, with music by Perry Lafferty and lyrics by Burt Shevelove.

Richard Aldrich and Richard Myers will bring "My Dear Children," by Catherine Turney and Jerry Horwin, in which John Barrymore has been touring since March, in December. Doris Dudley is slated to play the female lead in the place of Elaine Barrie. In addition they have scheduled "Foreigners," a satire on governments by Frederick Lonsdale; another by Lonsdale, possibly for Joan Crawford; and "Rats of Norway," by Keith Winter, which was produced in London six years ago.

Mr. Golden is considering a revival of "The First Year"; a Chinese fantasy and a play based on Francis Hackett's forthcoming book "Queen Anne Boleyn." Laurence Schwab and Courtney Burr are preparing a musical version of the hit "Sailer Beware." Eddie Dowling is considering a fantasy, "Peter Penny under the Dream Tree."

CRITICS TO PAY TAX ON PASSES

Dramatic critics will have to pay the regular federal tax on the free tickets they receive for shows that have no narrative plot, such as the revue, "Pins and Needles", but they will be exempt from paying the taxes on their tickets to plays, under a ruling by D. Spencer Bliss, deputy commissioner of Internal Revenue.

The ruling also applies to others besides critics. The amount of the tax on the passes will be the same they would pay if they bought their tickets at the full price.

National Decency Legion Classifies 13 Pictures

Of 13 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week seven were approved for general patronage and six were listed as unobjectionable for adults. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Chicken Wagon Family," "Fighting Renegade," "Gantry the Great," "Hawaiian Nights," "New Frontier," "Riders of the Frontier," "The Star Maker." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Coast Guard," "Eternal Youth," "Full Confessions," "These Glamour Girls," "La Ultima Melodia" (Spanish), "When Tomorrow Comes."

Film Audience Group Formed by Hotel Man

The American Congress of Cinema Audiences, recently formed by Mal Sibley, Hollywood hotel man, will aim to "iron out the double feature evil," and "protest the caliber of so-called 'B' pictures," according to Mr. Sibley, now in San Francisco seeking to develop the organization in that city.

Says Mr. Sibley, further, "Picture producers also have been accused for years of regarding movie goers as moronic, and now we propose to show the film-makers that they are in error."

Censors Collect $300,311 From Motion Pictures

The yield to New York State for its censorship and review of pictures licensed for exhibition during the 12 months' ending June 30, 1939, was $300,331.50. The revenue is two per cent under that for the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1938, when receipts totaled $306,945, or $6,614 more.

The tax is based on the application of producers or distributors to the Motion Picture Division for exhibition licenses in the State. The original film is taxed $3 per 1,000 feet or fraction thereof and at the same time, the application includes the number of prints to be authorized. Duplicates are taxed $2 per 1,000 feet.

Cost Put at $165,00

Total cost of the operation of the Motion Picture Division, including its screenings, appeals, the salaries of its reviewers, inspectors and field workers costs on the average of $165,000 yearly, so that the State's net profit for the year was approximately $135,000. Irwin Esmond, the director, is also chief reviewer and the work of his division includes inspections in theatres to see that the films displayed carry the State seal and are authorized for exhibition in the form screened.

Application for an order restraining the city of Portland from interfering with the showing of the motion picture "Peter the First" at the Esquire Theatre has been filed in circuit court by Herbert Rosenener, proprietor of the theatre.

The complaint states that the municipal board of review has refused permission for the showing and that the city council supported its ruling.

The board in banning the picture based the prohibition allegedly on moral grounds. The complaint declares the picture is not immoral, gruesome or likely to disturb public peace or morals.

Acting on orders from Mayor Krogman, police at Wildwood, New Jersey, last week prevented the film, "Wages of Sin," from being shown at a local theatre. Mayor Krogman, superintendent of the Calvary Presbyterian Sunday School, called the film immoral and degrading. Monseignor James A. Moroney, representing the Catholic Legion of Decency, thanked the Mayor for his action.

"Saint Theresa of the Child Jesus," a French film, and "The Curé of Aldea," a Spanish picture, have passed the Mexican censors. They are the first wholly religious pictures to do so.

A private showing of the French film, "Harvest," which has been banned by the New York State censor board, was arranged for Tuesday by the National Council on Freedom from Censorship, in a drive to lift the ban. The council is allied with the American Civil Liberties Union. If the ban is lifted, the New York League of Women Shoppers will sponsor its premiere, tentatively set for September 13th at the World Theatre, New York.

Set Levy Testimonial

The testimonial dinner to Nat Levy, RKO divisional manager, recently transferred from Detroit, will be given in Detroit September 30th. All exchange managers are on a committee of the Variety Club, headed by Eddie Heiber, Universal manager.

PROJECTIONISTS' TRAINING INSTITUTE PLANNED BY INDUSTRY IN ENGLAND

Exhibitors, Distributors, Technical Society Study Proposals for Improving Operators; Apprentice Scheme Considered

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With the British exhibitor still for the most part absent on his annual vacation, and a general atmosphere of inertia and inactivity obtaining throughout the industry, things have been moving, during the dog days, in the direction of a new era for the projectionist. On all sectors of the labor front, and with the formal approval of the exhibitor groups, movement is current towards the establishment of a national training charter for the man in the box.

Plan Approved by CEA

Long mooted in labor circles, the principle of a national training scheme for projectionists provided the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association with its most spirited session at this year's Conference, and produced a resolution in favor not only of the principle, but of the carrying thereof into practice.

Since late June matters have moved quickly. Culminating development is the calling by the British Kinematograph Society—the trade's technical and academic body—of a conference to discuss the matter and translate resolutions into action. Invited to confer are the appropriate bodies, the CEA, the Guild of Projectionists, and the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees. Their objective is a national syllabus to be drawn up, not by pedagogues but by various trade technicians and experts.

The move should co-ordinate the sectional activities of the various groups, help to give national expression, if not national action, to the currently disjointed movements. The Kine Employees, following the cordiality with which their spokesman was received at the Blackpool Conference, and immediate sequel to their own annual conference last month, are now preparing plans to be considered by the trade for a national trade technical institute as source and parent body of a proposed national training scheme. The Guild of Projectionists, jealous of their own status, seek trade co-operation for the doctrine that their organization can be enlarged to operate any official scheme. The CEA, naturally, will follow up their Blackpool resolution by discussing the whole matter at their next General Council, which will be in November.

Films Council Considers Idea

Meanwhile, on a front not so far removed, the Films Council itself is likely to examine further the question of a national apprentice scheme for the industry. The idea was recently considered by them, and shelved, pro tem, on the grounds that the time was not opportune. The Association of Cine Technicians, who are represented on the Films Council, takes a different view and will work towards more immediate action.

Impetus is given to the present activity by the increasing concern of exhibitors with the potential shortage of operating box staffs, result not only of the increasing demands of local authorities for a minimum number of employees in the box, but by the depletion of staffs occasioned by employees being called up under the new Militia Act.

Despite the sectional disagreement on ways and means there is, generally speaking, agreement that a national scheme for the training of picture house projectionists is desirable on all grounds, that it will only be practicable and productive if it is a national scheme with full trade approval, and that it should operate from a central and representative trade body.

Already training schemes are in operation in certain areas, have been organized with the joint approval of local education authorities, are often assisted by the readiness of exhibitors not only to allow employees time off with pay for studies, but also to meet a proportion of the cost of training. Bristol exhibitors have worked on a scheme with the aid of the local technical college, Devon and Cornwall have agreed to support a scheme put forward by the local Projectionists Guild, North Country exhibitors sit on an educational panel which has been exploring the training of projectionists.

Training Courses in Operation

Already various courses of training are in existence in trade and extra-trade circles. The Polytechnic, Regent Street, revered and learned technical training establishment, has a course of training for projectionists. The Guild of British Kinema and Projectionists Technicians, has long had a correspondence course for the training of its members. Middlebrough's educational authority, one of whose most active members addressed the Blackpool Conference, has course in nine of its colleges. These and others should, it is thought, be co-ordinated under a national scheme operating from a central institute or society using the same syllabus and text books and contesting for national diplomas. What would virtually be an educational charter for the projectionists would, it is contended, enhance the prestige of the industry and by improving the standard redound to its commercial advantage.

One of the most active bodies moving towards the ultimate ideal is the NATKE, who, as already recorded, scorning such minor obstacles as the holiday season, are proceeding forthwith to materialize their ambition of a national trade and technical institute having the backing of the projectionists themselves and the trade at large.

Exhibitors Prefer Guild

Though not opposed to this view in general, a wide exhibitor body of opinion is known to prefer the Projectionists Guild as the appropriate organization, and a resolution to this effect will be proposed by technical expert, Major Bell, at the September General Council meeting of the CEA. The NATKE, however, are no strangers to the idea of a charter for projectionists, presented as far back as 1909 a bill to Parliament for the training, examination and registration of "operators' (Anglo-Saxon for "projectionists"). A bill which by the apathy of the employees and the lack of co-operation from the trade, was defeated.

That there is need for a higher technical status for projectionists is generally admitted. T. J. O'Brien, Secretary of the NATKE, quoted as an example a list of duties to be undertaken by a projectionist in a small rural cinema. These listed by his manager were:—

"(a) All plant to be kept clean. (b) All floors to be kept clean—lino and rubber floors to be washed. (c) Car-park to be kept clean. (d) Front of the cinema and alleys and all gulleys and drains to be kept clean. (e) To be responsible for all the windows and shades, inside and out, including the glass entrance and the doors. (f) All billing except posters and insets. (g) To look after the two men's lavatories, stalls and balcony."

It is the objective of the labor and technical groups to take the projectionists out of the car park and put him back into the projection box. Agreement would seem to be complete on the ethics of that purpose but it remains to be seen if agreement can be achieved on who is to have the privilege of guiding him there.

QUOTA PRODUCTIONS GAIN IN ENGLAND

A total of 36 British features were registered by the Board of Trade in the first four months of 1939. Of the 36, five were treble quota and five double quota, a total equivalent in registration value of 52 single features. Foreign feature registration totalled 78.

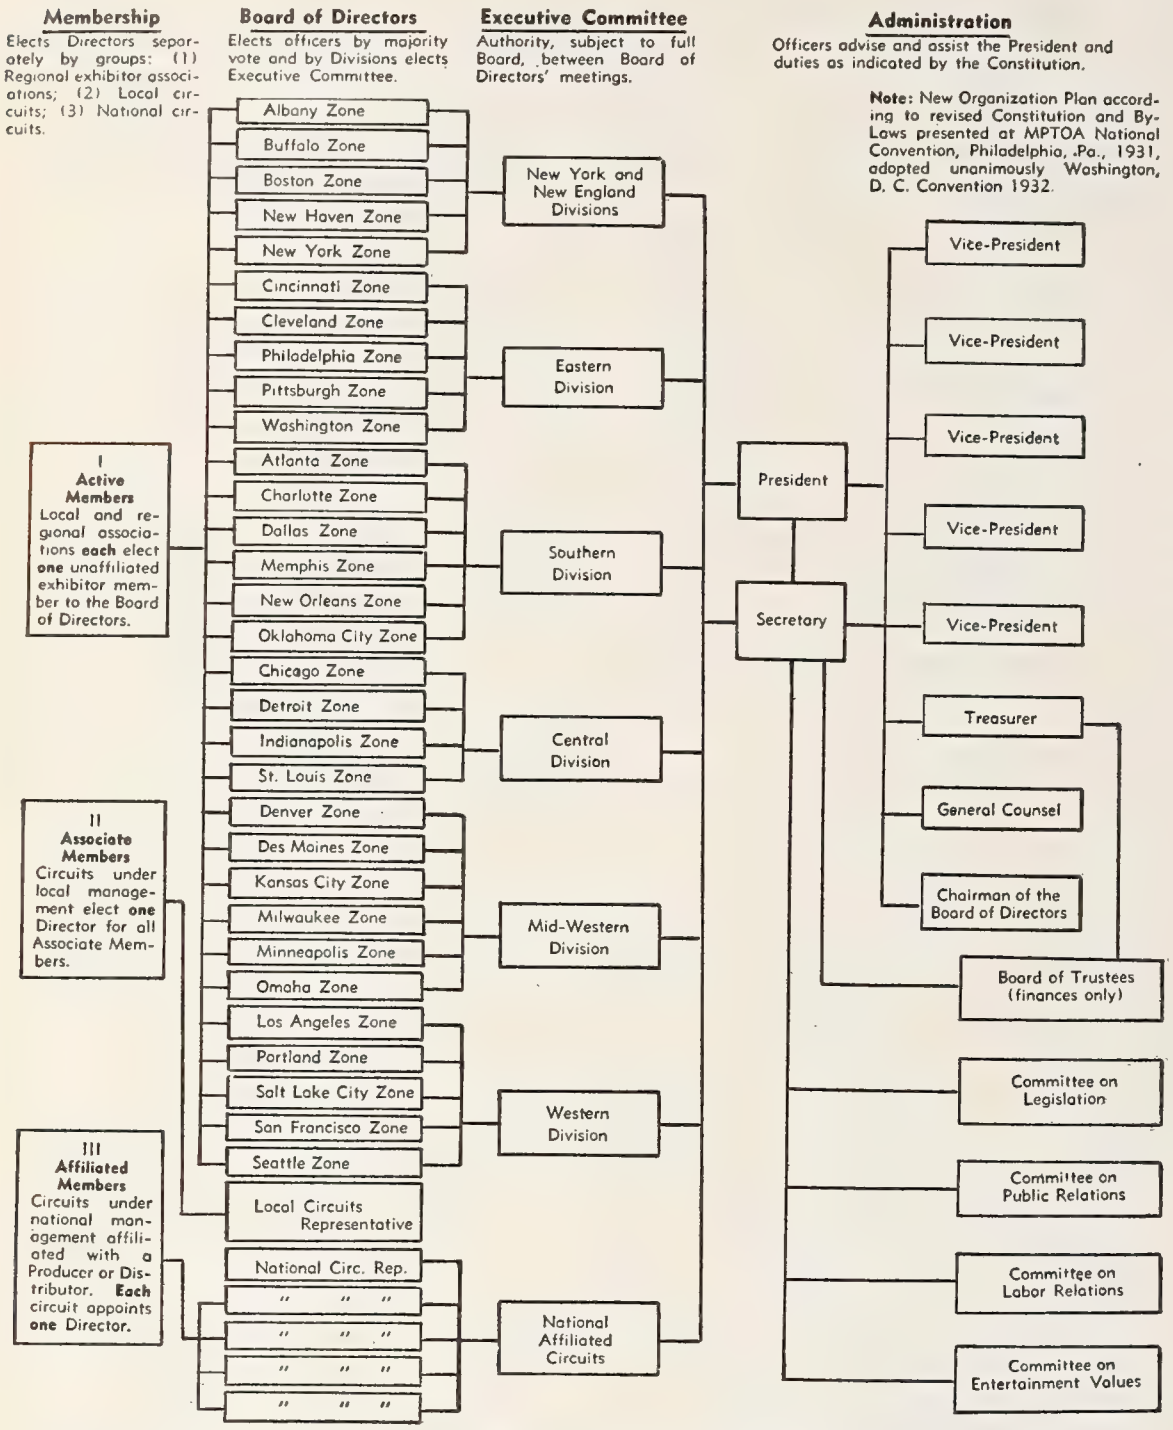
The figures compare with 33 registrations for the corresponding period in 1938, of which six were treble and five double quota.

In addition 10 British features were registered for the exhibitors quota only during the four month period for 1939. A total of 132 British shorts were registered and 236 foreign shorts.

The figures indicate a considerable increase in quota production for the 12 months from January to December, 1939.

French Ease Restrictions

The French Ministry of Commerce, according to a dispatch to the New York Times from Paris, has published a decree removing restrictions on certain types of films imported into the country. The films are either silent films to be made into sound films in France or sound films to be dubbed in france after importation; in both cases having to be over 900 meters in length.



The French industry has protested the decree, especially as it applies to films wholly produced abroad.

The abrogation of the quota on dubbed pictures applies to films imported from all countries.

Reissuing "Hallelujah"

King Vidor's all-Negro production, "Hallelujah," released in 1929 by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been made available for return bookings as a result of continued requests. The film is now playing at the New Amsterdam theatre in New York on an extended engagement. Nina Mae McKinney stars in the film.

The MPTOA on Its 19th Anniversary

This week, marking the 19th anniversary of what is now the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, national headquarters of the MPTOA in New York submitted to the industry an "organization chart" of the association as now constituted.

Declaring "We believe in home rule", in not "dictating policies or activities to local organizations", and that "the MPTOA structure presents an efficient way to express collectively exhibitor views and opinion", Edward L. Kuykendall, president, pointed out, first, that membership is composed of three groups: active (local and regional exhibitor organization affiliates), associate (local circuits) and affiliated (circuits of the majors); that the board of directors is made up from 31 divisions, the executive committee from seven geographical sections and that five vice-presidents, three other officers and five different boards and committees advise and assist the president in the manner described above.

Heineman, Scully Away

William Heineman, Universal western sales manager, has left for an extended tour of his territory, and will return to New York in about two weeks. After sitting in on circuit deals in St. Louis, he went to Chicago, making several other stops before arriving on the Coast. William Scully, general sales manager, returned to New York Monday from Charlotte, North Carolina.

Loew's Expanding In Buenos Aires

Loew's, Inc., operating and theatre parent company of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the only one of the majors to operate theatres in South America, is looking for locations for suburban theatres in Buenos Aires, Argentina, according to Sam N. Burger, special foreign representative, now in New York from South America and South Africa.

Either acquisition of existing houses or construction of new theatres would be considered. Loew's now has two houses in Brazil, one in Chile, one in Porto Rico, one in Uruguay and one in Peru, all of them being first run houses.

Paramount, which formerly was affiliated with theatre interests in South America, has sold all its interests, while Warner Brothers, with over 450 theatres in the U. S., has only one house abroad, the recently opened Warners' London. Similarly, RKO operates no houses in South America, nor does Twentieth Century-Fox.

Mr. Burger said that his company was the first to install air conditioning in its theatres in South America, and that it helped to raise grosses; with other houses forced to follow suit.

While Loew's has at present a total of six theatres in South America, there are 1,250 in Brazil, 200 in Chile, 121 in Porto Rico, 150 in Uruguay and 200 in Peru. While Brazil and Chile actually have more than the number of theatres indicated, the totals represent theatres wired for sound.

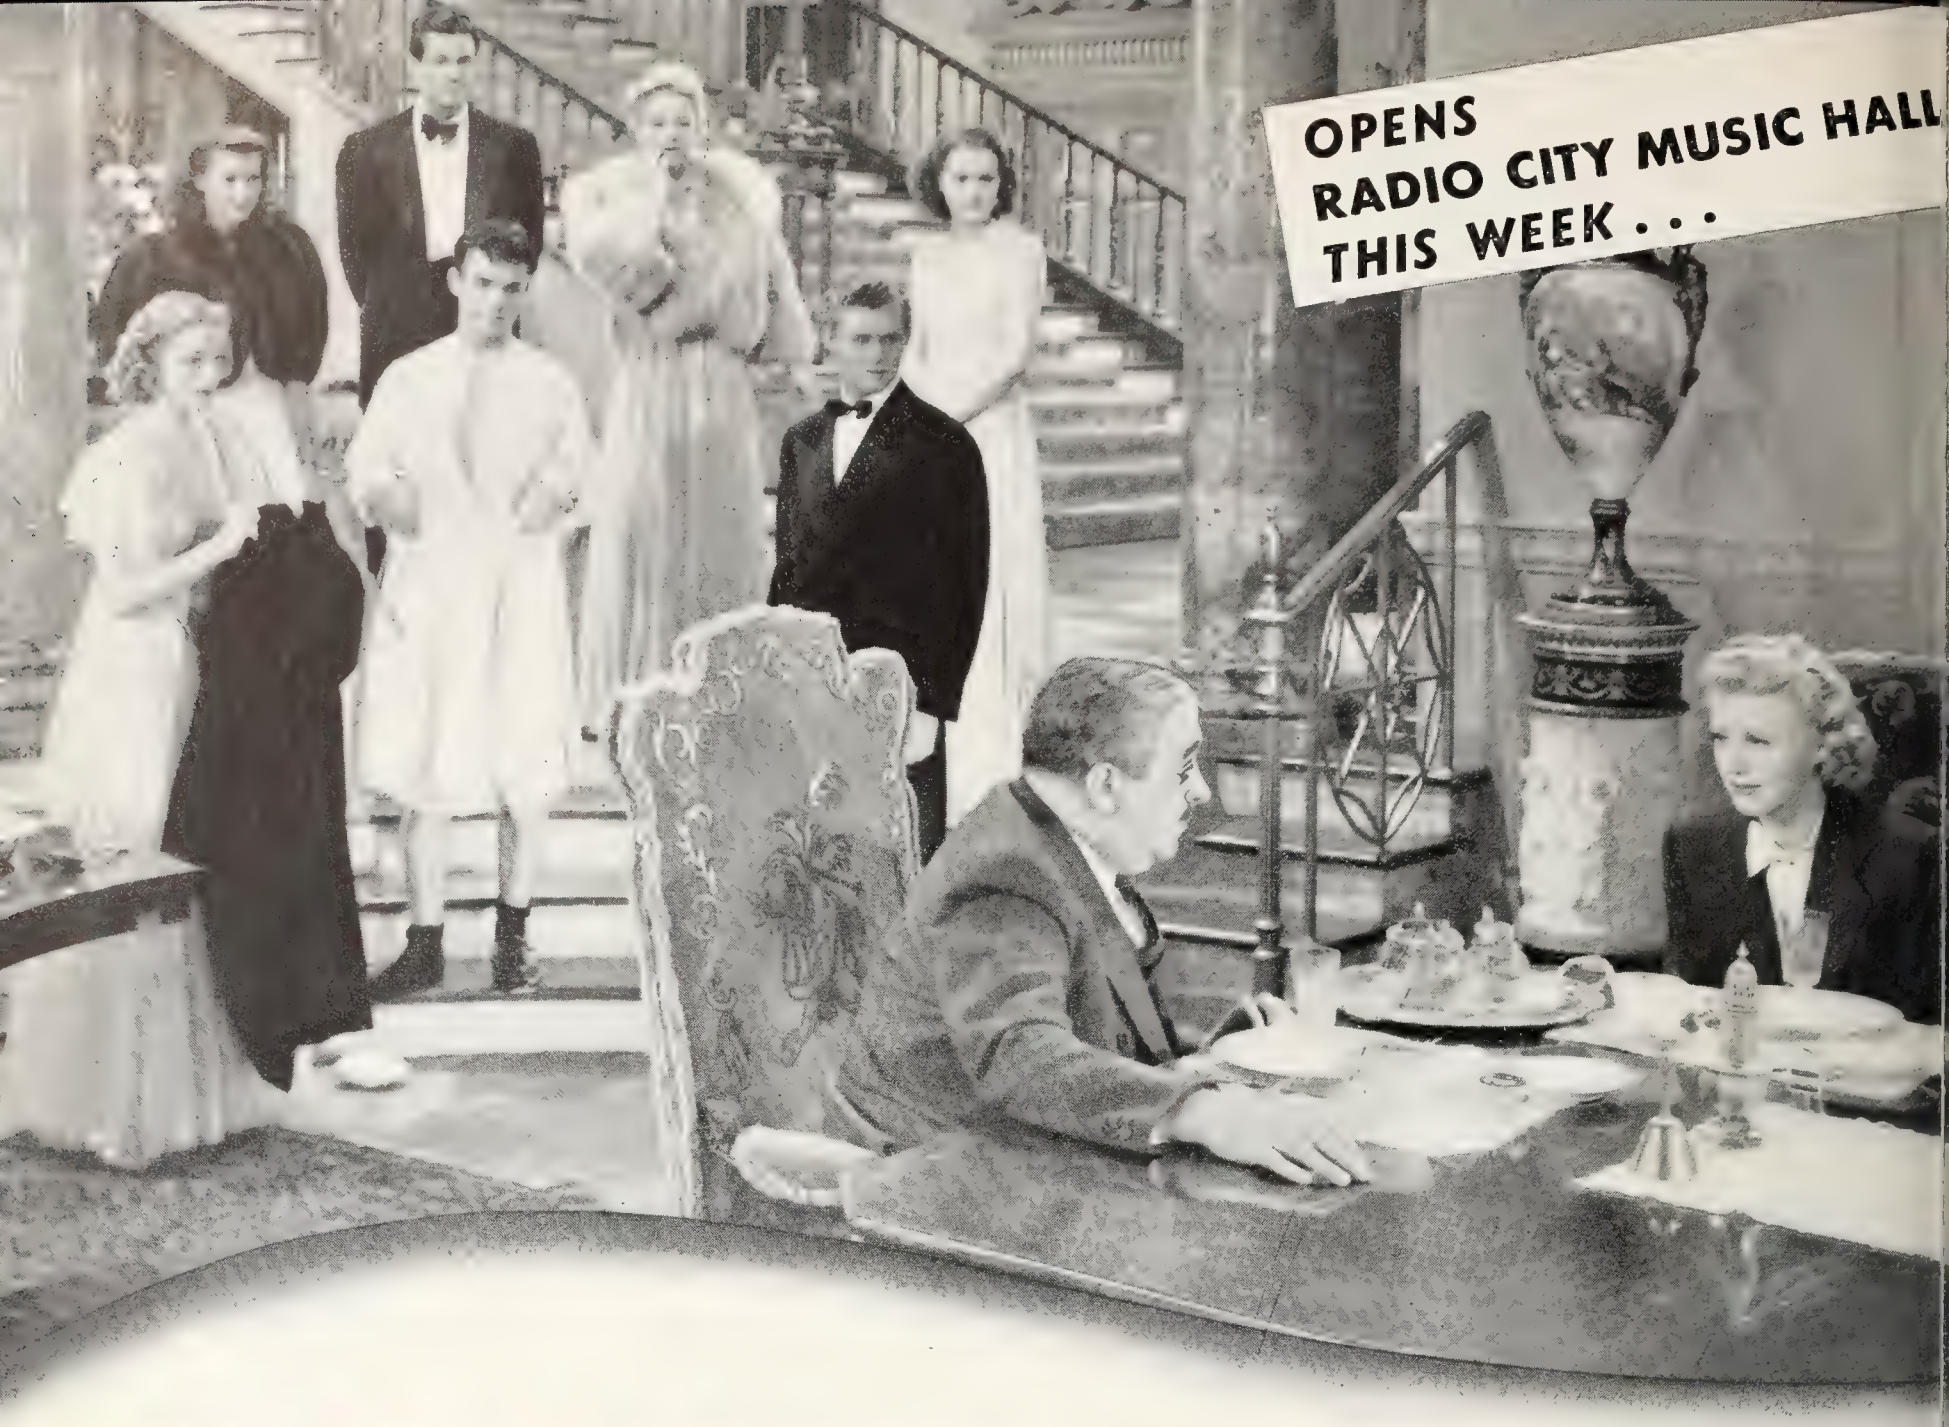
Mr. Burger cited Robert Taylor, Nelson Eddy, Clark Gable and Mickey Rooney as among his company's most popular male stars, and Norma Shearer, Greta Garbo and Jeanette McDonald as the most popular among the female stars.

Mr. Burger, who will remain in New York for a few months, said that his recent trip was of a routine nature.

Sack Enterprises Open New York Exchange

Sack Amusement Enterprises, distributors of Negro pictures, has opened a New York exchange at 723 Seventh Avenue. The company has other branches in Dallas, Atlanta and Chicago. Lester J. Sack, vice-president of the organization, is branch manager in New York. Adolph Pollak has been named sales representative and Dorothy Schapiro is cashier.

Sack is national distributor for Million Dollar Productions, Inc., producer of Negro pictures. The New York exchange will serve the eastern territory. A few pictures with white casts also will be handled. Alfred N. Sack, head of the company, recently celebrated his 20th anniversary in show business.



Fort Meade Theatre Burns

The only theatre in Fort Meade, Fla., the Fox, burned to the ground this week. The Fox, which was formerly the Majestic, has been supplying amusement for Fort Meade for nearly 28 years. The building is owned by P. O. Mullin of Haines City. No insurance was carried on the building.

Redwing Plans 24 On Indian Legends

Chief Robert Redwing, Indian motion picture director and producer, of the Redwing Motion Picture Company, Inc., New York, plans to start production shortly on a series of 24 films built around Indian legends, comprising both features and short subjects. The title of the first production is "The Saga of the Lenni-Lenape Indians," who inhabited what is now New Jersey.

The tribe has been extinct for hundreds of years. New Jersey State Board of Archaeologists' members are serving on the advisory board of the Redwing company, to warrant the authenticity of the educational film, which will be released throughout the country's schools.

SMPE Group Seeks More Power Cost Data

Data on the electric power costs of several hundred theatres have been collected by the special subcommittee of the Projection Practice Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. The survey, begun last spring, is for the purpose of providing a basis for recommendations calculated to reduce, in general, the cost of electric power in theatre operation.

The committee states that power cost figures, in accordance with the questionnaire being used, are desired on about a thousand representative theatres distributed throughout the country, and asks for the full cooperation of theatre managers so that enough data may be procured to make really helpful recommendations possible.

All-Shorts Program Triples Dallas Theatre Business

Mrs. Besa Short's Ideas Applied at Interstate's Melrose

A new revenue producing use for the short subject has been demonstrated by the Interstate circuit of Texas with an all short subject show at a Dallas neighborhood theatre which drew more than triple the average Thursday business for the house. The show was staged with the cooperation of the circuit's special short subject exploitation and booking department, which for the last several years has been making patronage building capital of a part of the theatre program which exhibitors often neglect.

Building on an idea which has been tried by other theatres with varying success, Henry Long, manager of the Melrose in Dallas, and Charles Meeker, publicity executive for Interstate's Dallas neighborhood houses, selected the program and planned the advertising and exploitation.

Upper Middle Class Area

The Melrose is in a business and upper middle class residential section with a normal territorial drawing radius of approximately 20 blocks. On the day of the show a number of telephone calls were recorded from all sections of the city asking directions to the theatre, and a check of car license number of patrons showed an attendance from a wide territory. Regular prices of 10, 15 and 25 cents were in effect but the regular opening time was set back from 6 P. M. to 1:45 P. M.

The program included "Sons of Liberty," "Donald's Cousin Gus," "Ranch House Romeos," "Screen Snapshots," "Leave Well Enough Alone," "Bars and Stripes Forever," "Artie Shaw and Band," "It's the McCoy," "Airwaves," and "Clockwise."

The Melrose show derived from the special attention given short subjects by Interstate through its special department established about five years ago under the supervision of Mrs. Besa Short. The department has proved successful in terms of both box office returns and audience reaction, according to R. J. O'Donnell and Karl Hoblitzelle, heads of the circuit.

130 Theatres Served

The department staff includes, in addition to Mrs. Short, three booker-secretaries, each of whom handles a group of towns. In all a total of more than 130 theatres are served.

In building the programs for each theatre a definite effort is made to keep the total running time within one hour and 45 minutes. With feature films that run 100 minutes or more nothing more than a newsreel and cartoon is booked, particularly for the preferred time dates, while the midweek changes include a comedy or two-reel musical with an additional one-reel subject, depending on the length of the feature and the type. Weak features are given name short subjects that can be sold to make the whole program look better and bigger. Heavy, melodramatic features are lightened with musicals or novelties, and comedy features are given surrounding shorts of a more serious nature. An effort is made to keep subjects that appeal mostly to children away from sophisticated features.

Close Contact Maintained

A short subjects report is sent in each week by each manager, listing notes, suggestions and audience reaction to the program. These, together with a weekly bulletin prepared at the home office, keep the theatres and the department in close contact. The bulletin includes descriptive reviews of all subjects screened. A "Distinctions" column is used for the managers who send in campaigns on shorts, and there is a "Dog House" for the manager who overlooks selling a short or fails to send in his weekly report.

Admission Taxes Jump $43,000

Federal admission tax collections, which have been fluctuating sharply from month to month through 1939, took an upward turn in July, totaling $1,534,249, it was reported Monday by the Internal Revenue Bureau at Washington.

Decrease from Last Year

The month's receipts compared with $1,491,260 in June, but were heavily below the July, 1938, total of $1,618,813, it was shown.

The July increase of some $23,000 over the preceding month was in contrast with the experience last year, when collections dropped nearly $6,000 between June and July.

As further evidence of the lower taxable attendance at places of amusement, the bureau reported that collections for the first seven months of the current year were $10,690,477, more than a quarter-million dollars below the $10,965,575 taken in by the Government during the corresponding period last year.

While total collections increased, receipts from the Third (Broadway) New York District showed a sharp decline, dropping from $457,258 in June to $397,415 the following month, where they were $284,000 under the $681,445 received in July, 1938, bureau figures disclosed.

Heaviest declines in the Broadway sector were in box office collections, from $393,376 to $344,694; tickets sold by brokers, $12,079 to $8,162; tickets sold by proprietors in excess of established prices $3,375 to $181, and admissions to roof gardens and cabarets, $42,667 to $34,519. Taxes on free or reduced rate admissions increased from $5,760 to $7,192, and on permanent use or lease of boxes and seats from nothing to $2,666.

POPULARITY OF AMERICAN FILMS SHOWING WIDE GAIN IN HOLLAND

German Films Losing, English Generally Weak, But French Product Is Making Important Place in the Dutch Market

by PHILIP DE SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

American film product is enjoying a wide and increased popularity with Holland theatre audiences as is indicated from the figures for 1938 showing the total of pictures imported into the country. Product from the United States reached the number of 338 out of a total of 539 films imported from all countries, an increase of 26 more pictures than during the preceding year, 1937. Germany ranked a poor second with only 84 productions, France with 59 and England with 22. During 1937, from a total of 499 films, American product accounted for 312; Germany numbered 75; France sent 45 and England imported 31.

Germans Losing Ground

In spite of geographical and linguistic closeness, German films are losing popularity with the Dutch audiences. While in 1931, 1932 and 1933, product from Germany totaled nearly as many as the American importations, the following five years have seen a sharp decline in German imports and a corresponding increase in product from the United States. The decline in popularity of German pictures comes from a decrease in the quality of picture production with the advent of the Nazi government and its control over the film industry in that country.

French product, on the other hand, is making an increasingly important place for itself in the Dutch import market. Although at the present time there is no possibility of France replacing the United States in first place position as leader in films import, French pictures are meeting with increased popularity in Holland due to a careful selection of product. Only the best productions are distributed by Independent offices. Films such as "Quai des Brumes," "Prisons des Femmes," "Pepe le Moko" (the French edition of "Algiers") starring Jean Gabin, "Les Soeurs Klee," "Les 5 Sous de Lavarede" with Fernandel, "Prison sans Barreaux" have received excellent box office patronage from the Dutch picture goer. This program of exhibiting superior French product will be continued for 1939-40, during which period there will be an increase in the number of films from France, including such pictures as "Gibraltar," "Hotel du Nord," "La Bête Humaine," and "La Loie Sacrée."

English Films Weak

Business on English pictures is generally weak in Holland. However, there is one exception to this condition in the case of George Formby, who is one of England's most popular players, but who up to the release of his picture, "It's in the Air," was unknown to Dutch audiences. "It's in the Air" has been doing outstanding business in all Dutch towns in spite of the summer weather and is now playing its seventh week at the Hague with receipts reported better every day.

It is expected that domestic production is to show more activity. The Dutch national film star, Lilly Bouwmeester, who has made three outstanding films, "Pygmalion," "Daddy Long Legs" and "It Will Be Better Tomorrow," is scheduled to begin a new production in the near future. There are two production centers in Holland. One, the Cinetone Studios, is located in Amsterdam, and the other, under the name of "Filmstad," with Loet C. Barnstijn as owner, is at the Hague, Wassenaar.

The City Theatre Circuit has received permission from the Dutch Bioscoop Bond (National Federation) to produce pictures and the Filmstad studios will be occupied by this organization. Another distributing office with the production of domestic features is the N. V. Filmex which uses the Cinetone studios. Directors of Filmex are Robert Siodmak, Karl Lamac and Frederick Zelnik.

In view of the prominent position of the American companies in Holland, their influence on the construction and organization of the Dutch trade is important and evident. In spite of this fact, however, there has been some trouble between representatives of the Bond (Federation) and American distributors. The request of United Artists to open a branch office has been denied; Metrotone News has been banned because of existing competition in the newsreel field, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has been denied permission for a theatre in Amsterdam. The American companies are all members of the Bioscoopbond, only under whose name the distribution and exhibition of pictures are possible. In the event of an impasse between the managing board of the Bond and the American companies it would be possible for a boycott to be begun of product from the United States. However, such action would seem to be unlikely since figures show how strongly the Dutch market is influenced by American production. At the present time, the establishment of a United Artists branch office is being held up. Loet C. Barnstijn has been representing the company in Holland for several years.

$643,000 Gross for Quarter

During the first quarter of 1939, a total of 2,536,287 persons visited the motion picture houses in Amsterdam with gross receipts reaching an approximate figure of $643,000. During the corresponding quarter in 1938, the gross admission receipts totaled $591,000. Amsterdam with a population of 800,000 has a number of 35 houses throughout the city. With film business in general growing better, the best money making pictures during the past months have been "Marie Antoinette" (MGM), "Boys Town" (MGM), "The Citadel" (MGM), "Stolen Life" (Paramount), "Les Deux Gosses" (French), "Algiers" (United Artists), "Frankenstein" (Universal), "It's in the Air" (British), "You Can't Take It With You" (Columbia), "Les Loeurs Klee" (French) and "Gunga Din" (RKO).

The Dutch Court has handed down a decision forbidding an exhibitor from cutting a picture and screening it in another form different from the film as originally passed by the Board of Censors. At times Dutch exhibitors have cut a picture when their total program ran too long, particularly on the occasion of double bills, but in the future this practice will be outlawed and only the picture as it is passed by the censorship body will be allowed to be shown in the theatres of Holland.

Showdown on 144 Year Old "Blue Laws"

Delaware's 144-year-old Sunday blue laws, enacted in 1795 to prohibit "any worldly labors," and which have been used as the chief weapon against Sunday movies in the state, are finally headed for a showdown, Attorney-General James R. Morford, of Wilmington, serving notice that if the legislature does not immediately bring the ancient statutes within the scope of modern life, enforcement agencies will proceed to enforce it as it stands.

Mr. Morford's ultimatum came after Caleb M. Wright of Georgetown, attorney for Charles S. Horn, owner of the Blue Hen theatre, Rehoboth Beach, complained that the theatre had been singled out on the blue law Sabbath charges. Mr. Horn paid three successive Sunday fines and his theatre was finally closed on August 13 on the Sabbath breaking charge.

Forwarding his ultimatum to Gov. Richard C. McMullen and members of the General Assembly, Morford offered the services of the attorney general's office, if amendatory legislation is desired.

13 New Houses in Kansas, Missouri

Nine new theatres for a total of more than 4,500 new seats have been constructed since last August or are in process of construction at the present time in Kansas, and four new houses for about 2,000 seats have been built in Missouri in the same period.

This is well above the yearly average for the past five years in Kansas, and is about normal for the western half of Missouri. The yearly average for the five years ended December 31, 1938, runs slightly over six theatres for about 3,600 seas in both Kansas and Western Missouri. Costs have not changed materially in that period, but since the type of construction varies so widely, it is almost impossible to strike an average per house or per 1,000 new seats. Some of the houses are expensive new theatres built from the ground up. Others are fashioned from existing buildings. Even in the case of new theatres built out of old structures, the extent to which the old building is used varies from practically complete use of the existing structure to employment of only one or two sidewalls.

Wichita, Kas., has acquired two theatres in the past few months, Harold Gibbons's 700-seat theatre, not named, and T. H. slothower's 850-seat Sandra. Gus Diamond has the Vogue, 480 seats, in Salina, Kas., and will have the Roxie, 550 seats, in Eldorado, Kas., in another month.

Glen Klock built the new Klock in Fredonia, Kas., about 400 seats, which he has sold to Griffith-Dickinson Theatres, Inc. O. L. Christian is remodeling a building in Blue Mound, Kas., which will have 350 seats. Ray Rezac has broken ground for a new 500-seat house in the Oakland suburb of Topeka, Kas. J. E. Johnson's 300-seat Community at Gardner, Kas., was opened this year, as was D. A. Shadid's Dexter at Dexter, Kas., 400 seats.

Projectionists' Day Tickets

A special ticket has been issued for Motion Picture Projectionists' Day, September 7th, at the New York World's Fair, which will admit the holder to the Little Theatre in the Special Events Building. The tickets, sold at the regular price of admission, can be purchased through P. D. Herbst, chairman of the ticket committee of Local 306, 251 West 42nd Street, New York. P. A. McGuire is chairman of the arrangements committee.

Miami Admission Prices

Admission prices at theatres in metropolitan Miami, owned by Paramount Enterprises, Inc., have not been cut to stimulate business although average attendance has been maintained, it was said this week by W. R. Lynch, general manager, following publication recently that prices there had been cut. Twelve of the company's 13 theatres are now operating, although the Flagler and Hialeah are operating week-ends only.

Atlanta Variety Club Starts; Omaha Elects

September 14th has been set tentatively as the date for the presentation of a charter to the Atlanta Variety Club, Tent No. 21, by the national organization. The officers and directors of the Atlanta club have been appointed as the committee to be in charge of the presentation for which elaborate plans are being made. The first membership meeting since the club was organized several weeks ago was held Monday at the Henry Grady Hotel. William K. Jenkins is chief barker.

Members of the Omaha Variety Club have elected Meyer Stern of Capitol Pictures and Leo Doty, United Artists office head, as directors, succeeding Roy Palmquist and E. D. Perkins. Mr. Palmquist was transferred by Universal to Kansas City and Mr. Perkins returned to the Warner exchange in Minneapolis.

The Pittsburgh Variety Club, Tent No. 1, voted this week to co-sponsor a boy's camp, and is conducting a drive for funds under the leadership of Ira H. Cohn, chief barker, and I. Elmer Ecker. Other members of the general committee are John H. Harris, Harry Kalmine, Dan Hamill, Larry Katz, Art Levy, Burt Bishop, Archie Fineman, Al Abrams and Dr. L. G. Beinhauer.

The Variety Club of Oklahoma City, Okla., will hold a board of directors meeting in the Black Hotel to decide on a permanent meeting place for the club and to consider applications of new members and to decide on some form of charity activity.

The fourth annual golf tournament of the Cincinnati Variety Club was held Monday at Summitt Hills Country Club, Covington, Ky. Proceeds were turned over to the St. Mary's Hospital fund which the club is sponsoring.

On behalf of Tent 11, Washington Variety Club, Rudy Berger has accepted a trophy from John Harris, national chief barker, in recognition of the club's charity work in the past year. The trophy was voted by the national convention of Variety Clubs, which acclaimed the Washington tent "the most humanitarian tent in America."

Work Being Completed On Film Bibliography

Work on Film Index, the 800 page bibliography of motion picture literature in preparation by the Federal Writers' Project of New York City, has reached the stage of editing of galley proofs.

The volume will be distributed by the H. W. Wilson Company, which shares publication sponsorship with the Museum of Modern Art Film Library. It includes classified and annotated guides to some 10,000 books and magazine articles dealing with the creative and technical aspects of film making. It also will offer reference to selected reviews of some 4,000 important films classified according to type. The book will sell for ten dollars a copy.

Benson With Universal

Australians Ask Reciprocal Quota

Efforts will be made by film interests in Sydney, N.S.W., to achieve reciprocal quota action by the British government. The aim is to amend the British films act to make Australian-produced films eligible for British renters quota credit.

Meanwhile, New South Wales exhibitors are disturbed over fulfilling their British obligations. There are four first-runs which use about 18 shows a year, six that use 36 shows and another three that use about 45 programs yearly. On the new 15 per cent quota basis these houses alone would need a total of over 30 class "A" British films to fill the quota requirements.

In the subsequent and suburban runs, where as many as 200 and 300 shows are used yearly, the problem promises to be even more acute. More than 100 British pictures with some strength are needed to fill the bill, and British production plans for the year, according to present schedules, do not call for that many top quality films.

Signing of the Woodabe circuit in New Zealand, for the 1939-40 product, was announced this week by Arthur Kelly, foreign sales manager of United Artists. Mr. Woodabe has been in New York for several weeks.

Seletsky in New Haven

Sam Seletsky has taken up his new duties as Republic manager in New Haven. George Rabinowitz, his predecessor, occupies Seletsky's former post, in charge of Western Massachusetts and Rhode Island, out of the Boston exchange.

Three RKO Foreign Sales Meets Held in August

Three RKO foreign sales conventions take place during the month of August, with one already held and two more scheduled. A Rio de Janeiro meeting for the Brazilian sales force opened last Friday, with Bruno Cheli, Brazilian manager, presiding. In attendance were Phil Reisman, foreign manager, and Nat Liebeskind, southern South American supervisor.

On Tuesday the company's Australian and New Zealand sales forces met at Sydney, with Ralph Doyle, manager of the territory, presiding. This will be followed by a convention at Buenos Aires on August 31st for the Argentine sales force.

FitzPatrick Gets New Contract

James A. FitzPatrick, producer of "Traveltalks" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has signed a new contract as producer with the company. He will issue 12 short subject travel films for release in the 1939-'40 season, dealing with North and South America.

Martin Quigley Returns

Martin Quigley returned to New York from Europe on Friday following a two months' visit abroad during which he studied motion picture conditions in England, Ireland, France, Italy and Spain.

WARNER, NATIONAL MANAGERS HEAR OF BETTER PRODUCT POSSIBILITIES

Gibraltar Circuit, Also in Annual Meeting, Approve Code Principles, Attack Neely Bill; Big Show Season Is Chief Topic

Important operating problems of the day and the general state of affairs in exhibition highlighted discussions at three circuit conventions this week.

Philadelphia territorial operators of Warners—largest bloc of the circuit, heard their general manager, Joseph Bernhard, warn that a manager's eye to operating expenses can mean the difference between profit and loss; Denver and Missouri divisions of Fox-National Theatres were apprised that the Neely Bill, the trust suits and other industry problems will not affect product quality; Colorado partners of the Gibraltor Circuit met in Denver to analyze problems affecting their 39 houses.

In practically every instance of convention address improvement in product quality was stressed.

Schlanger at Warner Meet

The fourth annual Philadelphia circuit managers meeting, including all managers, district managers and heads of departments of Warners, was held last Tuesday at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia. Philadelphia circuit manager Ted Schlanger was chairman. The meeting was also addressed by Gradwell Sears, general sales manager for Warner Brothers; Lester Krieger, film booker and buyer for Philadelphia, and Harry Goldberg, in charge of advertising, publicity and exploitation for all Warner theatres.

Mr. Bernhard stressed the importance of getting the most out of each picture; that there is no picture made for which some alert manager cannot figure out a valuable sales angle; and that if a manager is to succeed he must be alive to these possibilities. He pointed out that a careful check on expenses can, over a period of time, mean the difference between a profit and a loss.

Mr. Bernhard announced that he would give an automobile to each of three Philadelphia managers who during the next year, by reason of their ingenuity and application of exploitation possibilities, show the greatest results.

Sears Is Speaker

Grad Sears spoke on the line-up of Warner pictures for the new season.

Telegrams were read, including a message from Jack L. Warner, in charge of production, and from S. Charles Einfeld, publicity and advertising director of Warner Pictures.

Ted Schlanger discussed the problem of service in the theatres—which he declared was paramount in importance. He discussed the company's policy of promotion within the ranks. He rated this as being important, explaining that the policy of the company is not to transfer or shift men around, without consideration of their families and personal conveniences.

He also laid stress on changes brought about by the FHA and various government projects, which results in shifting populations from one locale to another, pointing out that it is important for managers to be alert to these changes in their own neighborhoods.

Mr. Schlanger stated that the proper training of assistant managers is very important.

"In the eyes of the community," he added, "each manager is the company, he is the owner, and only when the manager has gained the respect and good-will of the community in which he works, does he and through him the company, receive the full benefit of that feeling. And only through service can the manager attain that end."

Booking Cooperation Urged

Lester Krieger, film booker and buyer, stressed the necessity of closer cooperation between the district managers and managers in the booking of pictures, as well as in the policies of the theatres as they related to film buying.

After a luncheon at the Bellevue-Stratford, the group reconvened at the Aldine theatre, to be shown the Bette Davis picture, "The Old Maid," after which they were addressed by Harry Goldberg, in charge of advertising, who discussed exploitation for the coming season. He explained that theatres cannot live on "naturals," they are too few and far between; that there is something about every picture that has a definite appeal to either a community or to some particular group—and that managers must be alert to make themselves aware of the special audiences that are being created.

Skouras at Fox Meeting

With 75 managers and Denver headquarters' men attending, the Fox Intermountain convention was held in Denver with Spyros Skouras attending. Rick Ricketson, intermountain division head, gave a luncheon for Mr. Skouras to which over 200 were invited. Mr. Skouras spoke on better theatre management and better service to the public, keeping in mind the theme of the convention—"How to Sell Tickets."

At the conclusion, the managers presented Mr. Skouras with a watch.

Mr. Skouras declared the theatre to be the most powerful agency to instill in Americans "a love of country," and called attention to the policy of Fox theatres, inaugurated several months ago, of selling America to Americans by way of the screen.

Admitting that some unintentional bad practices may have developed in the film and theatre business in its career, Mr. Skouras declared they were not so great as to preclude correction.

Earlier in the week, at a meeting of the Fox midwest division, in Excelsior Springs, Mo., Mr. Skouras declared that, regardless of the outcome of the Federal suits against the major companies, the Neely bill and the moves for divorcement of exhibition from distribution, the public will get better entertainment and the theatre manager will not be seriously hampered by any resulting conditions.

Rise of Businessmen Told

Elmer C. Rhoden, head of Fox Midwest, told the managers that the old type of showman who depended entirely on imagination is gone, and that the business man has replaced him in successful theatre operation. He declared he knew many great showmen who had failed, but no great business men.

With the winners in the Spyros Skouras showmanship campaign made known during the week in New York for each of the five National Theatres' division, a new drive, to be called the Fourth National Theatres Contest, was announced for Labor Day, to continue until December 24. Although $26,000 has been given away in the last campaign, the new drive will offer as high as $65,000, based on earnings above quotas of the various theatres, districts and divisions.

At their sixth annual meeting in Denver, the directors of Gibralter Enterprises, this week, agreed the proposed motion picture code to be a necessary thing for the independent, and noted that only fair rules governing arbitration would ever be acceptable to the strictly independent theatre owners.

Gibralter Enterprises, organized in 1934 by Charles R. Gilmour, formerly a Warner exchange manager in Denver, has grown from the original 13 theatres to 39, located in the Denver area. Each group is operated as formerly, by one well known in the field, and one of the directors of the company. They include Mr. Gilmour, president; E. John Greer, Santa Fe, N. M., chairman of the board and treasurer; Everett Cole, Alamosa, Colo., treasurer; and E. J. Schulte, Casper, Wyo.; E. W. Ward, Silver City, N. M.; T. F. Murphy, Raton, N. M., and W. H. Ostenberg, Scottsbluff, Neb., vice-presidents.

Radio Appearances Protested

The directors protested against the continued appearance of screen stars on radio programs and declared the derogatory activities of so-called radio "gossip columnists" were detrimental to the exhibitors, and said that such appearances and activities are one of the theatres' greatest competition. This protest will be carried to the producers and distributors.

Producers and distributors were asked to make available more proofs of ad mats, apart from the regular press books. Gibralter feels this would be an economy for the film companies, since at present several full press books are needed by most theatres for ad proofs they contain.

It was the unanimous opinion that the Neely bill would work unsurmountable hardships on individuals in the theatre field.

Managers, publicity directors and maintenance men met in their own convention, which was attended only for a brief period by the directors. Subjects under discussion and the speakers included "Executive Management," C. H. Chidley, Casper, Wyo.; "Fundamentals of Theatre Operation," T. W. Thompson, Loveland, Colo.; "Advertising and Publicity," W. C. Boston, Scottsbluff, Neb., and the coming product was discussed by Fred Knill, Denver, head booker.

Plans were also discussed for the Gibralter "Greater Show Season" which will start in all their houses October 1.

Cinecolor Announces Single Coated Stock

Cinecolor this week announced that all its prints will be delivered immediately on single coated stock (emulsion on one side only) produced by a new method. The new process, Cinecolor says, has the following advantages:

1. Makes refocussing unnecessary; 2. Sharper images; 3. Lower Cinecolor price, reduction effective immediately; 4. Possibility of scratches reduced 50 per cent with emulsion on one side of film only; 5. Grain reduced; 6. Splicing same as black and white—no longer necessary to scrape both sides.

Abbott on Coast

John E. Abbott, executive vice-president of the Museum of Modern Art, New York, and director of the Film Library of the museum, arrived in Hollywood this week for a business and holiday visit.

Westerns Have Outgrown Hollywood

—So We're "Shooting" Ours In Arizona!

Romantic ARIZONA, one of the least settled of the frontier States, is ideal for pictures. In many localities it is just as it appeared to the trail-blazing '49-ers, the two-gun bad-men and the pioneers who risked the scalping knives of the savage redskins to carve a Great State out of the wilderness.

Beautiful ARIZONA, with its rugged, awe-inspiring mountain peaks piercing skies of heavenly grandeur; its far-flung deserts dotted with fantastic lava buttes and historical waterholes; its rolling plains feeding millions of cattle and sheep; its thousands of Indians living in the same primitive manner as did their fighting forefathers; its pine forests, deep canyons and national monuments. . . .

All This Natural Magnificence Will Be Ours!

Breath-taking scenery never before photographed, great ranches teeming with livestock; rushing streams, sparkling lakes and roaring waterfalls; real cowboys and cowgirls; Indian villages; cow-towns and settlements which never grew up. . . .

In This Splendidly Vast Empire We Will Make WESTERNS
As They Should Be Made—

Authentic, Genuine, Educational—and Entertaining!

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Columbia

NORTH OF THE YUKON: Charles Starrett, Linda Winters—Played with "You Can't Get Away with Murder." Double bill that pleased fine. Both entertaining.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

OUTSIDE THESE WALLS: Dolores Costello, Michael Whalen, Virginia Weidler—Just an implausible picture that pleased very few. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU: James Stewart, Lionel Barrymore, Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold, Spring Byington, Ann Miller—Let me add my bit of praise at this late date for one of the finest pictures to come out of Hollywood in many a moon. Best Sunday business for some time. Comment 100% satisfactory. Running time, 127 minutes. Played August 6-7.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

First National

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Strictly for the femmes. Better than average draw. Heavy stuff but this Davis gal eats it up. Picture will do business. Running time, 106 minutes. Played July 19-20. —R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

DAUGHTERS COURAGEOUS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Fay Bainter, Donald Crisp, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—See this production by all means before you book it. The writer viewed it. My verdict is an ordinary B picture. No action, no entertainment. Just a review of a husband deserting his family and coming back after 20 years just as his wife was about to marry another man. She marries the other man and the husband goes tramping again. That's all. Cost very little to produce and will produce very little business and produced very little entertainment. Running time, 107 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

KID FROM KOKOMO, THE: Wayne Morris, Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien, May Robson—Very good program picture. Does not reach the women but the men will like the comedy and action. Business average.—G. D. Carpenter, Colonial Theatre, Valdese, N. C. General patronage.

SWEEPSTAKES WINNER: Marie Wilson, Johnny Davis, Allen Jenkins—A silly picture. Unreasonable situations. Children only.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T GET AWAY WITH MURDER: Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page—Played with "North of the Yukon." Double bill that pleased fine. Both entertaining.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BROADWAY SERENADE: Jeanette MacDonald, Lew Ayres, Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter—Bad business. Excellent picture. Very few people in my town appreciate Miss MacDonald's singing. Business (for some reason) extra good on "Sweethearts" but nothing on "Broadway Serenade."—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

BROADWAY SERENADE: Jeanette MacDonald, Lew Ayres, Ian Hunter, Frank Morgan—Was surprised at this picture. Very good. The patrons never missed Nelson Eddy. Everyone satisfied. Average draw. Running time, 113 minutes. Played August 2-3. —R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

BURN 'EM UP O'CONNOR: Dennis O'Keefe, Cecilia Parker, Harry Carey, Nat Pendleton—Too much outside competition to rate this one. Plenty of thrills and good comedy by Nat Pendleton. O. K. for Friday and Saturday. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 4-5.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

MARIE ANTOINETTE: Norma Shearer, Tyrone Power, John Barrymore, Robert Morley, Anita Louise, Gladys George, Joseph Schildkraut—Business bad.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont. General patronage.

MIRACLES FOR SALE: Robert Young, Florence Rice, Gloria Holden, Frank Craven, Henry Hull—A hair-raising thriller with murders, ghosts and comedy. I run this on release date during carnival week and it pleased the young folks. I did not see the entire show at one time and am not sure yet who killed who and why, but that kind of show is popular here. An excellent cast, of which Gloria Holden, Frank Craven and Henry Hull are outstanding. If they like a mystery show, they will like this one. Running time, 71 minutes. Played August 4-6.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

STRONGER THAN DESIRE: Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce—Good program picture which failed to draw. Played August 5-6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S BRIDE: John Howard, Heather Angel, Reginald Denny—As good as the average Drummond stories. Failed to excite extra business. Running time, 63 minutes. Played August 9-11. —W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

I'M FROM MISSOURI: Bob Burns, Gladys George —Good picture, but, of course, not as good as "Arkansas Traveler." Paramount, why not make "Arkansas Traveler Returns"?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LADY'S FROM KENTUCKY: George Raft, Ellen Drew, Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts—Average weekend business. Our patrons liked it. Raft and Hugh Herbert both favorites here. Running time, 75 minutes. Played July 30-31.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarenece, Iowa. Rural patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR LEGS: Betty Grable, John Hartley, Donald O'Connor, Jackie Coogan—A swell little feature that pleased our audiences. Running time, 65 minutes. Played August 5-8.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

NIGHT WORK: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—Entertaining program picture which failed to draw. Played August 7-8.—E. M. Frieburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE (Reissue): Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye—Not much business left in it. Average too low as to business. Running time, 80 minutes. Played August 9-11.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Republic

BLUE MONTANA SKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—For the first time in many pictures Autry gets shot. We had begun to think he wore a bullet-proof vest. "Frog" Burnette, as usual, draws the chuckles. Up to the Autry standard. Running time, 56 minutes. Played July 28-29.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

COLORADO SUNSET: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey, Buster Crabbe—Good picture; good business. First business I have had this week. Played August 11-12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DESPERATE ADVENTURE, A: Ramon Navarro, Marian Marsh, Margaret Tallichet, Eric Blore—Just a desperate adventure when you play this class of stuff. Running time, six reels. Played July 27.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—Many thanks, Republic and Gene, for a show that my patrons like. Brother exhibitors, get this series and your patrons will thank you for playing them. Ruined my opposition, a tent show, with this program. Played July 21-22.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. Rural patronage.

NIGHT RIDERS: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Doreen McKay, Ruth Rogers—Good western. Understand Corrigan and Terhune are no longer with Republic. Monogram, why not spend some extra money and sign two stars with Jack Randall in a series of westerns. They would be really good business getters.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RKO Radio

GUNGA DIN: Victor McLaglen, Cary Grant, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Joan Fontaine—Much enjoyed by my patrons. Plenty of action. Have been waiting since April to play same, but, however, was enjoyed by all. Running time, 104 minutes. Played August 3. —A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

LOVE AFFAIR: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer—I've seen lots of pictures, but this one tops them all for perfect direction. How Leo McCarey can miss getting the Academy Award is beyond me. He has something on the ball. The cast was exceptionally good. The acting superb. Not often can one witness a perfect picture like this one. Played August 6-8.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. Rural patronage.

TROUBLE IN SUNDOWN: George O'Brien, Ray Whitley, Rosalind Keith—How the cow hands and hay balers went for this one. Ideal for Friday-Saturday. Played July 28-29.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. Rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FRONTIER MARSHAL, THE: Randolph Scott, Nancy Kelly, Cesar Romero, Binnie Barnes—As good as producers claim it to be. Excellent plot, cast, action with outstanding performance by Randolph Scott. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 5-8.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

JONES FAMILY "IN HOLLYWOOD": Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—I am very much afraid that the public is getting fed up with this series. Families have their troubles alright, but there is the deadly sameness in all of this series.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Tyrone Power, Sonja Henie, Rudy Vallee, Edna May Oliver—This is a picture that will go good in any spot. Business very good considering the competition. Step on this attraction and watch the women come to see Tyrone Power and the men to see Sonja Henie. Running time, 87 minutes.— G. D. Carpenter, Colonial Theatre, Valdese, N. C. General patronage.

SUSANNAH OF THE MOUNTIES: Shirley Temple, Randolph Scott, J. Farrel MacDonald, Margaret Lockwood—Fox's darling is going the way of all child stars. Each picture she slips a little more. Shirley is still her own sweet self, but all the scenes are so palpably fed to her and we see a definite falling off of the adult patrons that used to go to her. Fox, I think, is finding it increasingly hard to find stories that the adult public will accept. This certainly was not one of them. The fact that Fox took her out of the percentage bracket leads me to fear that the vogue of child stars is passing. Maybe not this year, but this I do know: that she is only doing just average business where we used to stand them out on her pictures two years ago.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

YOUNG MR. LINCOLN, THE: Henry Fonda, Alice Brady, Arleen Whelan, Marjorie Weaver—Failed miserably at the box office. A perfect picture in every way except drawing power, which is the most important thing. Played on Sunday and they all stayed away in bunches. Played July 30-31.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kansas. General patronage.

United Artists

MADE FOR EACH OTHER: Carole Lombard, James Stewart, Lucille Watson, Charles Coburn—Very good. However, not much said either way. At least, nobody kicked. A little below par for weekend business. Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 23-24.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Virginia Bruce, Fredric March, Patsy Kelly—There goes your pocketbook. No good for us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ZENOBIA: Oliver Hardy, Jean Parker, Harry Langdon, Billie Burke, Alice Brady, James Ellison, June Lang, Stepin Fetchit, Hall Johnson Choir—Very good comedy, but not so good as the old Laurel and Hardy comedies were. An elephant can't fill Laurel's place, even such a good elephant as "Zenobia." Excellent supporting cast including Harry Langdon, Jean Parker, Stepin Fetchit, Alice Brady. The highlight was the singing by the Hall Johnson Choir. Running time, 73 minutes. Played August 2-3.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Universal

DRACULA (Reissue): Bela Lugosi; FRANKENSTEIN (Reissue): Boris Karloff—Here's a sleeper program for a midweek date. Use lots of paper, the weak heart stunt and nurse and doctor angle and a midnight show and sit back and watch the two-bit pieces roll in. You can make enough on this to go to the World's Fair. Played July 6-7.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. Rural patronage.

FAMILY NEXT DOOR: Hugh Herbert, Joy Hodges, Juanita Quigley, Eddie Quillan—Hugh Herbert saves this picture from being a dismal flop. The quicksand scene, even the kids detected that. Running time, 61 minutes. Played July 26-27.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

HELL'S KITCHEN: Margaret Lindsay, Ronald Reagan, "Dead End Kids"—Strong B product that pleased generally. Stand alone anywhere.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Dick Powell, Ann Sheridan, Gale Page, Ronald Reagan—Pretty good musical show which failed to draw. Played August 9-10.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID: James Cagney, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane—Lots of "oomph" in this one for box office. Although it gets only two and one-half stars, it is good for six stars with us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

HOME ON THE RAGE: Broadway Comedies—Fine. Lots of laughs.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 6—Well received. Fine.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Educational

CRAZY INVENTIONS: Treasure Chest—No entertainment value. Pulled it out after first night. Running time, one reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

COUSIN WILBUR: Our Gang—The usual laugh packed Gang comedy. These shorts please everyone from Grandpa to the baby. The best short on the market so far as audience appeal goes. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DARK MAGIC: Robert Benchley—Entertaining but too subtle for small towns.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE DIVING: Pete Smith Specialties—Fair sport short but these shorts do not click. They want comedy and are not satisfied with anything else. Running time, eight minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PROPHET WITHOUT HONOR: MGM Miniatures—Entertaining filler.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RADIO HAMS: Pete Smith Specialties—Very entertaining short. Pleased. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Paramount

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Issues 89, 90—King and Queen in the U.S.A. Very good newsreel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BRAVE LITTLE TAILOR: Walt Disney Cartoons—Nice colored cartoon. Running time, one reel.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

DONALD'S OSTRICH: Walt Disney Cartoons—Too short for any value. Running time, six minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 10: Dixie-U. S. A.—Very best of entertainment. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

YOUTH IN THE SADDLE: Ed Thorgersen (Sports)—Just a filler.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

LARRY CLINTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A dandy. Orchids to you, Warners.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LEITH STEVENS AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—All band acts the same. Running time, one reel.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

With 17 pictures completed, nine now in production and five more set to roll before the end of the month, Paramount this week set release dates on 13 of its 1939-40 season's product for the first quarter of the new season.

The release schedule for the first three months, starting September 1, will consist of the following 13 productions: September 1, "Death of a Champion" with Lynne Overman, Robert Paige, Joseph Allon and Virginia Dale; September 2, "Range War," first of the Harry Sherman Hopalong Cassidy subjects, starring William Boyd; September 15, "Beau Geste," the William A. Wellman production starring Gary Cooper, Ray Milland and Robert Preston with Brian Donlevy and Susan Hayward; September 22, "$1,000 a Touchdown," co-starring Joe E. Brown and Martha Raye with Eric Blore and Susan Hayward; September 29, "My Love for Yours," co-starring Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll with Allan Jones and Helen Broderick.

Four pictures scheduled for October release are: October 6, "What a Life," adapted from the Broadway play and co-starring Jackie Cooper and Betty Field with John Howard and Janice Logan; October 13, "Jamaica Inn" starring Charles Laughton and Maureen O'Hara, Leslie Banks and Robert Newton; October 20, "Television Spy," with William Henry, Judith Barrett, William Collier Sr. and Richard Denning; October 27, "Disputed Passage," based on the Lloyd C. Douglas book, with Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Howard and Judith Barrett.

November releases include: November 3, "Argentina," a Hopalong Cassidy, starring William Boyd; November 10, "The Cat and Canary," co-starring Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard with John Beal and Douglas Montgomery; November 17, "Llano Kid" starring Tito Guizar with Gale Sondergaard, Alan Mowbray and Jane Clayton; November 24, "Rulers of the Sea," the Frank Lloyd production starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood and Will Fyffe with George Bancroft and Montagu Love.

Kent Drive Meetings Held by 20th Century-Fox

The second series of branch meetings in conjunction with the S. R. Kent Sales Drive for Twentieth Century-Fox started at the Los Angeles Exchange on Thursday, August 24. Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution, and drive leader M. A. Levy conducted the meetings in Los Angeles, as well as those in San Francisco, Portland, Salt Lake City, and Denver. At Denver, William J. Kupper, western division sales manager, will join the drive leader and attend the meetings to be held there and in Kansas City, Dallas, New Orleans and Atlanta. Later Drive Leader Levy will accompany central division manager W. C. Gehring and eastern division manager William Sussman at meetings at the central and eastern exchanges. Most of the meetings will be joint sessions with managers, salesmen and bookers from two to four exchanges present.

Mr. Wobber will leave after the Denver meeting for New York, arriving September 5th.

Indian Representative Here

K. S. Hirlekar of Bombay and representing the Motion Picture Society of India, touring the United States in a study of the motion picture industry, is in New York, incidentally making protest against the treatment of India and its people on the screen. It is his contention that the American viewpoint, as reflected in films, has been affected by influences aimed at subjugation of India.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

And So Was Barnum

Businessmen may also be showmen. But that does not happen very often. Neither, as a rule, do showmen make good businessmen. The two do not usually go together. Temperament does not allow for it.

At the recent Fox Midwest convention, circuit head Elmer Rhoden said, according to Motion Picture Daily, "The old type of showman who depended entirely upon imagination is gone, and the businessman has replaced him in successful theatre operation."

It was only two years ago, also at a Fox Midwest convention, that Mr. Rhoden called for more "Barnum" in operation and closer adherence to the type of colorful showmanship that marked the successes of the original "P. T." He was right the first time.

THE JOB HE IS SUPPOSED TO DO

Years back, there was a story told about the Missouri exhibitor who always put in his best licks at the theatre. Regardless of conditions, he managed, more often than not, to turn in profitable grosses. Came an exhibitor from a nearby town, filled to the ears with fears and alarms about business.

"Look at the papers," the visitor moaned. "Bad times, unemployment, strikes, and Lord knows whatever else. Don't you know the country is going just plumb to hell," he queried.

The busier-than-a-bee theatreman replied, a trifle apologetically: "Tell you the truth, I'm so busy here at the theatre all day, I don't really have a minute to myself to read about how bad things are."

In last week's book was published the eight-week campaign put over by Paul Binstock, at Warners' Lyric, in Hartford, Ct., to find a local entrant for the Miss America title. Binstock's house is a subsequent-run neighborhood. It was the first time in years that the project had been endeavored. In the beginning, the Round Tabler, a comparative newcomer, had a tough time getting support. But knowing he had something, Paul persevered and, as detailed, wound up in a blaze of glory.

On a following page is set down the work done by R. S. Helson, to put over "The Mikado," in Naperville, Ill., a situation of some 5,000 population. Helson never stopped to bother himself whether or not Universal's Gilbert and Sullivan epic would be bought by his small-town patronage. He knew it was top-grade entertainment, went out and sold it for grosses that compared with business done on the year's best dates.

Legislation, trade practice deliberations, strikes and other outside influences that concern the industry are not within the immediate province of the manager. His importance is to be gauged only by the direct course he travels between campaign and ticket-window. Hermetically-sealed against any distraction that may take him from the appointed path, your theatreman who is doing the job he is supposed to do pursues his objective with a cold, relentless fury.

EASILY THE BEST ANSWER

Maybe it's because your Chairman is a pushover for Bette Davis, but that can't be all the reason why three rousing cheers are called for in recognition of the job Warners have turned out on "The Old Maid". In casting, direction, story construction, and production it becomes an adult picture that calls for just a teeny bit of dancing in the streets.

Attractions such as these lend invaluable aid in defending the screen from critical assault. It is to be noted that an outstanding picture, like the customer, wins all arguments.

ALWAYS THE BIGGEST NEWS

Top news of the day—any day—is announcement of promotion among members. Thus immediately to be broadcast is the flash that Hobson S. Johnson, active Round Tabler and Second Quarter Quarter-Master Medal winner, is advanced to general manager, Pal Theatres, of Vidalia, Ga., by circuit head, M. F. Brice. We join with the membership in wishing for Johnson the biggest kind of success in the new spot.

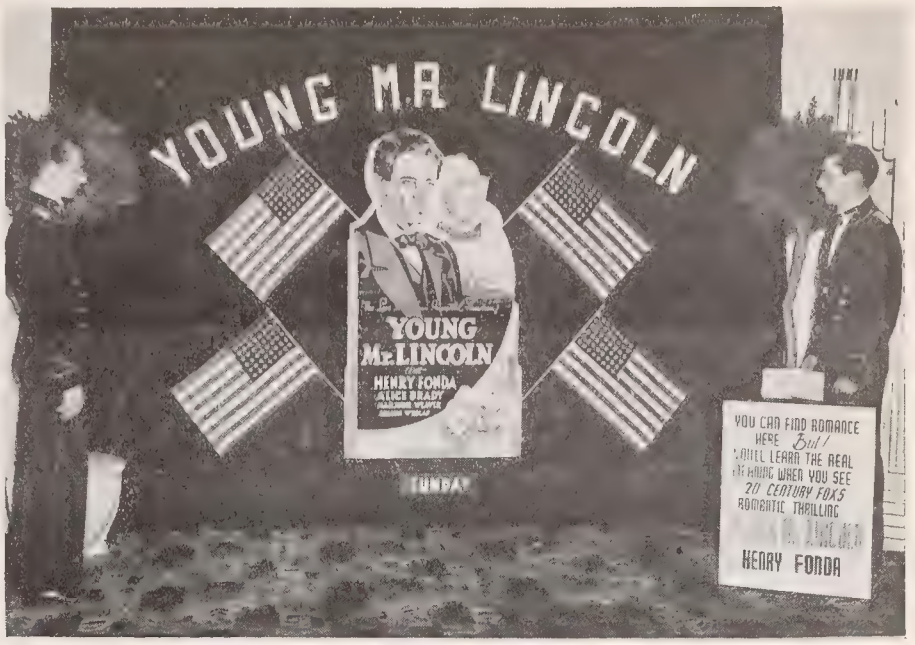
Round Table In Pictures

Promoted, not for the occasion but for good, is the giant chair illustrated at right and used in the lobby of Loew's State, Cleveland, by Milt Harris, publicist, for "Wizard of Oz". Attractive girl seated in chair read a copy of the book. Contest angle was brought in by offer of guest tickets to those who could submit longest list of words culled from title letters.

Reproduced below is lobby panel on "Dark Victory" used by Jim Eshelman at the Huron in Huron, So. Dak. Photographic enlargements of Davis and Brent cut in circle were mounted on compoboard and raised 2 inches from background of silver metallics. Lettering was done in black, while the compoboard Academy statuette in bronze was appliqued on. Entire display was on a chrome-bordered frame with blue velour back.

Fourteen perambulators wheeled by 12 nurses, brought up in the front and rear by boys in white each carrying one of the title letters of "Bachelor Mother", was the street stunt used for that picture by Manager Jay Golden at the RKO Palace in Rochester, N. Y. Aggregation covered streets ahead and during run. . . . Highlight of Dick Walsh's "Coast Guard" campaign at the Lafayette in Buffalo was tiein with local Coast Guard from whom the theatreman borrowed surf boat for display in front of house and in lobby. Flags, lyle gun, breeches buoy, flares, etc., were also promoted.



Above is exterior of the "Maisie" dude ranch set up in the lobby of the Utah, Salt Lake City, Utah, by Norman Sprowl for that date. Provided with peephole, the curious, on looking in, saw a 3-inch miniature fan dancer. Another exploitation stunt used was theatre attendant seated in an easy chair, with tiein copy, in the parking meter zone in front of theatre.

During the absence of conventioning Larry Graburn of the Capitol in Halifax, his chief usher, Freeman Skinner, conceived and carried out the setpiece illustrated below for the engagement of "Susannah of the Mounties". Letters were covered with silver flitters and frames around the stills painted in gold, while the border had chromium strips. Background was done in red and frame in blue.

Planned dignity and simplicity of foyer display design aided Manager Dave Martin no end in selling his "Young Mr. Lincoln" date at the Fox Paramount Theatre in Hollywood. Against a black drop, flags were flanked on either side of cutout of Fonda and Brady.

Promoted from local music store by Thor Hauschild at the Paramount in Marion, Ind., were duplicates of the Krupa drums used in "Some Like It Hot". During run of picture, entire display with setpiece was moved to merchant's window with proper tiein copy.

Snow-Fights In Los Angeles, Tom —Now Isn't That a Bit Unusual?

California's "unusual" weather became a bit more so recently through the connivance of Tom Soriero who staged daily snow-fights out front of the United Artists Theatre in Los Angeles as build-up for his date on "Winter Carnival" and "Second Fiddle". Real snow, trucked in from the mountains, was stacked in the form of a snowdrift, and the usherettes, known locally for their pulchritude, donned bathing suits and gave the snow a good workout. The gals sledded, skied, put on snowball fights with the mobs that tied up traffic to see the fun.

Soriero broadcast invitations to candid camera fans to join the party which took place during one of the hottest weeks of the year. It was staged daily at 11:00 A. M. to catch the noon traffic, and, from all accounts, the Los Angeles folks are still talking about it, since for many of them it proved to be the first time they ever had seen snow. The cost to Tom was nil, since everything was promoted.

Siegal Holds Beach Party At Seashore Theatre

In a resort section, Manager Ed Siegal at the Boardwalk Theatre in Arverne has tied up the nearby hotels on a "Surprise Beach Party" angle which is featured once a week at his house. A talent contest is put on among the various hostelries, with entrants from each appearing on the stage of the Boardwalk. Audience applause decides the winners, Siegal has promoted trophies and flowers for winners and each of hotel's supplying their own talent, plugs the special show in their lobbies.

Also underway at present at his house is a baby popularity contest with promoted photographer snapping all entrants gratis. Ballots for 50 votes each are distributed and to those holding largest number, prizes are awarded.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Remote Control Model In Window Aids "Wings"

For his advance on "Wings of the Navy," D. M. Dillenbeck, manager of the Rialto, in Bushnell, Ill., secured from a local model airplane builder, several flying models which were suspended from the ceiling of his lobby with painted cards giving playdates, etc. Also promoted was an electric remote control flying model, which was planted in prominent store window. Dressing boy in flying togs, "Dil" had him seated at the controls operating the machine.

On opening day at the theatre the City Clerk gave an interesting plug for the picture and discourse on flying. With local weekly running a movie gossip column, the theatreman managed to plant a story on the picture, together with playdates, cast, etc.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Gag Stunts Aid Caldwell On "Hardy's Ride High"

Neat bit of publicity secured for "Andy's Ride High" was put over by Wally Caldwell at Loew's Valentine, Toledo, by the distribution of ace of hearts playing cards which were lucky numbered and carried copy plugging the "ace high" entertainment to be found in the picture. Numbers were planted on lobby board and to those holding corresponding numerals, guest tickets were awarded. Imprinted glassine envelopes each containing a candy kiss were distributed in downtown shopping center, second week of engagement, copy reading: "Sweets to the sweet from the Hardy family." Bookmarks were available through all branches of the public library system, circulating libraries and department stores, and various merchants came through with window tieins.

Tied to radiator caps of parked cars and distributed generally by Caldwell's service staff, were inflated "Tarzan Finds a Son" colored balloons. "Tarzan" book and game windows were featured by department store and five and tens.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Lampe Decorates Truck

Promoting a truck from local automobile agency, Gus Lampe for the "Juarez" opening at the Keith Theatre, in Syracuse then secured cooperation of florist who decorated it so that it was a replica of a portion of the Carlotta Gardens in Mexico. Boy dressed in costume strumming a guitar and singing Mexican songs was in the garden and whenever he collected a crowd, he would throw roses to the ladies.

BALLY STUNT BECOMES CASE AGAINST CITY

In front of a Salt Lake City parking meter, Norm Sprowl seated in a comfortable settee, two boys in dude ranch outfits with sun helmets stamped "Maisie". They moved only to deposit the necessary fees, which run to 10 cents for two hours. Attached to the bally were one-sheet size cards reading: "We're not parking. We're waiting for Maisie, coming to the Utah Friday".

All went well until a motorist wanted the space. Refused, he called the law, but to no avail since the boys were paying the parking fees. An amused crowd gathered. Norm came out to arbitrate. The motorist threatened a lawsuit. It made a good story for the papers.

When the boys moved to avoid trouble, prominent attorney kept the publicity going by writing Sprowl he had a perfect case against the city.

Date on "Mikado" In Town of 5000 Nets Ace Returns

Refusing to be daunted by opinions that "The Mikado" was too top-hat for patrons in the smaller communities, Manager R. S. Helson, Naper, Naperville, Ill. (pop. 5,118) booked the picture, put on a thorough campaign, and came through with tremendous results, he reports, that exceeded his highest expectations.

First gun was a big lobby display topped with giant banner reading, "First Showings Outside of Chicago," the line being used profusely in window displays, cards, herald, programs, publicity and ads. Five weekly local and county papers contributed generously with front-page stories, which Helson writes he secured through his contacts and without the need of passes. Page-one picture stuff in that sector is difficult to crack, he says.

Band Concert Features Tunes

Post cards to the number of 400, containing appropriate personal messages from the manager were addressed to local prominents, music clubs and the better class of patron. Ninety percent of these were returned at the box office. At the weekly band concert playing to over 1,000, Helson bannered the band-stand. He arranged for the band to play numbers from the picture, with one of the musicians doing the vocals. Bandmaster also gave the date a buildup.

At the theatre in advance, the Round Tabler spoke to countless of his patrons as they arrived or left the theatre, selling the picture's highlights and explaining that the theatre had booked the date with the assurance that it would be appreciated by the folks who would appreciate the class of the attraction. The personal contacts proved very helpful and accounted for much of the extra business. All advertising sources in the city and drawing area were treated in the same manner.

Results at the box office held up with grosses on many of the biggest dates and further brought added prestige to the operation. The campaign also brought many new customers, who in Helson's opinion, will develop into regular patrons.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Newspaper Contest Aids "Mr. Chips" for Boucher

Running for a week in the Leader-Republican was Frank Boucher's "Mr. Chips" contest for that picture's advance publicity at the Schine Glove Theatre, in Gloversville, New York. Cash and guest tickets went to readers submitting the best 100-word letters on "My Happiest School Day Experience."

Boucher turned reporter recently, when he by-lined a two-column interview with Charles Coburn for the local paper on the personal appearance of the star who had attended the Schine Convention held a few weeks ago. Theatreman also managed to get a few plugs in the story for some of the forthcoming pictures to appear at the Glove and in which Coburn is starred.

Vote Contest Tops Campaign to Greet Mickey and Judy

Highlights of the advance campaign put on by the Howard Dietz-Oscar Doob forces for "The Wizard of Oz" plus the personal appearance of Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland at the New York Capitol, that rimmed the entire block with waiting throngs, featured a ballot arrangement whereby youngsters from 70 of the Loew metropolitan theatres were picked to head the reception committee that met the starlets at the train on arrival in New York.

Each theatre distributed ballots containing a herald and coupon for name, address, age and school of each child, who were invited to drop these into boxes provided in the lobbies. Girls placed their ballots in boxes above which was a giant cutout of Mickey Rooney, boys depositing theirs in boxes with cutout of Judy Garland. Drawings were held at each theatre. In order to be eligible to serve on the committee, entrants had to be present at the drawings, at which time a boy and girl was chosen to represent each theatre. Winners reported at the Loew home office where they received thir final instructions and four-inch "welcome" buttons which they wore when they went to the train to meet Mickey and Judy. In addition, the boys were presented with imprinted cardboard top hats.

Judy and Mickey Host Kids

The stars then played host at a lunch at the Hotel Waldorf, where Guy Lombardo provided the music to which the kids "cut the rug." New York date included big newspaper, billboard and subway campaign, topped by street bally consisting of the various characters from the picture marching down Broadway.

Same stunt was pulled in New Haven, with the juniors coming in from Worcester, Meriden, Hartford, Waterbury, Bridgeport, Boston and Providence, the situations in the Loew's New England division.

Bell Reports Washington Campaign

In Washington, Ray Bell arranged to meet the stars at the station where one of the stunts was tieup with Daily News which published a coupon to be filled out by local youngsters who wished to be presented. Twenty were selected from a hat and winners posed with Mickey and Judy, picture appearing in paper following day. Three radio announcers with early morning programs of their own were asked to select two youngsters who would be personally presented to the stars. These announcers then went to town plugging the arrival, stage appearance and stars' forthcoming production generously.

Metropolitan Police Boys' Band met the committee at the station where Mickey commandeered a trumpet and Judy a baton and joined in the festivities. Arrival was broadcast by Station WJSV and among highlights was guard of honor of 20 uniformed Capitol ushers and 30 chorines. Commissioner Hazen, Chief of Police, Directors of Boys Clubs and other dignitaries swelled the greeting party.

HE'S "SIOUX FALLS' OWN". The most attractive window display arranged by Manager Ralph E. Phillips in many a moon proved to be an advance for "Wizard of Oz" at the State, Sioux Falls, So. Dak., on behalf of a 21-year-old local boy, a midget, known familiarly as "Kayo" and who appears in the picture and is also shown in costume in the blowup taken from Life magazine. The cutout, center, is lifesize and is surrounded by small cutouts of the mayor and other bigwigs giving the local lad the big hello.

Sarvis Promotes Store On "Darling Daughter"

Giant tieup was effected with leading department store in Warren, Pa., by George Sarvis for his "Yes, My Darling Daughter" campaign at the Library Theatre. Fashion stills, posters and one sheet for a solid week in advance were featured in windows and throughout store. Title was used for a novel newspaper teaser stunt 10 days ahead, promoted heralds were distributed throughout the city and cashier called personal telephone list to plug the attraction. Special radio broadcast was held over WJTN, magazine tieup was made with local news agency, movie magazines carried the story which were sniped with playdates and contact was made with women's clubs, etc., stressing the importance of the film as a guide for mothers with young daughters.

LIPPE ASKS READERS TO PICK ROONEY GAL

For "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever" at Loew's State, Newark, N. J., Publicity Head Al Lippe planted a four-day contest in the Star-Eagle, inviting readers to select which of Mickey Rooney's girl friends in the different "Hardy" pictures they preferred. Each day, paper ran a two-column spread and picture showing Mickey with another girl.

Entrants were required to send the name of the girl favored to the paper, together with names of the other three, accompanied by a 50-word letter giving reasons for the choice. Three cash prizes were given, plus 15 pairs of guest tickets.

Breen Resemblance Contest Held on "Fisherman's Wharf"

In conjunction with Bon Marche, leading department store of Sydney, Australia, the Greater Union Theatres conducted a talent search for an Australian Bobby Breen in connection with the opening of "Fisherman's Wharf" at the Lyceum.

Contest was open to boys 14 and under and ran for four weeks with auditions held thrice weekly during the period. The winners broadcast three times over the store's program. All store publicity carried plug for the picture; wherever possible recordings of Breen were used on broadcasts to accompany the 100-word announcements used to excite interest in the contest.

Prizes were awarded by both the cooperating merchant and the theatre circuit, the latter using their screens to carry the message to the public.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Reserved Seat Angle Stressed By Elliott for "Juarez" Date

A reserved seat campaign was engaged in by Wallace J. Elliott for his "Juarez" opening at the Ohio, in Lima, with an employees' contest consisting of cash prizes to the men in the three local Warner houses who sold the most reservations. Copies of movie magazines were sniped with four by eight stickers announcing the reserved seat policy and then distributed to all beauty parlors, barber shops, etc.

Special 40 by 60 frame was spotted in lobby carrying review of local critic, with stills and card giving full details of picture; frame later moved to empty store window during run. One sheets were planted in hotels, cashiers called complete mailing list week in advance of preview and classified contest was held in cooperating newspaper.

PAST "FORTNIGHT" EXPLOITATIONS

Local Playground Committee Tied to "Susannah" by McCoy

Through the cooperation of the Athens, Ga., local playground committee and newspaper, a Shirley Temple Club was organized by P. E. McCoy at the Georgia Theatre in connection with the showing of "Susannah of the Mounties." Members of the club sold tickets in advance on the picture and identified themselves to the public by wearing "Susannah" badges. Papers cooperated by urging the public to purchase tickets from members as a percentage would be given to the playground committee to be used in sending underprivileged kids to camp. This was also played up by the playground publicity staff in daily column.

All club members were guests of the theatre opening day and prizes were promoted from various merchants for award to the girls who sold the greatest number of tickets. McCoy reports that all went well and a total of seven camp trips were given by the committee as a result of the advance sale.

Saxton Asks Patrons to Select Most Beloved Teachers on "Chips"

Readers of the Baltimore News-Post were asked to help select the six most beloved veteran school teachers recently for a testimonial dinner and theatre party as part of Billy Saxton's advance publicity for "Mr. Chips" at Loew's Century. Readers were required to write a letter to "Mr. Chips" at the paper, submitting their list and reasons for their selections. A board of local judges decided the winners, who in addition to receiving cash awards were guested by the theatre management. Cooperating paper carried stories and art work right through the contest, winding up with story on the banquet and presentation of prizes. Of course, theatre and picture were prominently mentioned throughout.

Miller and Pearlstein Circularize Patrons on "Four Daughters"

Government postcards with "Four Daughters" tiein copy were mailed to special list by Ed Miller and Manny Pearlstein for that picture's opening at Warner's Hippodrome, in Cleveland. In addition letters were sent to a select list of club women three days ahead. A "Lane Sisters" sundae was featured by chain five and ten, store carrying window and fountain streamers, leading restaurants aided by use of table cards plugging the attraction. Postal Telegraph distributed jumbo blanks with special imprint which were spotted in all their branch windows and all bikes of messenger boys were covered with theatre signs five days ahead.

Covered Wagon Street Bally Helps Brown Sell "Dodge City"

Promoting a covered wagon, Robert H. Brown, Ritz Theatre, in New Kensington, Pa., covered it with stills and catch lines as advance on "Dodge City," and had it cover downtown area and wherever crowds congregated. Another street bally consisted of large barrel planted in front of theatre on which was printed "Don't feed the animals." Wire covered top of barrel and on looking in, the curious were greeted with picture copy. Two foot title letters cut from material were spotted on traveller curtains three weeks ahead of playdates, teaser line placed at bottom of newspaper ads week ahead and usher circled around town with card plugging the opening.

HERSHFIELD OPENS PATERNITY WARD

Anxious and expectant fathers of Chattanooga, Tenn., need no longer pace the floors of the local hospitals, according to Samson Hershfield of the Riviera Theatre.

While this theatreman appreciates the fact that the hospitals "never lose a father", he has kept in mind the poor, frayed nerves of the to-be pappies and has through local dailies extended an invitation to them to relax in his theatre and see a picture while waiting for the glad tidings.

Further, Samson personally calls on the mothers after junior's arrival and presents them with ducats to be used at a later date.

Bell Conducts Poll to Determine Favorite Show—Gives 'Em "Irene"

With a condensed version of the musical comedy "Irene" due for stage presentation at Loew's Capitol, in Washington, publicist Ray Bell in advance conducted a two week newspaper poll to determine which of 20 hits of the past Loew patrons would like to see produced at the theatre. In addition, there was an abundance of free radio time, window and music tieups, etc. Contest blanks with flier at top "You pick it, we'll produce it" were distributed broadcast and run in paper, followed by a list of outstanding hits with box provided for patron's check, title receiving the greatest number of votes to be produced at the Capitol. Needless to say, "Irene" was the winner. Following this, Bell kept interest alive in the show right up to opening day with stories, art, etc.

American Flag Pins Distributed By Goodenough for "Nazi Spy"

Dave Goodenough's entire "Nazi Spy" campaign at the Chief, in Steamboat Springs, Col., was keyed to the patriotic angle and built around the slogan, "It is your American Privilege to see it." The stunt which drew the most attention was a ribbon badge attached to which was an American flag pin, the stars of which were done in rhinestones. These were worn by entire staff during run of picture and also by waitresses in three largest restaurants, clerks and fountain attendants in all drug stores and clerks in five and tens. All were made to feel that they belonged to a privileged class in being "allowed" to wear the ribbons and displayed them proudly.

DiPesa Secures Complete Coverage In Newspapers and Radio for "Chips"

Concentrating on an intensive newspaper campaign, Joe DiPesa, publicity director, Loew's State and Orpheum Theatres, Boston for "Mr. Chips" landed about 80 cuts and stories during the two weeks' engagement of the picture, a reported new record for those theatres. A six day serialization was planted in the Boston Globe, as was a six day picturization in local Polish paper, full page layout in the Boston Sunday Post with credits and a roto layout in the Sunday Herald, in addition to editorials.

DiPesa used a special "Hello Boston, Goodbye Mr. Chips" card throwaway which was distributed about town by lad dressed in cap and gown. Bookmarks were distributed at bookstores, department stores, lending libraries, etc., and one cent postcards were mailed to a select class list. Book windows were planted, 21 spot announcements were landed over WNAC, another 20 over WEEI, a special movie quiz program over WMEX and Station WORL was tied in on a Hollywood broadcast which brought numerous "Chips" plugs.

Ozzie Nelson Personal Appearance Tied to Soap Box Derby by Taylor

When Ozzie Nelson and his band, with Harriet Hilliard visited Shea's Buffalo, Charles B. Taylor, Buffalo Theatres ad head, tied their appearance to the Courier-Express Soap Box Derby by arranging to have Ozzie present on stage a cup offered by Fred MacMurray to the winner as a memento of "Invitation to Happiness," the current picture. Stunt brought a daily story three days in advance and a photo of the presentation in addition to a full column interview with Harriet Hilliard.

Since Nelson was an outstanding athlete at college, Taylor sold local newspaper on idea of a series of photos on the sports page, six columns wide with proper theatre credit, showing band-leader engaged in various athletic activities, a break which the theatreman reports as helping considerably.

Sparks Holds Snowball Party Weather or Not for "Yukon"

A stunt that attracted city-wide comment and is reported to have increased boxoffice receipts was the snowball party put over for "North of the Yukon" by Manager Robert D. Sparks, Strand Theatre, Henderson, Texas. For a week in advance, a poster in the foyer invited all to the free party of real snowballs which were to be thrown from the marquee of the theatre on opening day. Fifty of the balls contained tickets to see the picture.

Made of ice sawdust secured gratis from local ice house, the balls not containing tickets held slips of paper with copy on forthcoming attractions, with such copy as "slide this snowball down your spine and feel the sensation to be had from seeing 'Hound of the Baskervilles,'" etc.

Local paper gave advance front page notice to the party and Sparks says he was flooded with inquiries.

More Representative Days In Theatremen's Routine

Round Tablers Detail Further Accounts of What Goes On From Opening to Closing

OUTSIDE CONTACTS AID PHILLIPS

Personally, my opinion is a theatre manager that follows a daily routine is letting the world pass him by. The show business is too fast to try to stick to one set routine—that is, generally speaking. There are some things that naturally must have a regular routine, but I am sure you will agree that we must take advantage of every break just as records are made to be broken. However, in my small way, I will attempt here to give you what I have always tried to follow.

On arriving at the theatre, naturally, the first thought is to check the front. By that I mean, to look over all art work, accessories, banners, etc., to see that they are properly displayed for the day. Next comes a slight check of the foyer and the house on the way to the office. My first office duty is to open the mail, check over it, sign reports for the preceding day and generally a short conference with my district manager, who is located on the same floor with me, discussing details, the morning mail or whatever might be new.

Stops at Newspapers

After this the next thing to do is to bank the proceeds of the day just past. After the bank comes the newspaper to place ads, check proofs, a chat with the movie critic to see if there is anything new that would be of benefit to the theatre, or if there is any "hot" news which the theatre might be able to tie in on. Generally there is some time spent in the composing room as after all, the men in this department are important as to making up the ads, spotting them on the page, etc.

On my return to the theatre, all mail is re-checked and answered; then generally an appointment or two. Following this a house check is made to see if the theatre is clean, exits are in good condition and the house in general is ready for the patrons at opening time. There is generally a discussion following on whatever is found or whatever should be done to remedy anything that might be out of place.

Attends Lunch Clubs

The above paragraph lists a daily inspection and once weekly a thorough inspection is made from the basement to the roof, covering every mechanical phase of the operation. This does not mean that everything is not more or less covered daily because it is, but what I wanted to bring out is that once weekly we positively know about the condition of everything in the entire house.

This brings us to lunch time which ordinarily consists of possibly 30 minutes, as it is a good policy to get back to the theatre to see that it is opened properly at 12:45, that the show starts on time and that everything is in good order. However, on an average of three times weekly, there are luncheon clubs to attend or some kind of Chamber of Commerce Committee meeting. These are most important in a town of our size as the contacts and friendships made here are of great value to us.

The afternoons from one to four are generally spent on campaigns, studying and checking bookings, ordering accessories, trailers, special lead and tag trailers and the making of outside contacts. In other words, this is the time we try to sell our attractions and theatre. I have always tried to finish up the office work not later than four in the afternoon so that I might be on the floor an hour before dinner time. Generally this is two hours long unless again there is something special that requires my presence back at the theatre before the dinner hour is over. This happens occasionally on stage attractions when the schedule might call for the stage show to be a little early. Naturally, it is my policy to try to see every performance in its entirety of a stage show.

Checks House After Dinner

The first thought on returning to the theatre after dinner is again to check the front to see that all lights are in condition, the sidewalk is in clean condition, all accessories and art work are properly displayed, the cashier's booth in good order; then on into the theatre to check on the appearance of the service staff; after this, a visit is made to the office to see if there are any special messages or anything that needs immediate attention. Then a check is made on the restrooms, mezzanine, balcony and down stairs again for a walk back to the stage even though there is no attraction playing the stage; then back through the basement to check on the cooling plant and back on the floor to greet patrons until ten o'clock. At the close of the box office, most of my time is spent in the office except an occasional visit to the floor on checking what should be done on tomorrow and what has been done during the current day.

Finds Routine Often Broken

The above, as I said at the start, is a routine we more or less follow, but the routine has to be broken. We do not try to work spasmodically or haphazardly but try to time everything in a good routine. However, there are days when possibly there is no time spent in the office in the afternoon due to some afternoon meeting or activity that it is necessary to attend. Also on the day of opening a new show, every minute of it must be checked to see that the proper routine in all subjects is carried through, all trailers are dated properly and the proper sound setting is given. Also, there are weekly employees' meetings to be held.—Ralph E. Phillips, Manager, State, Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

TOP EFFICIENCY IS BABCOCK AIM

First of all, my assistant, Bill Kamas, and myself have separated our office detail work in such manner as to give both of us what we believe to be maximum efficiency for amount of time put in. Kamas has definite duties for each day of the week which he checks off as completed, turning the sheet in to me at the end of each week. Myself, in turn, keep on my desk a copy of another schedule which I fill out each week, and check items from each day.

For example, on Monday we receive our new bookings from Albany which I enter into my booking book, order mats for, and furnish art department with copy on. On Tuesday we check through our press-books, reading synopsi, and noting tie-up possibilities, etc. Wednesday I accompany Bill on a thorough inspection of both theatres and devote the afternoon to making calls throughout town. These calls are both on tie-ups and purely good-will. It is my practice on this day not so much to call where I want to effect a tie-up at the moment, but more to stop in and just visit with some merchant where, at some future time I might want a tie-up.

A portion of Thursday we devote to studying our bookings with view as to their cost, cast arrangements with view of adjacent bookings, and in case of double bills, the balance.

Friday is devoted to posting of various office records, and bringing accumulated correspondence to date.

Saturday is well filled with kid show rehearsals, pay-rolls, kid show, supervision of floor, and Saturday night stage activity.

Details Typical Day

Now as to the typical day: I will arrive at the office around ten o'clock, open morning mail, and accord immediate action to that requiring it; the balance filing in the "To Reply," "Dead-line," and other files. Following this a quick inspection is made.

Lunch ordinarily occupies the time between twelve and one o'clock, and the afternoon is taken up either with miscellaneous office work or in making outside calls on tie-ups. The house not being a continuous policy house, dinner is taken between 4:30 and 6:30, at which time I return to the theatre and spend the evening until 9:30 in floor supervision, in lobby or foyer during inflow, and on sidewalk in front on all breaks, including winter.

At 9:30 back to the office for purpose of signing reports, etc., and at 10 o'clock check out cashier. Balance of evening is then spent in office in preparation of following day's newspaper ads, and in laying out my work for the following day.—C. L. Hollister, Manager, Babcock and Temple, Wellsville, N. Y.

JOHN W. HOWE
certainly began his career in a pit for at an early age he secured a job in an orchestra and then held positions as a featured organist in several theatres of suburban Boston and in Worcester, Mass. He played considerable New England vaudeville time as accompanist for singing and dancing acts. While the organist at the Olympia Theatre in Portsmouth, N. H., he was offered the opportunity to manage this same house, which meant a rise to him, indeed. When the Portsmouth Theatre, in the same sector is open John also takes charge of the affairs there.

is a newcomer to showbusiness, as far as theatre management is concerned. He has sung over the air and has also appeared in plays in Puerto Rico. Acting as assistant manager at the Metro Theatre in Santurce, P. R., Raul is fast learning his duties under the able guidance of our good friend Harold Winston, not so long ago from Worcester, Massachusetts. With such direction we know Raul will be doing grand work.

acts as the house manager of the Vogue Theatre in Alameda, California, where he has been situated for the past two years. Before entering this phase of his theatrical career, Paul was a rewrite man and police beat reporter for the Oakland Post-Enquirer, also working under the drama critic on numerous occasions. Moving on to Alameda he was a reporter for the Times-Star and advertising representative as well. Through this association Paul became advertising consultant for the Vogue Theatre and obtained his present post when the former manager resigned.

is the skipper of Century Circuit's Huntington Station Theatre on Long Island, New York. He was the assistant manager at the Farragut in Brooklyn, N. Y., and at the Lynbrook on Long Island, prior to attaining his present situation. Ted's educational background is a splendid one, indeed, his hard work getting for him his B.A. and M.A. degrees and he is now working to receive a Ph.D. degree. We also learn that Ted has taught Speech and English at Lehigh and New York Universities and is the author of several books.

began his work in showbusiness when he secured an usher's job at Warner's Sheboygan Theatre, Sheboygan, Wisconsin, in 1932. Several years later he was promoted to an assistant's post but resigned after a year. For two years he moved from one situation to another finally landing his present post, that of manager of the Badger Theatre in Merrill, Wisconsin, which belongs to the Adler Theatre Co. Circuit. Herb has already proven to be a worthy Round Table member, sending in many reports of his doings.

ROY HANSON
started as an usher at the Central Theatre in La Porte, Indiana, in 1933 and a year later moved to the La Porte house to act as doorman. In 1935 he joined the staff at the Roxy, which belongs to the Indiana Illinois Circuit and doing a good job there obtained the assistant managership at the Elco in Elkhart, Indiana. A promotion came his way in 1938 when he became manager of the Jefferson in Goshen, Indiana.

manages the Lane Theatre in Staten Island, New York. Previous to obtaining this post he was situated at the Strand Theatre, Great Kills, Staten Island. We anticipate hearing from you, Sam, at not too infrequent intervals on what you are doing for the box office, for the edification of our readers.

managing the Ritz Theatre in Marseilles, Illinois, has been in show business since 1935. He began as an usher, doing this work for two years and then included the duties of a janitor as well. In 1938 Frank was given an opportunity to fill a managerial spot for Gregory Circuit and then attained his present position.

began work in the theatre about ten years ago in the capacity of an usher for Fox Midwesco circuit, at the Mirth Theatre in Milwaukee, Wis. He moved to Warner's Lake Theatre the following year and then was transferred to their Downtown house. The Granada was his next point and at this house he acted as doorman and usher. Arriving at the Warner-Saxe Egyptian Theatre Elmer was promoted to assistant manager and the next year was transferred to their Modjeska Theatre. In 1938 he secured the skipper's job at the Juneau in Milwaukee, from where he now communicates.

started his theatre career at the age of 16, when he became an extra usher at the Palace Theatre, Jacksonville, Florida. Two months later he became a full-time usher, quickly being promoted to chief of service and then floor director. When the Arcade Theatre, in the same sector, was remodelled, Archie was transferred there as assistant manager and a few years later joined the ranks of managers when he became one at his present San Marco house in South Jacksonville.

was only a high school student when he entered the field of showbusiness, obtaining a job at ushering in the Pantages Empress Theatre. He transferred to the Globe and held positions of usher, chief usher, assistant manager and then manager. His next move was to Chillicothe, Mo., as organist, followed by several organ and orchestral jobs in Publix and Universal theatres. The advent of sound brought Ed back to his first love, the front of the house and since then he has been at the Liberty Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., and now is situated at the Regent, in the same city, as manager.

Asbury Park Council Suing Walter Reade

The case of the Asbury Park city council against Walter Reade, circuit operator, was scheduled to be heard Wednesday in the first Monmouth County district court. The suit seeks to oust the Reade enterprises from its tenancy of the municipally-owned boardwalk theatre, the Paramount, charging that approximately $125,000 is owed on rent for the theatre.

Mr. Reade, who operates four other theatres in Asbury Park as well as a large circuit throughout New Jersey and New York, said that he was ready to wash his hands of this often litigated problem when he learned of the city's present intentions. Mr. Reade contended that the amount in default is covered by a fund on deposit with the city in the rent guarantee fund which amounts to $110,000 in cash. He said the Riverside Holding company, the subsidiary operator of the Paramount, had incurred a loss of $300,000 in operating the house in the last 10 years.

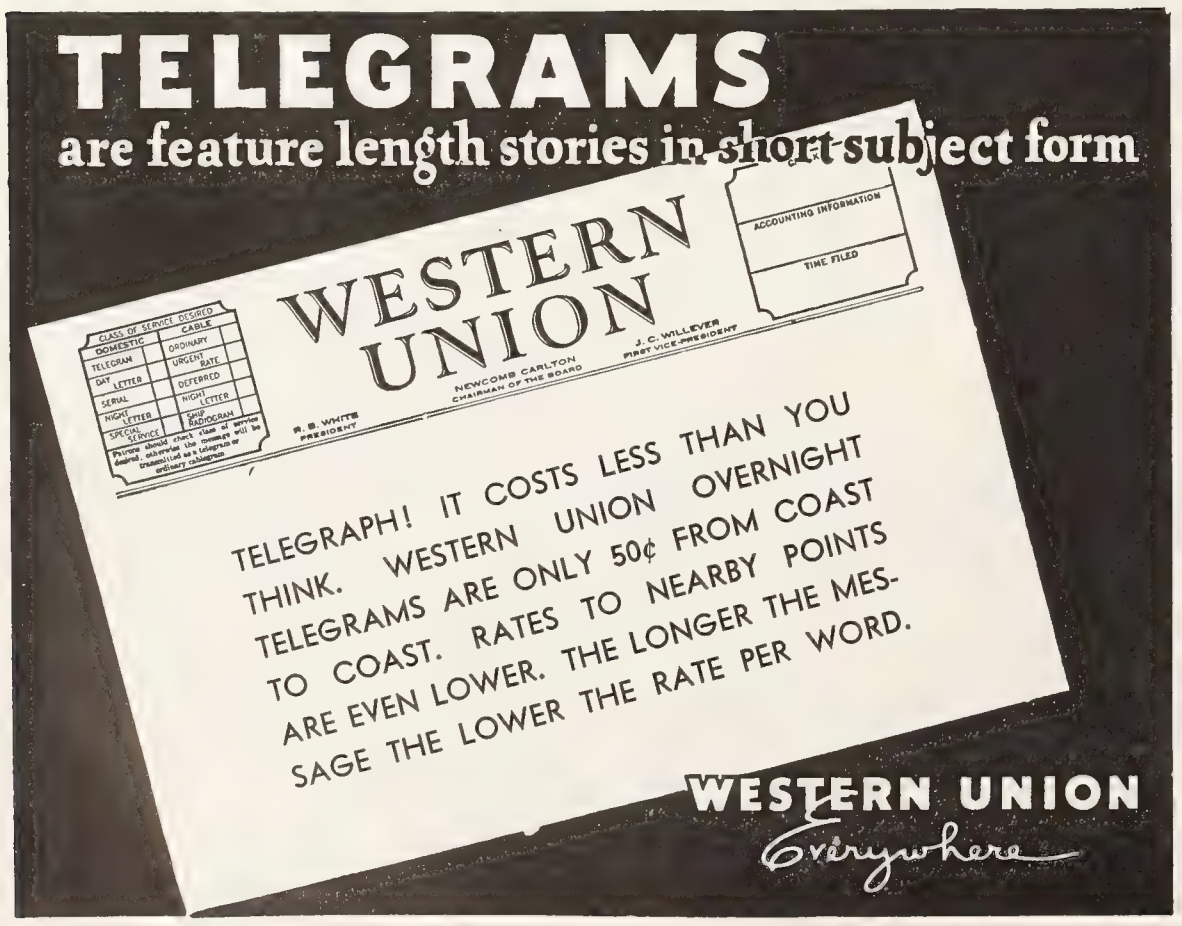
For the past three months Mr. Reade has been negotiating with the city council in an attempt to secure an adjustment of the present annual rental of $40,000, a figure which was arrived at two years ago on a downward revision of the rent from $55,000. The apparent failure of these negotiations is believed to have led to the present suit.

Approves Orpheum Report

Murray Hulbert, federal judge, has approved the final report of Peter B. Olney, Jr., referee in bankruptcy on Orpheum Theatres and has discharged Mr. Olney. The company in the proceedings was a Missouri corporation operating theatres in St. Louis. Creditors will receive 1.977-1000 per cent. Claims amounted to $2,115,233 filed and assets amounted to $27,684.

Auten Seeks Examination Of Natan Before Trial

An application was filed in New York supreme court this week by Harold Auten for an order directing Bernard Natan; president; Emil Natan, vice-president, and Marcel Hellman, sales representative of Societe Pathe Cinema, to appear for examination before trial.



Mr. Auten is defendant in a suit for $350,000 brought by the receivers of Societe Pathe Cinema on a contract under which Mr. Auten was American distributor for the company. Mr. Auten has counterclaimed for $17,500 commissions claimed due him. The application will be heard Tuesday.

Disclose Suit Against Warners

A suit against Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., brought by M. & G. Amusements, Inc., was disclosed this week when Thomas Noonan, New York supreme court justice, ordered transfer of the suit to federal court. The plaintiffs claim ownership of the film rights to the play "Sh the Octopus," authorized by Ralph Murphy and Donald Gallagher. Warners is charged with asserting conflicting claims to the play. Warners has filed an answer in which it claims that Harry A. Hollzer, federal judge, in July ruled in its favor in a suit brought against them in California by the two authors.

The suit filed by Fannie Brice against Twentieth Century-Fox and a number of Chicago exhibitors will be tried in federal court in Chicago. Charles A. Williams, superior court judge, has ordered the transfer of the suit from superior to federal court because the film company is not an Illinois corporation.

John C. Knox, federal judge, in New York this week dismissed for failure to prosecute, a suit against Warner Brothers and Vitagraph Corporation by Robbins Music Corporation. The complaint claimed the unauthorized use of the plaintiff's song, "Stairways," in a short subject.

OBITUARIES

Roy Pinkham Dies; Was Stage Manager

Roy A. Pinkham, 72, stage manager in various theatres in the state of Washington, who had watched from the wings many of the old time stars on the boards at the old Frye Opera House, died in Vashon, Wash., August 11th after a long illness. He started to work in 1883 back stage at the old Yesler Hall.

His friendships included those with Will Rogers, Lillian Russell, Robert Gillette, Chic Sale, David Warfield among others. He was a charter member of the Stage Employees Union Local No. 15. He is said to have owned one of the finest collections of old-time theatre programs and autographed pictures of former stage stars in the country.

George Wing Dies

George G. Wing, 32, assistant manager of the Great Western Stage Equipment Company in Kansas City, died there August 17th following a heart attack.

Max Fox

Max Fox, Dallas theatre man, died there August 13th. He was the former owner of the Fox and Strand.

Isaac Weiner

Isaac, father of Harry Weiner, branch manager for Columbia in Philadelphia, died August 19th in that city.

Ulric Collins

Ulric Blair Collins, 65, retired actor and theatrical business manager, who was associated with William A. Brady, the producer, for about 35 years, died at his home in New York August 17th after a long illness.

Pauline Turberg

Pauline Turberg, 61, wife of Harry Turberg, co-manager of the Palace, Northio unit, Hamilton, Ohio, died there August 19th following a prolonged illness. She also is survived by a son, Nat, manager Northio Paramount, and a brother, Harry Silver, co-manager of the Palace, in addition to other relatives.

Warners Considering More British Films

Production of two or three "big" pictures in England in addition to the smaller quota credit films is under consideration by Warner Brothers. If the company decides to make them, their production will follow the same method employed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with Hollywood talent and directors going to the Teddington studios and the scripts prepared at Burbank.

The plan will be discussed by Harry M. Warner, president, who sailed this week for London, with Sam Sax, the company's British production head. Max Milder, Warners managing director in Great Britain, also sailed for England after visiting in New York and Hollywood five weeks.

Astor Pictures will distribute "Vengeance of the Deep," now being completed.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

PROVED DEPENDABLE

THE proving period for Eastman's new negative films has been left far behind. With their special emulsion qualities reinforced by typical Kodak dependability, Plus-X, Super-XX, and Background-X are firmly established as successors to other notable Eastman films for the motion picture industry. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, Fort Lee, Chicago, Hollywood.)

EASTMAN

for general studio use
